Ky Leaves Paris For Saigon Amidst Hints Of Shakeup

Subdued Official Won't Talk Of Parley Or Hanoi Demands

PARIS (AP) — Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky left Paris for South Vietnam today in what appeared to be a subdued or even somber mood.

Onlookers wondered whether Ky's demeanor before boarding a commercial jet for the homeward trip reflected discouragement with the course of the Vietnam peace talks here, political difficulties in Saigon or perhaps a combination of both.

Ky is ordinarily loquacious, affable and far from averse to answering questions. But in the VIP lounge, he replied to queries mostly with monosyllables and faint shrugs.

Was he encouraged or discouraged with the peace talks? He shrugged and replied: "We do our best."

HOME FOR TET

The announced purpose of Ky's homeward trip is to report to President Nguyen Van Thieu and to spend Tet, the lunar new year holiday that begins Feb. 17, with South Vietnamese troops.

There has been speculation in Paris and Saigon that his trip may be connected with impending post-Tet changes in the South Vietnamese government.

Thieu and Ky are elected officials whose offices would not be affected by a cabinet shakeup. But changes could be connected with internal difficulties at high level in Saigon, possibly reflecting renewed differences between Thieu and Ky. They have clashed in the past.

RED DEMAND

There is one line of speculation, promoted by European Communist sources, that a Saigon shakeup is coming that will be connected with the demand of North Vietnam and its Viet Cong National Liberation Front ally for a "peace cabinet."

This would involve the replacement of Premier Tran Van Huong, whom the Front singles out as one of the "Thieu-Ky-Huong clique." The departure of Huong might not satisfy Hanoi and the Front, but the rumors say it would a step in that direction.

PRIVATE TALKS

On hand to bid bon voyage to Ky and his wife were U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Philip Habib, ranking expert of the American delegation, and Ambassador Pham Dang Lam, Saigon's chief negotiator.

Ky was asked whether there have been any private talks with what he calls "the other side" of the conference. He replied that "there have been no private talks up to now."

Asked to comment on this, Lodge said: "You know I never comment on such things publicly."

There have been persistent rumors of such private talks.

Narcotics Arrests In Sharp Rise

More than ten times as many Marin adults were arrested on narcotics charges last year than in 1966, Novato Police Chief Robert Di Grazia reported yesterday.

Di Grazia, secretary of the Marin County Centralized Police Services Council, said the county had 48 arrests in 1966, but the number soared to 514 last year.

"This is due in a large degree to the operation of the countywide drug abuse bureau," Di Grazia said. The bureau has intensified enforcement of

Nixon Cruises In Florida, Sets Space Scrutiny

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon took his exploration of policy and problems for his upcoming European trip onto a houseboat today and went for a cruise on Biscayne Bay.

The President decided on quick notice to take the boat ride late in the morning and left two key foreign policy advisers, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and White House Assistant Paul Kissinger, ashore.

The houseboat belongs to Nixon's old friend and confidant, C. G. (Bebe) Rebozo, who went along. The skies were mostly clear with temperatures in the mid-70s.

In an order released through the Florida White House, Nixon directed Space Advisor Lee DuBridge to examine the multibillion-dollar space program and report on possible cost cuts. He asked DuBridge also for recommendations on setting up a committee to examine the outlook for the post-Man-on-the-Moon era with regard to scope and direction.

Probation Officer Recruiting Plans Contradicted By Law?

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Marin County Administrator Alan Bruce's program for recruiting and hiring a new chief probation officer to replace Walter H. Busher is up against one rather major difficulty: the law provides it must be done another way.

Bruce announced yesterday how he plans to go about recruiting for the job, which will become vacant when Busher's resignation takes effect June 30 — or sooner, if Busher desires to leave before that date.

Bruce said the job will be open to both county employees and outsiders. He said recruiting may be nationwide, but "I think the emphasis should be in California." He said it would not be limited to Marin County.

Section 24001 of the California Government Code provides that, with certain exceptions, "a person is not eligible to a county or district office, unless at the time of his election or appointment he is . . . an elector of the county or district in which the duties of the office are to be exercised." The preceding section lists county offices covered by this requirement, and ends the list with "such other offices as are provided by law."

Section 575 of the Welfare and Institutions Code says: "There shall be in each county the offices of probation officer, assistant probation officer, and deputy probation officer. A probation

TRAIL OR WATERFALL?

Winter rains and a Marin Municipal Water District drainage pipe have combined to wash out the Dipsea Trail stairs between Edgewood and Hazel avenues, making it nearly impassable for David Squires, 7, of 109 Hazel Avenue, and his friend, who use the stairs to catch their school buses on Edgewood Avenue. Residents have complained to Mill Valley city officials, who sympathize but say they do not have the $15,000 necessary to fix the steps. (Independent-Journal photo)

Youth Ruled Innocent In Novatan's Shooting

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A 29-year-old San Francisco man, charged with the involuntary manslaughter of Sp/4 Harry James Smiley of Novato, was found innocent yesterday by Superior Court Judge Harry J. Neubarth.

The man, Floyd Richard, had waived a jury trial and submitted his case before Neubarth based on the police report of the Dec. 22 incident.

Smiley was killed when the gun of San Francisco police officer Norbert Gutierrez accidentally discharged during a fight between Gutierrez and Richard.

Officers testified earlier that they had stopped Smiley, Richard and a third man, Herbert J. Fraser, 26, of San Francisco, for questioning be-

Oil Well Leak Stopped; Mass Cleanup To Begin

Southern Coast On Alert Still

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — An underwater oilwell finally was capped today by a massive dose of mud after it had coated more than 30 miles of beaches and harbors with gummy black slick and caused untold harm to wildlife.

Spokesmen for the federal government and Union Oil Co. of Calif. said the 21,000-gallons-a-day flow from the undersea well six miles offshore finally was controlled late last night and plugged with cement this morning. The slick for a time covered 800 square miles since it began to spread 12 days ago.

"It's under control and not leaking out," said Fritz Springman, spokesman for the well's operator. Unless the cement plug should somehow fail, he said, there should be no more leakage.

SOUTH WATCHFUL

To the south, Los Angeles and Orange County boat owners and public officials studied ways to block the slow southward progress of the oil but an Interior Department spokesman said it was unlikely the slick would get that far.

Log booms and chemicals were being used to contain the oil slick, which expands or contracts according to winds, waves and the success of the containment effort.

In Los Angeles, Gov. Ronald Reagan said that President Nixon had telephoned to say he would declare the oil leak a national disaster if it would help. Reagan did not indicate what he told Nixon.

CLEANUP PLANS

Paul De Falco Jr., regional director of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration, announced an immediate massive cleanup.

Fifty men will be assigned to each mile of contaminated beach, he said. He estimated it will take the crews about three days to properly clean sandy beaches. Union, he said, will provide the work force.

"Some of the beach is going to be impossible to clean," he said. "The only way to get the oil off

Shaw Jurors Journey, Hear Witness Tell Of Hypnosis

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The jury in Clay Shaw's conspiracy trial went to the French Quarter today to watch a prosecution witness try to pinpoint an apartment where he said he heard Clay Shaw and others discuss at a 1963 party how the President could be killed.

The trip to the French Quarter was made at the request of the defense, which held Charles I. Spiesel, 50, a New York City accountant, under cross-examination during much of the morning.

Spiesel testified again today about his $16 million damage suit against a psychiatrist and the City of New York, in which he claimed he was frequently hypnotized against his will and held under hypnotic illusion.

He said yesterday that in June 1963 he met David W. Ferrie in a French Quarter bar and was taken to a party where Ferrie introduced the host as Shaw. The conversation at the party turned to President John F. Kennedy, Spiesel said, with many of the men present saying the President ought to be killed.

At one point, he said, Shaw asked Ferrie—a former airline pilot—if an assassin could be rescued from dire consequences by being flown out of the country.

"Ferrie hemmed and hawed and said, 'yes,' " Spiesel said.

Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's charge against Shaw said he conspired with Lee Harvey Oswald, Ferrie and others to kill Kennedy. Ferrie and Oswald are dead.

Spiesel was one of a series of prosecution witnesses called in an attack on the defense contention that Shaw never laid eyes on Oswald or Ferrie.

Defense attorney F. Irvin Dymond questioned him about a $16 million damage suit in which he claimed he was hypnotized, tortured mentally and forced to give up his practice as a tax accountant by New York City police.

Q. How many other people have hypnotized you?

A. Oh, it would be hard to say. . . . Oh, possibly 50 or 60.

Antiwar Airman Found Guilty, Sentence Due

BULLETIN

Airman Michael R. Locks was sentenced this afternoon to one year of hard labor, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, reduction in rank to airman basic and a bad conduct discharge by a seven-man court which deliberated nearly two hours.

Airman Michael R. Locks was convicted at a Hamilton Air Force Base court-martial yesterday for taking part in uniform in a San Francisco antiwar demonstration in October.

His sentence, which could be as much as four years in federal prison, was expected today.

The 25-year-old airman told the court after his conviction he would not do it again if he had the choice. He took the stand for the second time after the court's decision to open defense testimony aimed at lightening his sentence.

Speaking in a barely audible voice, Locks told the court, "I didn't think I was disgracing my uniform or I wouldn't have done it." He also said if he was assigned to training for Southeast Asia duty, he would not refuse to participate.

The seven-officer court took 22 minutes to find Locks guilty of two counts of wearing his uniform in the Oct. 12 demonstration and at a related television interview the night before.

The airman, who once volunteered for medical duty in Vietnam because he thought such service was "the only way I could support the military," showed no change in expression when he and his two military attorneys faced the court for the verdict. Locks' mother, in the audience, broke into tears when the verdict was announced. His father and sister remained expressionless.

During a recess after the verdict, Locks smiled and shrugged slightly to friends in the audience, then smoked nervously as his four civilian and military attorneys prepared his pre-sentence defense.

Two sergeants and a former sergeant from Locks' unit, the 349th Military Airlift Wing, testified that Locks was an outstanding military man and all three said they would still like to have him in their unit.

All three, who were Locks' former supervisors, said they did not think he should be sent to jail. M/Sgt. William J.

Reagan Hints Strongly He'll Ask Re-Election

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan is wondering if his two remaining years in office are sufficient to finish all he would like to accomplish.

He told a California Newspaper Publishers Association banquet last night that "this is not the right time" to announce his candidacy for reelection.

But he left the door more than slightly ajar.

"I'm just amateur enough not to leave a job half finished," Reagan said. "That leaves a lot to finish in the next two years."

His remarks came during a question and answer session with publishers, who with their wives numbered more than 900.

The governor continued his hard line against campus unrest, a theme he hammered upon earlier in the day in Los Angeles.

He said he declared a state of emergency at the University of California at Berkeley "to protect the rights of those who want to teach and those who want to learn."

Regarding campus unrest, the governor said: "I can tell you, so help me God, this is going to stop."

BACKS HAYAKAWA

He also said he supported action by Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, acting president of San Francisco State College, in offering striking teachers their jobs back.

Reagan noted that members of the striking American Federation of Teachers had been docked their pay and that as "first offenders" can be given their jobs back "on the basis they get back into the classroom and off the picket lines."

Earlier, in Los Angeles, Reagan said he was willing to extend the "state of extreme emergency" now in effect at Berkeley to all other state university and college campuses if so needed.

He called it the "only answer to revolutionaries . . . who want to change the social order by violence instead of the ballot box."

The governor also reaffirmed his support of capital punishment because "it is a deterrent.

"I don't know of anything I've given more thought to," he said. "I believe we have to have it until it's proven differently."

HITS BOYCOTT

Reagan attacked what he called the "distressing grape boycott" in support of a long grape pickers strike against growers in the Delano area and called for federal legislation.

"We need legislation to cover the area of collective bargaining," said Reagan, so that workers "are free from reprisal" and the rights of growers are protected.

Reagan, who has opposed state withholding tax, said he would not "have a closed mind" to a state tax reform package which included withholding tax.

"But, I can't foresee anything that will change my mind about reservations about it," he added.

The governor called for the publishers to assist him in a statewide campaign against illegal drug use, calling it "a deliberate assault on our youth."

He urged publishers to start a strong educational program on the dangers of narcotics addiction.

"I pledge you every support of the state government in the fight," Reagan added.

Reagan Loses Majority With Veneman Departure

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan is without a working majority of Republicans in both the Assembly and Senate today and faces the chance of losing the Assembly back to the Democrats.

Republican Assemblyman John G. Veneman of Modesto will leave soon to become President Nixon't undersecretary of health, education and welfare.

That leaves the GOP with a 40-39 edge in the 80-member Assembly, with 41 votes needed to pass most bills. A special election to fill the Veneman vacancy, to be called by Reagan, can't be held for at least six weeks.

With Reagan's campaign help, Republicans won a 41-39 majority in the Nov. 8 election and took over organization of the Assembly and its key committees when the 1969 session opened in January.

A Reagan administration spokesman said today he thought most of Reagan's Creative Society bills could get through the Assembly even if Democrats captured Veneman's seat. Former Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, earlier said he would not try to force a reorganization of the Assembly in the event of a 40-40 deadlock.

"I don't think it will make that much difference," said the official, who asked not to be quoted by name.

But he said there would be "a whole new ball game" should Democrats win a second potential Assembly seat.

Two Republican assemblymen, Newton Russell of Tujunga and Patrick D. McGee of Van Nuys, have announced plans to run for the U.S. House seat vacated when Reagan appointed former Rep. Ed Reinecke as lieutenant governor.

Should one of them win Reinecke's seat, Reagan would have to call another special election to fill an Assembly vacancy.

POVERTY WAR NOT DEAD, FINCH SAYS

New HEW Chief Warns 'Great Society' Operations May Be Shuffled Around

WASHINGTON (AP) — Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch has indicated the Nixon administration will keep the embattled Office of Economic Opportunity instead of trying to junk it as many Democrats fear.

Finch, however, made no promise in a broad ranging news conference yesterday and indicated there will be an attempt to change the name of some programs or shift them to other agencies.

Finch's comments were made in advance of a meeting of the President's new Urban Affairs Council, called today specifically to hear the health, education and welfare secretary's recommendations on the future of OEO.

"The sense of my colleagues on the council," Finch said, "is not for a total dismantling of OEO."

The secretary also made a reference to a "feeling" on Capitol Hill against dismantling the agency that spearheaded Lyndon Johnson's war on poverty.

Many Democratic members of Congress have warned the administration it faces a stiff fight if it tries to tamper too much the Great Society's chief instrument.

Finch said he hoped his recommendations would be made public so "Congress can fight over them."

Just when this would be was uncertain with Congress in a 10-day recess and many members out of town. It was considered unlikely that the administration would make any recommendations public without first informing key committee chairmen which sources say it has not done yet.

Certain programs of the OEO came in for severe congressional criticism after hearings last year disclosed that two Chicago street gangs had been the recipients of a $1 million grant in an experimental project.

Finch said most of the recommendations would generally follow President Nixon's task force on welfare problems made last December.

Under these recommendations, the preschool education program Head Start would be "spun off" to existing departments but Finch said he was not prepared to say which department.

This is one long-rumored change in particular that some congressmen have vowed to oppose.

No Acquittal Expected In Sirhan Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conviction of manslaughter is the best the defense can expect for Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, says his chief attorney, Grant B. Cooper.

Cooper was questioning a prospective alternate juror yesterday when he remarked that a defense claim of diminished capacity on Sirhan's part "could not result in a verdict of not guilty."

Questioned by newsmen after court, Cooper said the only possible verdicts are first or second-degree murder or manslaughter.

In California, first-degree murder carries a penalty of life imprisonment or death at discretion of the jury. Second-degree murder calls for five years to life; manslaughter one to 15 years.

Sirhan, 24, a Jordanian who came to this country as a boy, is on trial charged with murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy last June. The defense, by its questioning of jurors, has indicated several times it plans to base its case on diminished capacity, a defense reinforced in California by several decisions since 1949 but little known outside the state. The contention holds that an otherwise sane person may have diminished responsibility for a violent act because of certain influences.

While the jury of eight men and four women was sworn in this week, six alternate jurors remain to be picked. Yesterday was another day of questioning and excusing prospects—10 of them, altogether. Five persons have been tentatively seated. Testimony will not start until the alternates are sworn in.

Sirhan smiled broadly at his mother, Mary, and brother, Munir, 21, when he saw them seated in a back row of the courtroom. At other times he seemed alternately solemn and in high spirits.

Ex-Freedom Rider To Be Finch's Aide?

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Farmer, former national director of the Congress of Racial Equality and a supporter of Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey for president, is slated for a key post in the Nixon administration.

Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch disclosed yesterday that he plans to name Farmer, 49, to a post with far-reaching responsibilities in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He did not specify the position.

Farmer is the first Negro named to a major post in the Nixon administration. Finch himself has said other prominent Negroes have turned down offers because they feared criticism.

Farmer resigned three years ago as head of CORE, a civil rights group that was in the vanguard of the struggle for Negro equality in the South during the early 1960s. In 1961 he led the Freedom Rides, which sometimes received violent receptions from Southern whites.

Last year he ran for Congress on the Republican-Liberal ticket in the heavily Negro Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn, N.Y. He lost to Mrs. Shirley Chisholm, a Democrat and the first black woman ever elected to Congress.

Author Cited In Ray Case

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle cited author William Bradford Huie for contempt of court yesterday, then rebuked Huie during a hearing on motions to permit photos and further interviews in the James Earl Ray case.

Battle will hear the March 3 trial of Ray, charged with murdering Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The judge has issued stringent orders prohibiting pretrial publicity.

Huie, Ray's biographer and the recipient of a 20,000-word manuscript written by Ray in jail, was arrested as he emerged from an appearance before the Shelby County grand jury in which he is reported to have discussed the Ray papers.

He posted $1,000 cash bond pending a contempt trial.

Battle said he had asked Huie not to publish a series of stories in Look magazine prior to the trial. He pointed out that two stories ran last fall when Ray was first scheduled for trial and a third is about to run. He said he believes all violate the order limiting pretrial discussion of the case. Huie wrote that Ray was part of a conspiracy.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Soldiers Drown

BISSAU, Portuguese Guinea (AP) — Military authorities reported today 47 Portuguese soldiers drowned when their raft sank while crossing a river. The communique did not say when the disaster occurred.

The raft sank while crossing the River Corubal.

Panthers In Court

SAN FRANCISCO — (UPI) — Black Panther George M. Murray, pivotal figure in the dispute at San Francisco State, must appear in court Valentine's Day for possible revocation of his probation.

Municipal Judge Albert Axelrod ruled yesterday in a tense courtroom packed with Murray's supporters that he and Jack Alexis, also a black student leader in the strike, were still on probation when arrested last month in connection with campus disturbances.

He ordered the two men to return Feb. 14 to show cause why the probation should not be revoked.

He allowed the two men to remain at liberty until their next hearing.

Murray also faces a charge of gun possession in San Mateo County. Arraignment on that charge was postponed last Monday by a Redwood City municipal court judge because of yesterday's hearing.

Hijack Case Out

HONOLULU (UPI) — A federal judge yesterday dismissed charges against Archie E. Evans, Portland, Ore., who was arrested in connection with an alleged hijacking threat aboard a United Airlines jetliner over the Pacific.

Judge Martin Pence cleared Evans of an FBI charge that he "imparted false information regarding piracy of an aircraft."

U.S. Attorney Yoshimi Hayashi, who recommended to Pence that Evans be cleared, said the hijacking report was the result of a "stupid joke."

McNamara In Africa

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Robert S. McNamara, president of the World Bank, arrived here today to conclude a financial aid agreement with Senegal. He is due to visit the Ivory Coast and the Congo Democratic Republic next week.

Fort Ord Bomb

FORD ORD (AP) — A bomb exploded in the post theater last night, injuring six people, authorities said.

Witnesses said they heard a tremendous boom but saw no fire when the bomb went off under a seat.

Sitting in the seat was Pvt. Curtis Chiang, 24, of Hawaii, who was taken to the post hospital with a severe foot injury.

Three other soldiers, all friends of Chiang in advanced infantry training, were slightly injured, as was the wife of a soldier and her 13-year-old daughter. All were treated for minor cuts and released.

Officers said the bomb was apparently made of pipe about 10 inches long and had a timing device.

The theater was crowded with 400 person. There was no panic.

Khan Re-Elected

KARACHI (AP) — President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan was re-elected head of his ruling Muslim League party at a meeting in Dacca without opposition, Associated Press of Pakistan said today.

Street demonstrations against the president continued yesterday in Dacca and Lahore, where former Foreign Minister Zulkifar Ali Bhutto threatened to starve himself unless the president lifts the state of emergency in Pakistan under which Bhutto was jailed Nov. 13.

Second Look At SST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe hopes to have by mid-March recommendations for President Nixon on the future of the controversial, multimillion dollar supersonic airliner program.

The government already has invested more than $500 million in developing the airliner. But former President Lyndon B. Johnson's budget for fiscal 1970 omitted any request for SST funds, leaving any decision to the Nixon administration.

Boycott Spreads

OSLO (UPI) — Grapes from California will not be unloaded in Norwegian ports, the Norwegian Transport Workers Union announced today.

Pot Party Raided

NEW YORK (AP) — Police raiders broke up what they described as a mass "pot party" at a private home in Queens early today. They seized 108 young people, including 68 between the ages of 10 and 15, and confiscated a quantity of weapons.

Moscow Warned

BOLOGNA, Italy (UPI) — Italian Communist leader Luigi Longo opened his party's 12th congress today with a strong denunciation of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia and warned Moscow against overthrowing the Czech leadership.

A four-man delegation by Central Commitee Secretary Boris N. Ponomarev and representatives of 41 other Communist parties from throughout the world also heard the 68-year-old secretary of the West's largest Communist party call for communism's independence of the Kremlin in a speech that brought cheers from the congress' 900 Italian delegates.

Gun Ring Smashed

CONCORD (UPI) — Police today had recovered 170 stolen guns worth $30,000.

Acting on a tip, 18 law officers yesterday raided a Concord gas station and arrested two men and a juvenile girl.

Police said the weapons were part of 500 firearms stolen Sunday from the Traders Sporting Goods Store in San Leandro.

The two men, John F. Haley, 20, Concord, and Richard S. Bouschey, 24, Oakland, were charged with possession of stolen property.

Brazil Crackdown

RIO DE JANIERO (AP) — President Arthur da Costa e Silva has tightened his grip on Brazil, recessing legislatures of five states indefinitely and purging 33 legislators.

Warplane Crashes

KANASAWA, Japan (AP) — A Japanese air force F104J jet fighter crashed today in a densely populated area near this western Japanese city, starting a fire that killed four persons and restroyed 14 homes.

Police Duck Snowballs After Raid On Campus Pornography Forum

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Angry students pelted police with snowballs at the University of Notre Dame yesterday after plainclothes officers confiscated a film being shown as part of a conference on pornography and censorhip.

Student sponsors canceled the six-day conference which was to have ended Monday with a discussion of the question: "Has this entire conference changed your ideas on pornography and censorship?"

Sheriff's officers led by Prosecutor William E. Voor Jr. rushed into Nieuwland Science Hall where about 200 students were waiting to watch a film titled "Kodak Ghost Poem."

Cathy Cecil said police seized the film as she was attempting to hide it under her dress. Miss Cecil, who said she was dragged down stairs by police, is a student at St. Mary's College, adjacent to the 7,200-student all-male Notre Dame. Both are Roman Catholic schools.

Students said that during scuffling in a hall a riot-control chemical was sprayed.

Voor said there were no arrests and no charges filed. He said police were on the campus at the request of the university.

After police left, about 300 students gathered for a march downtown to the courthouse where the film was taken. However, they disbanded after agreeing to meet today to plan further action.

A group of faculty members signed a statement saying, "The academic freedom of the university has been violated by the intrusion of the local police on campus.

"We endorse our students' efforts to study the issues of censorship and art, and we deplore the attempt of local police to censor the subjects we investigate in our academic conferences."

F. Richard Rembusch, Student Union president, said the rest of the conference was halted "in an effort to restore peace to the Notre Dame community." He said there was no pressure from the university.

On Thursday night, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, banned films planned for the conference along with an art show of nude paintings and sculptures.

Notre Dame "has no intention of being used for the showing of hard-core pornography although we certainly have no objection to a serious discussion of pornography, which is a great problem in our day," Father Hesburgh said.

He said students broke a pledge not to show a film declared pornographic by courts of two states. He said phone calls were received from two girls who protested the first showing of films.

Father Hesburgh could not be reached for comment last night.

John Mroz, of Osterville, Mass., conference leader, said the art materials were shipped back to New York yesterday. He added, "We made a mistake in not previewing the films."

Reagan Hints Strongly He'll Ask Re-Election

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan is wondering if his two remaining years in office are sufficient to finish all he would like to accomplish.

He told a California Newspaper Publishers Association banquet last night that "this is not the right time" to announce his candidacy for re-election.

But he left the door more than slightly ajar.

"I'm just amateur enough not to leave a job half finished," Reagan said. "That leaves a lot to finish in the next two years."

His remarks came during a question and answer session with publishers, who with their wives numbered more than 900.

The governor continued his hard line against campus unrest, a theme he hammered upon earlier in the day in Los Angeles.

He said he declared a state of emergency at the University of California at Berkeley "to protect the rights of those who want to teach and those who want to learn."

Regarding campus unrest, the governor said: "I can tell you, so help me God, this is going to stop."

BACKS HAYAKAWA

He also said he supported action by Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, acting president of San Francisco State College, in offering striking teachers their jobs back.

Reagan noted that members of the striking American Federation of Teachers had been docked their pay and that as "first offenders" can be given their jobs back "on the basis they get back into the classroom and off the picket lines."

Earlier, in Los Angeles, Reagan said he was willing to extend the "state of extreme emergency" now in effect at Berkeley to all other state university and college campuses if so needed.

He called it the "only answer to revolutionaries . . . who want to change the social order by violence instead of the ballot box."

The governor also reaffirmed his support of capital punishment because "it is a deterrent.

"I don't know of anything I've given more thought to," he said. "I believe we have to have it until it's proven differently."

HITS BOYCOTT

Reagan attacked what he called the "distressing grape boycott" in support of a long grape pickers strike against growers in the Delano area and called for federal legislation.

"We need legislation to cover the area of collective bargaining," said Reagan, so that workers "are free from reprisal" and the rights of growers are protected.

Reagan, who has opposed state withholding tax, said he would not "have a closed mind" to a state tax reform package which included withholding tax.

"But, I can't foresee anything that will change my mind about reservations about it," he added.

The governor called for the publishers to assist him in a statewide campaign against illegal drug use, calling it "a deliberate assault on our youth."

He urged publishers to start a strong educational program on the dangers of narcotics addiction.

"I pledge you every support of the state government in the fight," Reagan added.

Reagan Loses Majority With Veneman Departure

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan is without a working majority of Republicans in both the Assembly and Senate today and faces the chance of losing the Assembly back to the Democrats.

Republican Assemblyman John G. Veneman of Modesto will leave soon to become President Nixon't undersecretary of health, education and welfare.

That leaves the GOP with a 40-39 edge in the 80-member Assembly, with 41 votes needed to pass most bills. A special election to fill the Veneman vacancy, to be called by Reagan, can't be held for at least six weeks.

With Reagan's campaign help, Republicans won a 41-39 majority in the Nov. 8 election and took over organization of the Assembly and its key committees when the 1969 session opened in January.

A Reagan administration spokesman said today he thought most of Reagan's Creative Society bills could get through the Assembly even if Democrats captured Veneman's seat. Former Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, earlier said he would not try to force a reorganization of the Assembly in the event of a 40-40 deadlock.

"I don't think it will make that much difference," said the official, who asked not to be quoted by name.

But he said there would be "a whole new ball game" should Democrats win a second potential Assembly seat.

Two Republican assemblymen, Newton Russell of Tujunga and Patrick D. McGee of Van Nuys, have announced plans to run for the U.S. House seat vacated when Reagan appointed former Rep. Ed Reinecke as lieutenant governor.

Should one of them win Reinecke's seat, Reagan would have to call another special election to fill an Assembly vacancy.

POVERTY WAR NOT DEAD, FINCH SAYS

New HEW Chief Warns 'Great Society' Operations May Be Shuffled Around

WASHINGTON (AP) — Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch has indicated the Nixon administration will keep the embattled Office of Economic Opportunity instead of trying to junk it as many Democrats fear.

Finch, however, made no promise in a broad ranging news conference yesterday and indicated there will be an attempt to change the name of some programs or shift them to other agencies.

Finch's comments were made in advance of a meeting of the President's new Urban Affairs Council, called today specifically to hear the health, education and welfare secretary's recommendations on the future of OEO.

"The sense of my colleagues on the council," Finch said, "is not for a total dismantling of OEO."

The secretary also made a reference to a "feeling" on Capitol Hill against dismantling the agency that spearheaded Lyndon Johnson's war on poverty.

Many Democratic members of Congress have warned the administration it faces a stiff fight if it tries to tamper too much the Great Society's chief instrument.

Finch said he hoped his recommendations would be made public so "Congress can fight over them."

Just when this would be was uncertain with Congress in a 10-day recess and many members out of town. It was considered unlikely that the administration would make any recommendations public without first informing key committee chairmen which sources say it has not done yet.

Certain programs of the OEO came in for severe congressional criticism after hearings last year disclosed that two Chicago street gangs had been the recipients of a $1 million grant in an experimental project.

Finch said most of the recommendations would generally follow President Nixon's task force on welfare problems made last December.

Under these recommendations, the preschool education program Head Start would be "spun off" to existing departments but Finch said he was not prepared to say which department.

This is one long-rumored change in particular that some congressmen have vowed to oppose.

No Acquittal Expected In Sirhan Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conviction of manslaughter is the best the defense can expect for Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, says his chief attorney, Grant B. Cooper.

Cooper was questioning a prospective alternate juror yesterday when he remarked that a defense claim of diminished capacity on Sirhan's part "could not result in a verdict of not guilty."

Questioned by newsmen after court, Cooper said the only possible verdicts are first or second-degree murder or manslaughter.

In California, first-degree murder carries a penalty of life imprisonment or death at discretion of the jury. Second-degree murder calls for five years to life; manslaughter one to 15 years.

Sirhan, 24, a Jordanian who came to this country as a boy, is on trial charged with murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy last June. The defense, by its questioning of jurors, has indicated several times it plans to base its case on diminished capacity, a defense reinforced in California by several decisions since 1949 but little known outside the state. The contention holds that an otherwise sane person may have diminished responsibility for a violent act because of certain influences.

While the jury of eight men and four women was sworn in this week, six alternate jurors remain to be picked. Yesterday was another day of questioning and excusing prospects—10 of them, altogether. Five persons have been tentatively seated. Testimony will not start until the alternates are sworn in.

Sirhan smiled broadly at his mother, Mary, and brother, Munir, 21, when he saw them seated in a back row of the courtroom. At other times he seemed alternately solemn and in high spirits.

To Meet Tuesday

The Tiburon Planning Commission will hold a study session at 8 p.m. Tuesday to consider the proposed sign ordinance and the downtwon plan feasibility study. The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported the meeting date in a story Wednesday.

Ex-Freedom Rider To Be Finch's Aide?

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Farmer, former national director of the Congress of Racial Equality and a supporter of Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey for president, is slated for a key post in the Nixon administration.

Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch disclosed yesterday that he plans to name Farmer, 49, to a post with far-reaching responsibilities in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He did not specify the position.

Farmer is the first Negro named to a major post in the Nixon administration. Finch himself has said other prominent Negroes have turned down offers because they feared criticism.

Farmer resigned three years ago as head of CORE, a civil rights group that was in the vanguard of the struggle for Negro equality in the South during the early 1960s. In 1961 he led the Freedom Rides, which sometimes received violent receptions from Southern whites.

Last year he ran for Congress on the Republican-Liberal ticket in the heavily Negro Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn, N.Y. He lost to Mrs. Shirley Chisholm, a Democrat and the first black woman ever elected to Congress.

Author Cited In Ray Case

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle cited author William Bradford Huie for contempt of court yesterday, then rebuked Huie during a hearing on motions to permit photos and further interviews in the James Earl Ray case.

Battle will hear the March 3 trial of Ray, charged with murdering Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The judge has issued stringent orders prohibiting pretrial publicity.

Huie, Ray's biographer and the recipient of a 20,000-word manuscript written by Ray in jail, was arrested as he emerged from an appearance before the Shelby County grand jury in which he is reported to have discussed the Ray papers.

He posted $1,000 cash bond pending a contempt trial.

Battle said he had asked Huie not to publish a series of stories in Look magazine prior to the trial. He pointed out that two stories ran last fall when Ray was first scheduled for trial and a third is about to run. He said he believes all violate the order limiting pretrial discussion of the case. Huie wrote that Ray was part of a conspiracy.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Soldiers Drown

BISSAU, Portuguese Guinea (AP) — Military authorities reported today 47 Portuguese soldiers drowned when their raft sank while crossing a river. The communique did not say when the disaster occurred.

The raft sank while crossing the River Corubal.

Panthers In Court

SAN FRANCISCO — (UPI) — Black Panther George M. Murray, pivotal figure in the dispute at San Francisco State, must appear in court Valentine's Day for possible revocation of his probation.

Municipal Judge Albert Axelrod ruled yesterday in a tense courtroom packed with Murray's supporters that he and Jack Alexis, also a black student leader in the strike, were still on probation when arrested last month in connection with campus disturbances.

He ordered the two men to return Feb. 14 to show cause why the probation should not be revoked.

He allowed the two men to remain at liberty until their next hearing.

Murray also faces a charge of gun possession in San Mateo County. Arraignment on that charge was postponed last Monday by a Redwood City municipal court judge because of yesterday's hearing.

Hijack Case Out

HONOLULU (UPI) — A federal judge yesterday dismissed charges against Archie E. Evans, Portland, Ore., who was arrested in connection with an alleged hijacking threat aboard a United Airlines jetliner over the Pacific.

Judge Martin Pence cleared Evans of an FBI charge that he "imparted false information regarding piracy of an aircraft."

U.S. Attorney Yoshimi Hayashi, who recommended to Pence that Evans be cleared, said the hijacking report was the result of a "stupid joke."

McNamara In Africa

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Robert S. McNamara, president of the World Bank, arrived here today to conclude a financial aid agreement with Senegal. He is due to visit the Ivory Coast and the Congo Democratic Republic next week.

Fort Ord Bomb

FORD ORD (AP) — A bomb exploded in the post theater last night, injuring six people, authorities said.

Witnesses said they heard a tremendous boom but saw no fire when the bomb went off under a seat.

Sitting in the seat was Pvt. Curtis Chiang, 24, of Hawaii, who was taken to the post hospital with a severe foot injury.

Three other soldiers, all friends of Chiang in advanced infantry training, were slightly injured, as was the wife of a soldier and her 13-year-old daughter. All were treated for minor cuts and released.

Officers said the bomb was apparently made of pipe about 10 inches long and had a timing device.

The theater was crowded with 400 person. There was no panic.

Khan Re-Elected

KARACHI (AP) — President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan was re-elected head of his ruling Muslim League party at a meeting in Dacca without opposition, Associated Press of Pakistan said today.

Street demonstrations against the president continued yesterday in Dacca and Lahore, where former Foreign Minister Zulkifar Ali Bhutto threatened to starve himself unless the president lifts the state of emergency in Pakistan under which Bhutto was jailed Nov. 13.

Second Look At SST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe hopes to have by mid-March recommendations for President Nixon on the future of the controversial, multimillion dollar supersonic airliner program.

The government already has invested more than $500 million in developing the airliner. But former President Lyndon B. Johnson's budget for fiscal 1970 omitted any request for SST funds, leaving any decision to the Nixon administration.

OSLO (UPI) — Grapes from California will not be unloaded in Norwegian ports, the Norwegian Transport Workers Union announced today.

Pot Party Raided

NEW YORK (AP) — Police raiders broke up what they described as a mass "pot party" at a private home in Queens early today. They seized 108 young people, including 68 between the ages of 10 and 15, and confiscated a quantity of weapons.

Moscow Warned

BOLOGNA, Italy (UPI) — Italian Communist leader Luigi Longo opened his party's 12th congress today with a strong denunciation of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia and warned Moscow against overthrowing the Czech leadership.

A four-man delegation by Central Commitee Secretary Boris N. Ponomarev and representatives of 41 other Communist parties from throughout the world also heard the 68-year-old secretary of the West's largest Communist party call for communism's independence of the Kremlin in a speech that brought cheers from the congress' 900 Italian delegates.

Gun Ring Smashed

CONCORD (UPI) — Police today had recovered 170 stolen guns worth $30,000.

Acting on a tip, 18 law officers yesterday raided a Concord gas station and arrested two men and a juvenile girl.

Police said the weapons were part of 500 firearms stolen Sunday from the Traders Sporting Goods Store in San Leandro.

The two men, John F. Haley, 20, Concord, and Richard S. Bouschey, 24, Oakland, were charged with possession of stolen property.

KANASAWA, Japan (AP) — A Japanese air force F104J jet fighter crashed today in a densely populated area near this western Japanese city, starting a fire that killed four persons and restroyed 14 homes.

Police Duck Snowballs After Raid On Campus Pornography Forum

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Angry students pelted police with snowballs at the University of Notre Dame yesterday after plainclothes officers confiscated a film being shown as part of a conference on pornography and censorhip.

Student sponsors canceled the six-day conference which was to have ended Monday with a discussion of the question: "Has this entire conference changed your ideas on pornography and censorship?"

Sheriff's officers led by Prosecutor William E. Voor Jr. rushed into Nieuwland Science Hall where about 200 students were waiting to watch a film titled "Kodak Ghost Poem."

Cathy Cecil said police seized the film as she was attempting to hide it under her dress. Miss Cecil, who said she was dragged down stairs by police, is a student at St. Mary's College, adjacent to the 7,200-student all-male Notre Dame. Both are Roman Catholic schools.

Students said that during scuffling in a hall a riot-control chemical was sprayed.

Voor said there were no arrests and no charges filed. He said police were on the campus at the request of the university.

After police left, about 300 students gathered for a march downtown to the courthouse where the film was taken. However, they disbanded after agreeing to meet today to plan further action.

A group of faculty members signed a statement saying, "The academic freedom of the university has been violated by the intrusion of the local police on campus.

"We endorse our students' efforts to study the issues of censorship and art, and we deplore the attempt of local police to censor the subjects we investigate in our academic conferences."

F. Richard Rembusch, Student Union president, said the rest of the conference was halted "in an effort to restore peace to the Notre Dame community." He said there was no pressure from the university.

On Thursday night, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, banned films planned for the conference along with an art show of nude paintings and sculptures.

Notre Dame "has no intention of being used for the showing of hard-core pornography although we certainly have no objection to a serious discussion of pornography, which is a great problem in our day," Father Hesburgh said.

He said students broke a pledge not to show a film declared pornographic by courts of two states. He said phone calls were received from two girls who protested the first showing of films.

Father Hesburgh could not be reached for comment last night.

John Mroz, of Osterville, Mass., conference leader, said the art materials were shipped back to New York yesterday. He added, "We made a mistake in not previewing the films."

Fleet Keeps Up Pressure In Bombing

SAIGON (AP)—The U.S. Seventh Fleet is launching 100 to 125 planes daily to attack the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos despite the shortage of one carrier, American military sources said today.

Four instead of the usual five carriers operate in the waters off South Vietnam, they reported, because the nuclear-powered Enterprise was ravaged by explosions and fire in a bombing training exercise 75 miles from Pearl Harbor Jan. 14.

Despite the fact the Enterprise was laid up for at least three months of repairs, the Constellation was allowed to return to the United States last month. The Enterprise was to replace the Constellation.

"Even with less carriers, we are maintaining the intensity of our strikes over Laos by flying harder and taking fewer breaks from the war," said Vice Adm. William F. Pringle, Seventh Fleet commander.

His mention of Laos by name was unusual. The U.S Command in Saigon never comments on operations against the Ho Chi Minh trail, North Vietnam's lifeline through Laos. This is because Laos, under terms of the 1962 Geneva agreement, is officially neutral.

Terror and attempted sabotage were main developments in the absence of any large scale fighting in South Vietnam yesterday. Thirty-five Vietnamese civilians were killed and 53 were wounded in 11 incidents reported by government spokesmen.

Two of the major incidents were in central Vietnam. A bus hit a mine, killing 14 and wounding 17. An explosive went off in a village market place, leaving eight dead and 30 wounded.

LOCKS

Nichols Jr., the 349th's supply supervisor, told the court, "I don't feel it (jail) would be of any advantage to either him or the United States."

The defense also presented the court with eight letters attesting to Locks' character. One, from a Santa Clara probation officer who is a friend of the airman's family, recommended against imprisonment. Another, from his former high school counselor in San Jose, described him as an outstanding student, a former student body president, a letterman in football, basketball, baseball and swimming and former head of the California Scholarship Association.

The prosecution called Locks' commanding and executive officers to testify in favor of a stiff sentence. The 349th was called to active duty at Hamilton during the Pueblo crisis in January of 1968 and is due to be released in June.

Locks, who formerly lived in San Anselmo but now lives in Richmond, testified for 30 minutes in his own defense before the verdict yesterday morning but was not allowed to challenge the constitutionality of the Air Force order.

His attorneys had repeatedly sought to argue that the order, issued Oct. 10, two days before the demonstration, was a violation of the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly. Col. John H. Leonard, the presiding officer, ruled, however, that the order was constitutional.

Before Leonard cut him off, Locks told the court he had knowingly violated the order because "I felt to my mind that this regulation was not constitutional."

He also said he did not think the television interview touting the next day's demonstration by "GI's for Peace" was in violation of the order or he would not have appeared on it.

Film Star To Be Guest At Luncheon

Hope Sommers, an actress noted for her "screaming" roles in movies, will entertain an American Cancer Society dinner at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Sabella's restaurant, Mill Valley.

She has screeched her way through "Rosemary's Baby," "Homicidal" and other horror movies and has appeared in the Rifleman and the Andy Griffith television shows and numerous commercials.

Ex-newspaperman Paul Speegle, a straw hat band from San Francisco's Red Garter, the La Rocca's vocal group, the Jimmy Diamond orchestra and the Pacific Jazz Band will also perform at the dinner.

Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Donald Bull at 11 Inman Avenue, Kentfield.

officer shall be appointed in every county."

The probation officer is thus made a county officer "provided by law" and there have been at least two court rulings holding him to be so. And he is not among the officers exempted from the residence requirement in Section 24001 of the Government Code.

This residence requirement prevented the Superior Court of the County of San Francisco from hiring Philip Green of Seattle as chief probation officer in 1951, after he had been selected for the job. beenselected for the job.

Bruce went on to say that after applications have been received, an examining board, including disinterested persons from outside the county, would screen and check the applicants. It would submit to the county administrator a list of the top qualified applicants, and from this list he would recommend one or more to the county board of supervisors.

The supervisors, as the appointing authority, will make the final choice, Bruce concluded.

However, the same Section 575 of the Welfare and Institutions Code which makes the probation officer an "officer provided by law" goes on to say:

"Probation officers in any county shall be nominated by the juvenile justice commission or regional juvenile justice commission of such county in such manner as the judge of the juvenile court in that county shall direct, and shall then be appointed by such judge."

There is not a word about an examining board, the county administrator or the board of supervisors entering into the process anywhere.

The juvenile justice commission is composed of Rex T. Silvernale, chairman; John L. Rockwell, Stanley R. Friese, Mrs. Malcolm Finley, Dr. William H. Pemberton, Frank Mulland, Lanny Berry, and John Donovan. They comprise the screening committee, according to the state law.

The juvenile court judge is Samuel W. Gardiner. He makes the appointment, according to state law.

Viet Valor Earns Two Officers Medals

Two Army officers now stationed at Fort Baker have been decorated for valorous actions during recent combat tours in Vietnam.

Maj. Charles L. Landers Jr. received a second oak leaf cluster to the Bronze Star Medal for heroic action while directing an air strike against the enemy while under machinegun and rocket fire.

Capt. Leland W. Svicarovich was awarded the Bronze Star for "outstandingly meritorious" service in combat.

SERVING — Airman 1/c George Kokalis, son of Mrs. Katherine Pantazes, of 112 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, is now serving as a construction equipment operator at Cam Rahn Bay, Vietnam.

lowed down here by people from the detective agencies.

Q. I asked if you had been hypnotized in New Orleans?

A. The point is, if I say yes, you're going to want to know who they are.

Q. If I promise not to ask who they are, will you say yes or no?

A. Yes, they have.

As Spiesel was questioned about his hypnotic encounters with hypnosis, Perry Raymond Russo was waiting outside the courtroom as the next state witness scheduled.

Russo, 26, is a key witness in Garrison's case. He told a preliminary hearing that, with his memory refreshed by a hypnotist, he remembered hearing Shaw, Ferrie and Oswald conspire to kill Kennedy.

Vernon Bundy, Jr., 30, a former narcotics addict, preceded Spiesel to the stand. He testified he saw Shaw meet Oswald in the summer of 1963, confer with him and give him money at the Lake Pontchartrain seawall.

Bundy said he had gone there to prepare his hypodermic needle, inject two capsules of heroin and "goof off." He said he remembered both men, and lat-remembered both men, and iater identified them from photo-might be policemen and watched them closely as they stood nearby.

Bundy then asked if he could stage a little demonstration to illustrate how he came to be convinced that Shaw was the man he saw at the seawall. "It ain't fixed," he said.

"Sure, go ahead," said Dymond.

Bundy left the witness chair and had Shaw walk the middle aisle of the crowded courtroom to the front entrance. Bundy then sat down in a chair at the defense table.

"Now, here I am on the seawall," he said. "I've got the sack with my outfit (needle) between my knees. Now, will the gentleman walk toward me?"

Shaw, looking puzzled and irritated, walked past Bundy's chair. The 6-foot-4 defendant has a slight limp—the result, he said, of a back injury received in World War II.

"Everybody see this, now," said Bundy, pointing at Shaw's feet. "This is the foot that he kicks out when he walks," said Bundy. Before Bundy left the stand, Dymond asked: "You were not completely positive the man you saw was Shaw until you saw the foot. Is that right?"

"I wasn't completely sure," Bundy replied.

Driver's Truck Sabotage Target

Five tires were punctured and a firebomb placed under the gas tank of an oil rig belonging to a Petaluma nam who crossed a Standard Oil picket line in Richmond yesterday, police reported.

Police said Ray Anderson of 812 Middlefield Drive was doing private hauling in a truck owned by C and A Trucking of Petaluma, and apparently was followed back to his home by striking oil workers. The incidents occurred there.

The fire bomb burned itself out without exploding, police said.

Sharp Temblor Hits North Coast

EUREKA (UPI) — A sharp rolling earthquake shook up a large part of Humboldt County in Northern California yesterday afternoon, but did no damage.

The quake registered 4.5 on one seismographic station's equipment and 6 on another.

The tremor lasted 10 to 15 seconds and was felt more sharply along the coast than inland.

Young Fire Victim Reported Recovering

Michael Lee, 13, of 18 Nina Drive, Novato, seriously burned in a fire Wednesday, was reported in satisfactory condition and improving today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco.

Michael was pouring gasoline on a fire in the fireplace of his home when it flashed back at him. His brother, Patrick, 15, rolled him in a blanket to extinguish the flames.

Victim Of Overdose In Good Condition

A 34-year-old Fairfax woman, who apparently took an overdose of pills, was reported in good condition today, but still under observation, in Marin General Hospital.

Georgette Ruth Oliver of 197 Piper Court took the pills, reported police, after an automobile accident on Wednesday in San Rafael.

Youngster Rescued From Steep Hillside

An ambitious 8-year-old hill climber took on a slope behind 1908 Fourth Street yesterday and ended up being rescued by the San Rafael Fire Department.

Firemen said a passerby noticed the child, Wayne D. Goldstine of 2 Neame Avenue, San Rafael, stranded on a cliff. He couldn't go any higher and he couldn't get back down, firemen said. He was not hurt.

cause they suspected that a sale of marijuana was taking place.

The police report, which was the basis of the innocent verdict, gave this account of the incident:

Gutierrez and another officer were cruising in the Fillmore District of San Francisco when they saw Smiley talking to Fraser and Richard. After the policemen stopped the trio, Richard reached quickly into his sleeve as if he had a weapon there.

Gutierrez started grappling with him with his left hand, while with his right he went for his gun. But Richard grabbed the gun hand.

While Gutierrez was struggling to free it, the gun discharged and Smiley fell, mortally wounded.

Smiley, who had been wounded in Vietnam, was on Christmas leave from Fort Ord, visiting his parents, Harry and Irene Smiley of Novato.

Municipal Court Judge Leo Friedman earlier dismissed charges of possession of marijuana and resisting arrest against Richard and Fraser, ruling that the police had no probable cause to stop and question the three men.

Mrs. Smiley, the slain youth's mother, has filed suit for $500,000 against the City of San Francisco, plus Gutierrez and B. John McKay, both members of the controversial Tactical Squad.

She accused both officers of negligently using their firearms. "We lost everything when we lost our son. I have been under medical care since," she said.

Mrs. Smiley said her son was awarded two Purple Hearts for wounds suffered while fighting in Vietnam and was involved in more than 25 combat operations against the enemy.

The suit is pending in Superior Court of San Francisco.

Unofficial estimates placed damage to beaches, harbors and boats at tens of millions of dollars. The Coast Guard said at least 191 birds, gummy with oil, had died.

All other drilling operations in the blackened Santa Barbara channel were ordered halted by the federal government yesterday.

With calming winds, little new oil flowed onto the white sandy beaches yesterday and only light amounts oozed into small boat harbors.

The Ventura marina and Santa Barbara harbor remained black and smelly, the heaviest concentration of oil six miles offshore of Santa Barbara, around the drilling platform where Union Oil workmen labored to seal the well.

Deadly Vaccines Still Not Found

San Rafael police today had no clues to the whereabouts of several vials of deadly plague and other vaccines stolen Thursday from the Permanente Clinic at 1930 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

Vials containing 18 cubic centimeters of the plague, 12 cubic centimeters of typhus, 22 cubic centimeters of tetanus and four cubic centimeters of diphtheria vaccines were taken from a refrigerator in the clinic, police said.

Marin County health officials said that since the virus is dead there is no danger of an epidemic and an ill person could not spread the disease. However, they warned that the vaccine could cause a painful death to anyone who injected it directly into the bloodstream but it would have little effect if swallowed.

OBITUARIES

Bandleader Anson Weeks Dies

SACRAMENTO (AP) — In the big dance band era, "Dancin' with Anson" was a byword.

The Anson Weeks band played at most of the country's biggest ballrooms and hotels, from the Waldorf Astoria in New York to the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles.

Among band alumni who went on to fame on their own were Bob Crosby, Xavier Cugat, Tony Martin and George Liberace.

Weeks, a native of Oakland, died yesterday. He had been in failing health in recent years but at 72 continued to lead his band as late as last week at the Sacramento Inn.

Death was attributed to emphysema, from which he had suffered for 15 years.

His band's first appearance was in Sacramento in 1923. A 1926 engagement at the Hotel Mark Hopkins in San Francisco pushed the band into the front ranks.

Survivors include the widow, Viola, and five children. Funeral services will be Monday in San Francisco.

LOUIS CASSO

Private funeral for Louis Matthew Caso of Greenbrae has been held.

Caso, 40, a newspaper advertising salesman, died at his residence at 373 Via Casitas Thursday. He is survived by his wife, Ruth.

R. C. KOLBY

Reinhard C. Kolby, 72, of 1132 East Court, Novato, died today at a local convalescent hospital after a long illness.

Kolby, a retired San Francisco fireman, had lived in Novato 13 years. Previously he lived in Sebastopol.

Survivors are his wife, Beatrice Kolby; a son, Raymond Kolby of Petaluma, and a daughter, Arleen Kolby of San Marin.

Funeral will be at 10 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Chapel of Marin, Novato. Burial will be private.

WILLIS C. LOWE

Funeral for Willis C. Lowe, father of Mrs. Patricia M. Gibbs of San Anselmo, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at the Memorial Chapels of Carew and English, Masonic and Golden Gate avenues, San Francisco.

Burial will be in Holy Cross Cemetery, Colma.

Lowe, who lived in San Rafael 60 years ago, died after a long illness in a San Francisco hospital Wednesday. He was an architect, working mainly in Oakland. He also was chief airport engineer for Pan American Airways' Orient-Africa division for several years.

A native of San Francisco, he was a Spanish-American War veteran, a member of the Society of American Military Engineers, the De Young Museum Society and Elks.

He is also survived by his wife, Viola; another daughter, Mrs. Louise Jorgensen, and two brothers, Silas and Thomas Lowe, a sister, Mrs. Myra Lippert, and two grandchildren.

JULIA NELSON

Funeral for Julia Nelson, 86, of Olema, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael. Inurnment will follow.

She died Thursday in a Marin convalescent home after a long illness. A native of England, Mrs. Nelson lived in Marin County for 55 years.

With her husband, the late Ed Nelson, Mrs. Nelson operated the Nelson Hotel in Olema until the 1940s, when she sold the business.

No immediate relatives survive.

Deputies List Seven Thefts In Rural Area

Seven burglaries were reported to the Marin County Sheriff's office yesterday.

Elma R. Lappert of 4810 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, told deputies that burglars took a transistor radio from her home between 8 a.m. and 5:40 p.m. Wednesday.

Checks valued at $470, $50 in cash and a Master Charge card were taken from the car of Mariella Sparks, 1431 Petaluma Hill Road, Santa Rosa, at 6:50 p.m. Thursday while it was parked in front of 981 Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Hugh Owens of 3000 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, said a .22-caliber rifle and a portable electric typewriter, valued at $275, were taken from his home between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

A plug-in telephone, a piggy bank and four children's games were taken from the home of Linda Scherf, 755 Bay Road, Tamalpais Valley, between 2 and 5 p.m. Jan. 31.

Two portable television sets, an adding machine and a stereo turntable, amplifier and two speakers were stolen from the residence of Mrs. E. W. Bullard, 77 Wolfe Grade, Kentfield, between 6 a.m. and 4:25 p.m. Thursday.

Nancy Downey of 622 Goodhill Road, Kent Woodlands, said burglars took a tape recorder and child's safe bank from her home between 2 and 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

An outboard motor, valued at $416, was taken from a showroom at the Golden Hinde Boatel in Inverness between 6 and 7 p.m. Thursday.

In another theft, Karen E. Greenwalt of 79 Barbaree Way, Tiburon, told deputies that someone took the window from the left door of her 1959 MG roadster between 6 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. Thursday while it was parked at 37 Rancheria Road, Kent Woodlands.

Kidnap-Rob Hearing Continued To Monday

Preliminary hearing for Daniel Thomas Stathos of Pacifica and Kenneth Lee Harnal, both 22, accused of kidnapping and robbing restaurant owner Luciano A. Sabella Nov. 24, was continued yesterday to 2 p.m. Monday.

Dist. Atty. Bruce A. Bales declined to state what occurred during proceedings yesterday after Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. barred the public and press from the courtroom on the request of the defendants.

Fleet Keeps Up Pressure In Bombing

SAIGON (AP)—The U.S. Seventh Fleet is launching 100 to 125 planes daily to attack the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos despite the shortage of one carrier, American military sources said today.

Four instead of the usual five carriers operate in the waters off South Vietnam, they reported, because the nuclear-powered Enterprise was ravaged by explosions and fire in a bombing training exercise 75 miles from Pearl Harbor Jan. 14.

Despite the fact the Enterprise was laid up for at least three months of repairs, the Constellation was allowed to return to the United States last month. The Enterprise was to replace the Constellation.

"Even with less carriers, we are maintaining the intensity of our strikes over Laos by flying harder and taking fewer breaks from the war," said Vice Adm. William F. Pringle, Seventh Fleet commander.

His mention of Laos by name was unusual. The U.S Command in Saigon never comments on operations against the Ho Chi Minh trail, North Vietnam's lifeline through Laos. This is because Laos, under terms of the 1962 Geneva agreement, is officially neutral.

Terror and attempted sabotage were main developments in the absence of any large scale fighting in South Vietnam yesterday. Thirty-five Vietnamese civilians were killed and 53 were wounded in 11 incidents reported by government spokesmen.

Two of the major incidents were in central Vietnam. A bus hit a mine, killing 14 and wounding 17. An explosive went off in a village market place, leaving eight dead and 30 wounded.

LOCKS

Nichols Jr., the 349th's supply supervisor, told the court, "I don't feel it (jail) would be of any advantage to either him or the United States."

The defense also presented the court with eight letters attesting to Locks' character. One, from a Santa Clara probation officer who is a friend of the airman's family, recommended against imprisonment. Another, from his former high school counselor in San Jose, described him as an outstanding student, a former student body president, a letterman in football, basketball, baseball and swimming and former head of the California Scholarship Association.

The prosecution called Locks' commanding and executive officers to testify in favor of a stiff sentence. The 349th was called to active duty at Hamilton during the Pueblo crisis in January of 1968 and is due to be released in June.

Locks, who formerly lived in San Anselmo but now lives in Richmond, testified for 30 minutes in his own defense before the verdict yesterday morning but was not allowed to challenge the constitutionality of the Air Force order.

His attorneys had repeatedly sought to argue that the order, issued Oct. 10, two days before the demonstration, was a violation of the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly. Col. John H. Leonard, the presiding officer, ruled, however, that the order was constitutional.

Before Leonard cut him off, Locks told the court he had knowingly violated the order because "I felt to my mind that this regulation was not constitutional."

He also said he did not think the television interview touting the next day's demonstration by "GI's for Peace" was in violation of the order or he would not have appeared on it.

officer shall be appointed in every county."

The probation officer is thus made a county officer "provided by law" and there have been at least two court rulings holding him to be so. And he is not among the officers exempted from the residence requirement in Section 24001 of the Government Code.

This residence requirement prevented the Superior Court of the County of San Francisco from hiring Philip Green of Seattle as chief probation officer in 1951, after he had been selected for the job. beenselected for the job.

Bruce went on to say that after applications have been received, an examining board, including disinterested persons from outside the county, would screen and check the applicants. It would submit to the county administrator a list of the top qualified applicants, and from this list he would recommend one or more to the county board of supervisors.

The supervisors, as the appointing authority, will make the final choice, Bruce concluded.

However, the same Section 575 of the Welfare and Institutions Code which makes the probation officer an "officer provided by law" goes on to say:

> "Probation officers in any county shall be nominated by the juvenile justice commission or regional juvenile justice commission of such county in such manner as the judge of the juvenile court in that county shall direct, and shall then be appointed by such judge."

There is not a word about an examining board, the county administrator or the board of supervisors entering into the process anywhere.

The juvenile justice commission is composed of Rex T. Silvernale, chairman; John L. Rockwell, Stanley R. Friese, Mrs. Malcolm Finley, Dr. William H. Pemberton, Frank Mulland, Lanny Berry, and John Donovan. They comprise the screening committee, according to the state law.

The juvenile court judge is Samuel W. Gardiner. He makes the appointment, according to state law.

Viet Valor Earns Two Officers Medals

Two Army officers now stationed at Fort Baker have been decorated for valorous actions during recent combat tours in Vietnam.

Maj. Charles L. Landers Jr. received a second oak leaf cluster to the Bronze Star Medal for heroic action while directing an air strike against the enemy while under machinegun and rocket fire.

Capt. Leland W. Svicarovich was awarded the Bronze Star for "outstandingly meritorious" service in combat.

SERVING — Airman 1/c George Kokalis, son of Mrs. Katherine Pantazes, of 112 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, is now serving as a construction equipment operator at Cam Rahn Bay, Vietnam.

DELEGATE — Mrs. Mary Ann Newcomb, of Bolinas, director of the Marin Child Development Center and the atypical infant development program, will be a delegate to the 12th annual Conference on Research and Teaching of Infant Development at the Merrill-Palmer Institute in Detroit Feb. 13-15.

SERVING—Quartermaster 3/c Russell G. Frazer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack G. Frazer of 308 Sunset Parkway, Novato, is serving aboard the guided missile destroyer Waddell.

GRADUATED — Harry Wolfe Humphreys, of 11 Greenfield Avenue, San Rafael, has been granted a Master of Science degree in dentistry at the St. Louis University.

SHAW

lowed down here by people from the detective agencies.

Q. I asked if you had been hypnotized in New Orleans?

A. The point is, if I say yes, you're going to want to know who they are.

Q. If I promise not to ask who they are, will you say yes or no?

A. Yes, they have.

As Spiesel was questioned about his hypnotic encounters with hypnosis, Perry Raymond Russo was waiting outside the courtroom as the next state witness scheduled.

Russo, 26, is a key witness in Garrison's case. He told a preliminary hearing that, with his memory refreshed by a hypnotist, he remembered hearing Shaw, Ferrie and Oswald conspire to kill Kennedy.

Vernon Bundy, Jr., 30, a former narcotics addict, preceded Spiesel to the stand. He testified he saw Shaw meet Oswald in the summer of 1963, confer with him and give him money at the Lake Pontchartrain seawall.

Bundy said he had gone there to prepare his hypodermic needle, inject two capsules of heroin and "goof off." He said he remembered both men, and lat-remembered both men, and iater identified them from photo-might be policemen and watched them closely as they stood nearby.

Bundy then asked if he could stage a little demonstration to illustrate how he came to be convinced that Shaw was the man he saw at the seawall. "It ain't fixed," he said.

"Sure, go ahead," said Dymond.

Bundy left the witness chair and had Shaw walk the middle aisle of the crowded courtroom to the front entrance. Bundy then sat down in a chair at the defense table.

"Now, here I am on the seawall," he said. "I've got the sack with my outfit (needle) between my knees. Now, will the gentleman walk toward me?"

Shaw, looking puzzled and irritated, walked past Bundy's chair. The 6-foot-4 defendant has a slight limp—the result, he said, of a back injury received in World War II.

"Everybody see this, now," said Bundy, pointing at Shaw's feet. "This is the foot that he kicks out when he walks," said Bundy. Before Bundy left the stand, Dymond asked: "You were not completely positive the man you saw was Shaw until you saw the foot. Is that right?"

"I wasn't completely sure," Bundy replied.

narcotics laws, the chief said, so the statistics do not necessarily point to an increase in drug use.

Arrests last year by cities were: Belvedere, 13; Corte Madera, 6; Fairfax, 41; Larkspur, 15; Mill Valley, 20; Novato, 54; San Anselmo, 22; San Rafael, 92; Sausalito, 66, and Tiburon, 19. The unincorporated area of the county led with 166 arrests.

The bureau does not supplant local police authority, but supplements the local law enforcement agencies.

The bureau operates under the administration of the five-member police services council.

Driver's Truck Sabotage Target

Five tires were punctured and a firebomb placed under the gas tank of an oil rig belonging to a Petaluma nam who crossed a Standard Oil picket line in Richmond yesterday, police reported.

Police said Ray Anderson of 812 Middlefield Drive was doing private hauling in a truck owned by C and A Trucking of Petaluma, and apparently was followed back to his home by striking oil workers. The incidents occurred there.

The fire bomb burned itself out without exploding, police said.

Sharp Temblor Hits North Coast

EUREKA (UPI) — A sharp rolling earthquake shook up a large part of Humboldt County in Northern California yesterday afternoon, but did no damage.

The quake registered 4.5 on one seismographic station's equipment and 6 on another.

The tremor lasted 10 to 15 seconds and was felt more sharply along the coast than inland.

Young Fire Victim Reported Recovering

Michael Lee, 13, of 18 Nina Drive, Novato, seriously burned in a fire Wednesday, was reported in satisfactory condition and improving today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco.

Michael was pouring gasoline on a fire in the fireplace of his home when it flashed back at him. His brother, Patrick, 15, rolled him in a blanket to extinguish the flames.

Victim Of Overdose In Good Condition

A 34-year-old Fairfax woman, who apparently took an overdose of pills, was reported in good condition today, but still under observation, in Marin General Hospital.

Georgette Ruth Oliver of 197 Piper Court took the pills, reported police, after an automobile accident on Wednesday in San Rafael.

Youngster Rescued From Steep Hillside

An ambitious 8-year-old hill climber took on a slope behind 1908 Fourth Street yesterday and ended up being rescued by the San Rafael Fire Department.

Firemen said a passerby noticed the child, Wayne D. Goldstine of 2 Neame Avenue, San Rafael, stranded on a cliff. He couldn't go any higher and he couldn't get back down, firemen said. He was not hurt.

YOUTH

cause they suspected that a sale of marijuana was taking place.

The police report, which was the basis of the innocent verdict, gave this account of the incident:

Gutierrez and another officer were cruising in the Fillmore District of San Francisco when they saw Smiley talking to Fraser and Richard. After the policemen stopped the trio, Richard reached quickly into his sleeve as if he had a weapon there.

Gutierrez started grappling with him with his left hand, while with his right he went for his gun. But Richard grabbed the gun hand.

While Gutierrez was struggling to free it, the gun discharged and Smiley fell, mortally wounded.

Smiley, who had been wounded in Vietnam, was on Christmas leave from Fort Ord, visiting his parents, Harry and Irene Smiley of Novato.

Municipal Court Judge Leo Friedman earlier dismissed charges of possession of marijuana and resisting arrest against Richard and Fraser, ruling that the police had no probable cause to stop and question the three men.

Mrs. Smiley, the slain youth's mother, has filed suit for $500,000 against the City of San Francisco, plus Gutierrez and B. John McKay, both members of the controversial Tactical Squad.

She accused both officers of negligently using their firearms. "We lost everything when we lost our son. I have been under medical care since," she said.

Mrs. Smiley said her son was awarded two Purple Hearts for wounds suffered while fighting in Vietnam and was involved in more than 25 combat operations against the enemy.

The suit is pending in Superior Court of San Francisco.

these rocks is to steam clean them."

"It was awful," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, after an aerial inspection yesterday. Muskie is chairman of a Senate subcommittee on air and water pollution holding hearings into the rupture. (See photo, page 2.)

Unofficial estimates placed damage to beaches, harbors and boats at tens of millions of dollars. The Coast Guard said at least 191 birds, gummy with oil, had died.

All other drilling operations in the blackened Santa Barbara channel were ordered halted by the federal government yesterday.

With calming winds, little new oil flowed onto the white sandy beaches yesterday and only light amounts oozed into small boat harbors.

The Ventura marina and Santa Barbara harbor remained black and smelly, the heaviest concentration of oil six miles offshore of Santa Barbara, around the drilling platform where Union Oil workmen labored to seal the well.

Deadly Vaccines Still Not Found

San Rafael police today had no clues to the whereabouts of several vials of deadly plague and other vaccines stolen Thursday from the Permanente Clinic at 1930 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

Vials containing 18 cubic centimeters of the plague, 12 cubic centimeters of typhus, 22 cubic centimeters of tetanus and four cubic centimeters of diphtheria vaccines were taken from a refrigerator in the clinic, police said.

Marin County health officials said that since the virus is dead there is no danger of an epidemic and an ill person could not spread the disease. However, they warned that the vaccine could cause a painful death to anyone who injected it directly into the bloodstream but it would have little effect if swallowed.

OBITUARIES

Bandleader Anson Weeks Dies

SACRAMENTO (AP) — In the big dance band era, "Dancin' with Anson" was a byword.

The Anson Weeks band played at most of the country's biggest ballrooms and hotels, from the Waldorf Astoria in New York to the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles.

Among band alumni who went on to fame on their own were Bob Crosby, Xavier Cugat, Tony Martin and George Liberace.

Weeks, a native of Oakland, died yesterday. He had been in failing health in recent years but at 72 continued to lead his band as late as last week at the Sacramento Inn.

Death was attributed to emphysema, from which he had suffered for 15 years.

His band's first appearance was in Sacramento in 1923. A 1926 engagement at the Hotel Mark Hopkins in San Francisco pushed the band into the front ranks.

Survivors include the widow, Viola, and five children. Funeral services will be Monday in San Francisco.

Deputies List Seven Thefts In Rural Area

Seven burglaries were reported to the Marin County Sheriff's office yesterday.

Elma R. Lappert of 4810 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, told deputies that burglars took a transistor radio from her home between 8 a.m. and 5:40 p.m. Wednesday.

Checks valued at $470, $50 in cash and a Master Charge card were taken from the car of Mariella Sparks, 1431 Petaluma Hill Road, Santa Rosa, at 6:50 p.m. Thursday while it was parked in front of 981 Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Hugh Owens of 3000 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, said a .22-caliber rifle and a portable electric typewriter, valued at $275, were taken from his home between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

A plug-in telephone, a piggy bank and four children's games were taken from the home of Linda Scherf, 755 Bay Road, Tamalpais Valley, between 2 and 5 p.m. Jan. 31.

Two portable television sets, an adding machine and a stereo turntable, amplifier and two speakers were stolen from the residence of Mrs. E. W. Bullard, 77 Wolfe Grade, Kentfield, between 6 a.m. and 4:25 p.m. Thursday.

Nancy Downey of 622 Goodhill Road, Kent Woodlands, said burglars took a tape recorder and child's safe bank from her home between 2 and 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

An outboard motor, valued at $416, was taken from a showroom at the Golden Hinde Boatel in Inverness between 6 and 7 p.m. Thursday.

In another theft, Karen E. Greenwalt of 79 Barbaree Way, Tiburon, told deputies that someone took the window from the left door of her 1959 MG roadster between 6 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. Thursday while it was parked at 37 Rancheria Road, Kent Woodlands.

Caso, 40, a newspaper advertising salesman, died at his residence at 373 Via Casitas Thursday. He is survived by his wife, Ruth.

R. C. KOLBY

Reinhard C. Kolby, 72, of 1132 East Court, Novato, died today at a local convalescent hospital after a long illness.

Kolby, a retired San Francisco fireman, had lived in Novato 13 years. Previously he lived in Sebastopol.

Survivors are his wife, Beatrice Kolby; a son, Raymond Kolby of Petaluma, and a daughter, Arleen Kolby of San Marin.

Funeral will be at 10 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Chapel of Marin, Novato. Burial will be private.

WILLIS C. LOWE

Funeral for Willis C. Lowe, father of Mrs. Patricia M. Gibbs of San Anselmo, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at the Memorial Chapels of Carew and English, Masonic and Golden Gate avenues, San Francisco.

Burial will be in Holy Cross Cemetery, Colma.

Lowe, who lived in San Rafael 60 years ago, died after a long illness in a San Francisco hospital Wednesday. He was an architect, working mainly in Oakland. He also was chief airport engineer for Pan American Airways' Orient-Africa division for several years.

A native of San Francisco, he was a Spanish-American War veteran, a member of the Society of American Military Engineers, the De Young Museum Society and Elks.

He is also survived by his wife, Viola; another daughter, Mrs. Louise Jorgensen, and two brothers, Silas and Thomas Lowe, a sister, Mrs. Myra Lippert, and two grandchildren.

JULIA NELSON

Funeral for Julia Nelson, 86, of Olema, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael. Inurnment will follow.

She died Thursday in a Marin convalescent home after a long illness. A native of England, Mrs. Nelson lived in Marin County for 55 years.

With her husband, the late Ed Nelson, Mrs. Nelson operated the Nelson Hotel in Olema until the 1940s, when she sold the business.

No immediate relatives survive.

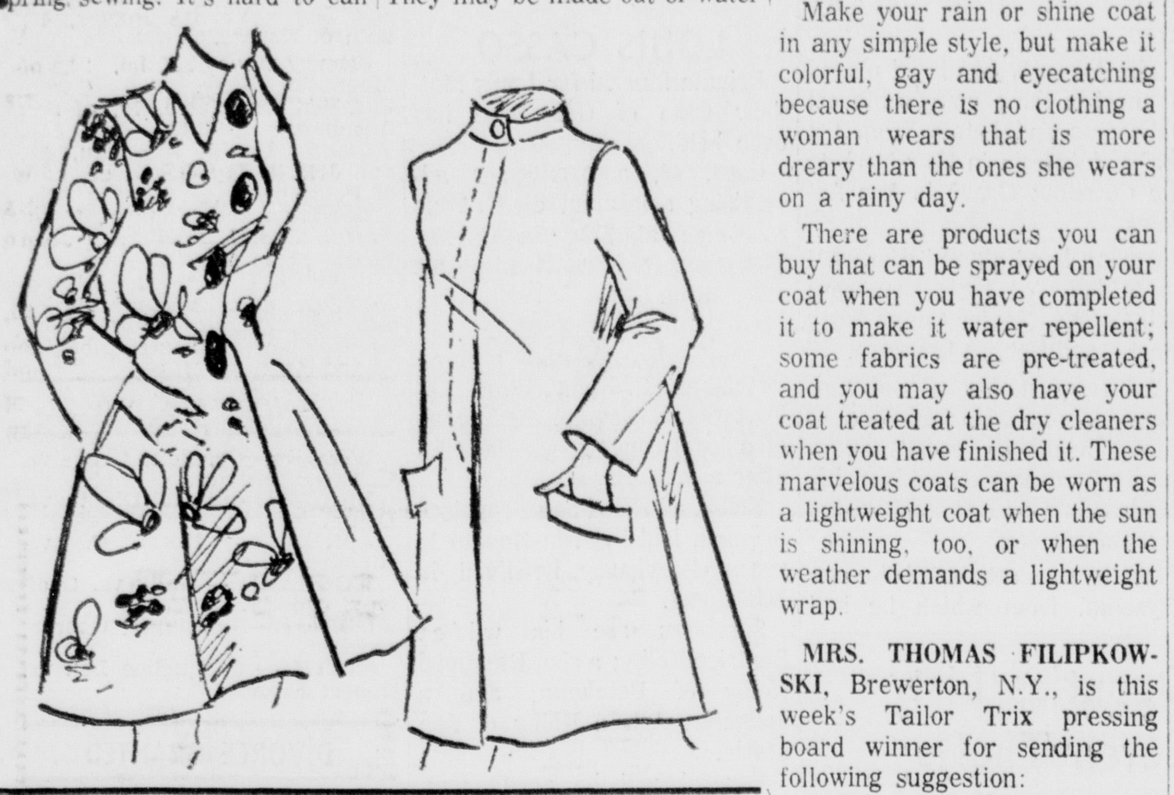
Make A Rain-Shine Coat Gay

By EUNICE FARMER



DEAR READERS:

Here's more news for your spring sewing. It's hard to call a raincoat anything that sounds glamorous, but I like to call them your "rain or shine" coats. They may be made out of water repellent moire, heavy cottons, silk and worsted Italian Silk or almost anything, for that matter.

Make your rain or shine coat in any simple style, but make it colorful, gay and eyecatching because there is no clothing a woman wears that is more dreary than the ones she wears on a rainy day.

There are products you can buy that can be sprayed on your coat when you have completed it to make it water repellent; some fabrics are pre-treated, and you may also have your coat treated at the dry cleaners when you have finished it. These marvelous coats can be worn as a lightweight coat when the sun is shining, too, or when the weather demands a lightweight wrap.

MRS. THOMAS FILIPKOWSKI, Brewerton, N.Y., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for sending the following suggestion:

"When you are making garments out of quilted material, the facings become too thick if they are cut out of the same material. I have found that by removing the machine stitching from the facings, I end up with a single layer of material which works out perfectly."

DEAR EUNICE:

I made a very heavy sleeveless dress to go with a coat ensemble and even though I eliminated the shoulder seam on the facings, the armholes look very thick and bulky, the neckline also looks too thick to me. I have tried pressing the edges and I'm still not satisfied. Is there a solution?—MRS. F. C.

DEAR MRS. F. C.:

I am glad you asked this question, because I have just examined a very heavy sleeveless dress that was quite expensive and there wasn't a facing used. Instead, the bodice was lined separately with a China silk lining. This was finished like the dress so that it would be smooth inside and hand whipped to the armholes and neckline. Before you begin sewing the lining in your dress, be sure to clip the inner curves of the armholes and neckline, baste it on the ⅝ inch seamline and press in shape.

If your fabric is the least stretchy, I would suggest machine stitching it first on the ⅝ inch seamline so that you won't pull it out of shape. You will also have to clip the same areas in your lining. When you baste or pin it in place, be sure to turn under about ⅛ inch more on the lining so that it will be slip-stitched in place slightly in from the finishing edge of your garment and consequently won't show from the right side. This makes a beautiful finish to your sleeveless garment, and I hope you will all remember this when working with heavier fabrics.

DEAR EUNICE:

I would like to make myself a spring coat, but most of the patterns I look at are called "coat-dresses." Can these patterns be used for coats and if so, what must be done to them in order to obtain a properly fitting coat?—MRS. C. M.

DEAR MRS. C.M.:

There is quite a difference between a coat-dress and a coat pattern. A coat-dress is usually cut similar to a dress. In other words, it doesn't have the amount of ease you need for a coat that is to be worn over other clothes. The sleeves are usually quite narrow and in general, these patterns would not be suitable to be worn over anything except the skimpiest lightweight sleeveless dress.

A coat-dress pattern does not include a lining pattern either; however, this is relatively simple to cut by using the same pattern as the coat, eliminating the width of the facing and adding the extra width for the seam allowance where the lining will be attached to the facing. The back of the pattern should also be cut a little fuller for ease.

These patterns have been used for coats and have been used successfully; however, you must decide first just where you want to wear your coat and what it must be worn over. If it's for a general all-purpose coat, I wouldn't recommend it.

Are Two Letters A Coincidence Or Do Others Share Problem?

DEAR HELEN:

I'm stunned. I hate the guy I love, if that's possible, but I don't think I'll ever trust anyone again.

We went together for two years, and I promised to wait for him when he was in Vietnam. He was so wonderful to me. He was clean and straight and never expected more than was right, even when he was leaving. I thought I knew him through and through. All the time he was fighting, I was true. I wrote to him everyday and sent gifts. He wrote every day too. We made plans about marriage.

Then he was badly wounded and sent home early, to a hospital about 3,000 miles away. The first letter I got from him there was very cool, but he did say he wanted to see me. The second letter was a brush off. He said he was going to live back east where he was having a ball, and I was a good kid who would go far, but let's face it, we just weren't made for each other. So good-bye. Just like that.

I've been trying to date other fellows, but I feel miserable when they even hold my hand. I hate the world and I hate my former guy, so how can I still love him? — Should I just give up and never write to him again?

HURTIN'

DEAR HURTIN':

Before you cross off this man you thought you knew so well, read the following letter. It probably isn't from your guy (could coincidence stretch that far?), but it may encourage you to write one more time, and ask for the real reason behind his breakup.

DEAR HELEN:

I came back from 'Nam with an injury in my spine. Maybe I'll be okay, but I have a disability discharge, and have to have prolonged treatment. I'm not exactly husband material right now, even though I love my girl.

If I told her about my long hospital bouts, and the uncertainty over my future, I know she'd hop the next plane. But I don't want a nurse. If I can't have a wife, I'd rather she would forget me, as it wouldn't be fair. I love her too much to see her waste her life.

Isn't it better that I tell her I've changed my mind about our marriage? As I see it, this is the only way. She may feel bad for a while, but she won't learn to hate an invalid husband. I'm not being melodramatic. I just want your opinion.

DISABLED VET

DEAR DISABLED VET:

Read both letters in this column carefully, and then — tell your girl the truth! You'll hurt her far more by lying!—H.

Beef Grades

Beef varies in quality more than any other kind of meat. But you don't have to judge beef quality for yourself. U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) grades are reliable guides to meat quality. For any specific cut—sirloin steak, for example—the higher the grade, the greater the tenderness, juiciness and flavor. Grades available, in descending quality order, are USDA Prime, USDA Choice, USDA Good, and USDA Standard.

'Mendocino Family' To Conduct Program On Drug Use, Abuse

A group of young people from Mendocino State Hospital will appear before the Tamalpais High School Parent Teacher Association Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school's Ruby Scott auditorium.

The panel, calling themselves the "Mendocino family," has been organized as a team to help high school students understand more about problems related to drug use and abuse. They are undergoing treatment at the hospital for drug abuse.

Dr. Ernest Dernburg of Sausalito will be a speaker to explain the cause and effects of drug use. He is psychiatric director for the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic and psychiatric consultant to the comprehensive child care program at Mt. Zion Medical Center. He has recently lectured to some 30 members of the Tamalpais High School faculty ad hoc drug committee.

The program was organized by James Hanretty of the school staff to inform parents and invite them to participate in a continuing drug education effort at the school.

A PANEL DISCUSSION on horticultural subjects will be the topic at the Marin Country Club Garden Club meeting at 1 p.m. Monday at the Country Club in Novato, according to Mrs. J. N. Faville, president.

Mrs. Jack Gibbs will head the panel, which will include Mmes. William Bills, Walker Geddes and William Begley. A question and answer period will follow.

Mrs. Richard Basco of Larkspur will also give a demonstration of making unusual artificial floral arrangements.

ELEAZAR OFODILE, a citizen of Biafra and now finishing his doctoral studies as a teaching assistant at the University of California will be the speaker at the public meeting of the Novato Branch, American Association of University Women at 8 p.m., Monday in the library of Sinaloa School in Novato.

Richard Mears of Novato, a representative of the Institute of Nations, will also present a talk on the summer institute, held in the Santa Cruz Mountains for junior and senior high school student leaders interested in world affairs.

Members of the world interests section of AAUW are the sponsoring group for the meeting.

ST. RAPHAEL'S MOTHERS' Guild will hold a panel discussion at their monthly meeting Tuesday from 1:15 to 3 p.m. Bay Area housewives of diverse ethnic and religious backgrounds will speak on "Focus on American Women." Prejudice in today's society will be brought out by the women who have spoken before approximately one hundred meetings during the past three years.

Babysitting will be available.

ON WEDNESDAY members of St. Anselm's Institute 98 Young Ladies Institute will welcome Mrs. Edward Nunes of Santa Rosa who will make her official visit as grand president. There will be a special meeting with initiation of new members beginning at 8:15 p.m.

Chairman for the evening is Mrs. Jack Benz. She will be assisted by Mmes. Thomas Cusick, Paul Neese, Robert Lee, Virginia Bergin, Thomas Bradley, Laurie Antolini, Clarence Curtin, Adelaide Tedrick, Richard Bettencourt, Bernard DeBisschop, Romeo Bacci, Walter Milani, Dave Lucas and John Daly and Misses Kathleen Doyle, Teresa Heininger, and Loretto O'Rourke.

THE FILM of Hans Christian Andersen's "The Daydreamer" will be shown Feb. 12 by the McKinley Parent-Teacher Association in Petaluma as its fund raiser for the year. The showing will be at 12:30 p.m. in the school's multi-use room, and light refreshments will be sold by the P-TA members. Mrs. Floyd Lubbers is chairman for the program.

A ONE-ACT comedy, "The Flattering Word," will be presented for the Mount Carmel Women's Club on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Mount Carmel School auditorium in Mill Valley. The public is invited.

The play is being presented by Lawrence G. Bedini, cofounder of the Bedini Playhouse School of Theatre in San Francisco, and the cast will consist of students from the playhouse.

Bedini is also drama director of the San Francisco Musical Club and the Century Club in San Francisco and in this capacity has presented many successful plays.

THIS WEEK the Volunteer Bureau is seeking: 1) people who like small children to work twice a week as kindergarten teacher aids in Central or Southern Marin; 2) a volunteer to be clerical aid to staff people concerned with teen-agers. This job is on Thursday afternoons and requires either shorthand or fast longhand. Thorough orientation will be provided; 3) individuals with entertainment skills such as juggling, magic shows, hobby demonstrations or card playing for spot jobs in hospitals.

Interested volunteers may call the Volunteer Bureau for an interview appointment.

THE PELICAN PLAYERS, all members of the Tiburon Peninsula Club, have scheduled performances of their third annual musical revue for May 1, 2, and 3 at the clubhouse.

Knowing How Turns The Trick In Removing Those Stains

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you want to make your shoe shine last longer smear a little damp soap on the shoes first. If they are black shoes and scuffed you can touch them up with India ink. If you can't get polish into the space between the sole and uppers use a cotton tipped swab.

If they've got tar stains on them take them off with lighter fluid. If they've got rubber soles use soapsuds and a little ammonia on the soles. If you put the polish on shoes the night before it will make them last longer. If the soles squeak, rub them with neatsfoot or linseed oil.

IF THEY'RE just wet, dry them slowly on shoe trees. If you don't have any shoetrees stuff them with paper. If you don't wipe off the mud first it will ruin the finish.

If you get the shoe polish on your hands you can loosen it up with baby oil before washing it off. If you get the dirt under your fingernails you can loosen it by brushing the nails with dry baking soda on a wet brush. If you have any shoepolish left over you can put it on your shoelaces and they will stay tied better.

IF YOU GET pencil marks around the pocket of a shirt erase them before washing or they'll be hard to get out. If you get ball point pen spots on a shirt give it a quick rinse in clear water before washing in soapsuds.

If you used cleaning fluid to remove a spot and it left a bigger spot, a little steam from boiling water in a kettle will remove the ring. If you started out with a grass stain on your golf slacks rub with vinegar until it (the stain) disappears. If it's a drip dry shirt and the collar and cuffs look ominously black apply concentrated dry sal soda with a damp brush. If you have only scorched the shirt you can bleach it by moistening it with water and holding it under a sun lamp.

If you get wine spots on your shirt rub the area with a cut lemon before having it washed. If you slop whiskey on your shirt, slop on some soda and you'll have whiskey and soda and a cleaner shirt. It works the same if you prefer plain water and whisky.

IF YOU CLEAN the insides of dry rubbers and galoshes with a vacuum cleaner you can save a future shoeshine. If you rub a suede jacket with a soft sponge it will clean it—some. If your shirt buttons look dirty clean them with an eraser.

If you don't believe any of this ask the American Institute of Men's and Boy's Wear, which told us about it in the first place.

Philip Richard Lorenzen plans to wed Carol Lynn Earwood June 28 at St. Paulus Lutheran Church in San Francisco. The announcement is made by the future bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude E. Earwood of San Rafael.

CAROL EARWOOD

Carol is the sister of Sally A. Earwood, a student at San Jose State College, and the granddaughter of Mrs. Ada Earwood of San Rafael. She was graduated from Terra Linda High School and is employed by Insurance and Securities, Incorporated in San Francisco.

Philip is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winfred Girbony of San Francisco and the brother of Pamela Lorenzen. He was graduated from George Washington High School in San Francisco and is employed by Stecher-Traung-Schmidt Corporation in San Francisco.

Mrs. Victor Udaloff Is Museum Guild President

Owl collecting, but not live ones, are among the hobbies of Mrs. Victor N. Udaloff, the new president of Ignacio Guild, Boyd Marin Museum of Science.

MRS. VICTOR UDALOFF

"About 12 years ago I started my collection, she said, "and now I have china, wooden and pine cone owls, a cookie jar and other dishes and pictures of owls."

Linda Udaloff also likes to knit, sew, play bridge and golf and enjoys auto travel to historical landmarks and gardening.

She and her husband, the assessment engineer for the city of San Francisco, have three children: Rick, 18, Laurie, 14, and Russell, 10 years old. They have lived in Marin County three years.

The new president is also active in the Parent-Teacher Association, Novato Newcomers Club and teachers' aide work.

The Ignacio guild was organized last year, and Mrs. Udaloff served as its secretary. The guild plans to participate in "The Festival of Trees" as a fund raising project.

Officers chosen to serve with Mrs. Udaloff are Mrs. James Hendricks, vice president; Peter Martin, secretary; J. D. Lane, treasurer; Lester Kuhns, publicity; John McLaughlin, staffing chairman; and Lloyd Ross, Festival of Trees chairman.

Eugene S. Kilgores Jr. Renew Friendships On Month-Long Trip

By MOLLY MARIN

Back from a month-long trip to New York, Philadelphia, the Barbadoes and the West Indies are Dr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Kilgore Jr. of Tiburon.

In New York they saw a number of shows and Mimi Kilgore renewed acquaintances with friends in the television and theatrical world whom she had known during the years she worked in Manhattan with a television company. She frequently saw Jane Connell, a former Californian, who is opening in the Broadway production, "Dear World." Miss Connell, who is the wife of Gordon Connell, was known in Marin when she was a player in the Straw Hat Revue.

While in the East, Mimi saw Mrs. Marjorie Farood, formerly of Mill Valley, who now lives in Scarsdale, N.Y. Mrs. Farood will move to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., this spring. Her daughter, Lele, 12, Mrs. Kilgore's goddaughter who played tennis at the Belvedere Tennis Club, is now ranked 10th in the country for junior girls 12 years old, by the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association. Mrs. Farood is also taking up flying, working for her pilot's license.

The Kilgores had to decline the invitation of Marjorie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Davis of New York to attend the inauguration, as their schedule was already planned.

While in New York, the Tiburon couple met Dr. and Mrs. Charles Eberle of Belvedere. The Eberles went on to visit Antigua. While staying on the small island of St. James in the Barbadoes, the Kilgores met the Larry Metcalfs of San Francisco.

THE LITTLE Jim Club of Children's Hospital of San Francisco is holding a voting party Tuesday evening from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Crocker-Citizens Bank, 1 Montgomery Street in San Francisco.

The queen of the 1969 Mardi Gras Ball, to be held Feb. 15 at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, will be elected at the party.

Candidates are Mmes. Roger Sant, Lionel Jackson, Jules Levaggi, Daniel I. Chadbourne, Ann DiGiorgio Hein, Leo V. Merle IV, Peter John Owens, Eugene M. Gillis and Marjorie Corcoran Gallun.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT W. Seidel of Ross are parents of a son, James Boyd Seidel, born Feb. 1.

Jamie, as the baby is called, is the brother of Eric, nine, and Kirk, seven years old, and the grandson of J. R. Seidel of Walnut Creek and Mrs. John D. Boyd of Nyack, N.Y.

Ozawa-Led Program Proves Interesting

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

SAN FRANCISCO — Surely last night's San Francisco Symphony concert, conducted at the Opera House by Seiji Ozawa in the second week of his guest appearances this year, will be remembered as a highlight of the entire season. This will be both from the standpoint of the unique program and brilliant performance.

The character of the program was due largely to the West Coast premiere of Japanese composer Toru Takemitsu's "November Steps," so named for its first commissioned performance in New York in November and because it represents the composer's first steps in combining ancient Japanese and contemporary European music.

ORCHESTRA DIVIDED

Extraordinary enough was the division of the orchestra into two string ensembles facing each other, two harps, two percussion groups and small groups of woodwinds. These seemed to realize the composer's stated ambition of presenting sound in its original unpolished form.

But what really made the work unique was the long duet unaccompanied by the orchestra, played on two ancient Japanese instruments by two musicians brought from Japan especially for this work.

Dressed in Japanese style, Miss Kinshi Tsuruta played the biwa, a lute-like instrument sounded with a large wooden plectrum that produced sounds like a twang, rasp and whack, and Katsuya Yokoyama gave a virtuoso performance on the shakuhachi, a vertical bamboo flute with an amazing variety of tonal resources.

They ranged from a very beautiful, long sustained and barely audible singing tone to a vigorous, breathy whoosh, a plaintive sound like a boat whistle and even a guffaw.

When in his ingratiatingly spontaneous style the tiny Japanese Maestro Ozawa explained the solo each played as an encore, the instruments were heard to better advantage — the biwa in a little piece with a theme like "William Tell," that Miss Tsuruta sang, and the shakuhachi in a mournful Buddhist elegy.

The enormously enthusiastic reception of this work and the composer — who looked even smaller than Ozawa — indicates a growing acceptance of contemporary idioms.

'PINES OF ROME'

In a sensational contrast to the sensitivity and delicacy of this work and played immediately afterward was Respighi's "Pines of Rome," ending in a blazing finale, the like of which has probably never been heard in the Opera House before. Theatrical enough in itself, it was heightened in drama by Ozawa's having trumpets played high up in the organ galleries on each side of the stage. The effect was electrifying.

The Prokofieff Fifth Symphony, which opened the program, was also given an exciting reading, thanks to Ozawa's marvelously vital rhythmic drive, a stronger than usual bass sound from the low strings and some fine individual performances on the harps, clarinets and horns. Ozawa directed all but the Takemitsu work from memory.

In the words Robert Schumann is supposed to have said of Chopin: "Hats off, gentlemen — a genius!"

College To Offer Tour Of Mexico

A 30-day tour of Mexico, with emphasis of folk music and art, is being offered by the Sonoma State College Office of Education Services and Department of Foreign Languages.

Called "The Magic of Mexica," the tour will be conducted by Dr. William O. Cord, Spanish professor and chairman of the foreign languages department. The trip, beginning June 30, will include a private excursion to important cities and historical points in Central Mexico. The group will travel about in a chartered bus, with an English-speaking guide.

Dr. Cord said the cost will range from $635 to $681, depending on the size of the group.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Thousand Clowns' Worth Evening In Ross Theater

By GARY TISCHLER

You've seen the movie, now see the play at your neighborhood theater.

Everybody seems to be taking a crack at "A Thousand Clowns," and now the Ross Valley Players have tackled it and have come up with a surprisingly believable and enjoyable piece of theater.

The thing to do is forget about the movie. Jason Robards prancing around the Statue of Liberty, that super-sensitive kid, Barbara Harris, and all that was a nice piece of magic that catered to every tight-collar's slice of wishful thinking so that even Murray's fadeout surrender was something of a triumph. It was nice, but it wasn't quite real.

What the Ross Valley Players have done is to bring the whole thing back to earth, losing some polish, gaining solid contact. Murray Burns is not Jason Robards, but Murray Burns, champion of feeling and spontaneity, something of a bum, selfish, unwilling to grow up.

GROWS WITH PART

Al Newman, who portrays Murray, is no Robards either, but he is Newman, and he grows with the part after a slow start. It's a steady job, not as fleshy as it should be at times, but he succeeds in turning Burns into a human being, instead of a caricature of a lovable rascal.

The youngster, Nick Burns, that middle-aged kid, doesn't look like a big-eyed wonder from a sensitivity session. Hunter Austin does succeed in making him a believable youngster, somebody who is a little more aware than most youngsters, but still a boy, a little, pudgy kid.

Mel Bermann is Arnold Burns, Murray's straight-and-narrow businessman brother with a kind of stoic and long-suffering dignity that climaxes into a moving justification of his kind of life.

John Peebles at times scores well as Albert Amundson, the outwardly cold-fish social worker, but is at times too boyish and cloying.

Without taking too much credit away from the rest of the performers, Barbara Nelson as Sandra Markowitz and Peter Scott as Leo (The Chipmunk) Herman, stick to the mind more than the rest.

PART JUST RIGHT

Scott's performance as the kid show comedian-phony is a flamboyant job in a meaty part. He winds up as a mustachioed, professional bleeding heart, a ravaging, fluttering blob of a man at once funny, disgusting and touching. It's a small part that could easily be done too well. Scott, although too blustering at times, is practically just right.

Miss Nelson plays a butterfly who still thinks she's a larva. She literally blossoms on stage with a sort of feminine-Lucy comedy technique as she changes from a hesitant well-meaning, overemotional female schlemiel to an alive person. It's a beautiful job.

The set of the Murray apartment has just the right touch — not too cluttered with absurdity but in a state of pleasant, wonderful chaos. It, like the play, is almost for real.

Goldfish, depending on the variety, can cost anywhere from 10 cents to $2,000 each.

ARISTOCRATIC

One of the most beautiful homes in Marin County is now for sale. 4 years old, masterful planning and fine workmanship. Massive front doors. High ceilings and quarry tile flooring in the large entry are very impressive. There is a lovely sunken living room with marble fireplace, and built in formalized wet bar and a spacious dining room with parquet floors. Gourmet kitchen, breakfast nook, built in barbecue, family room with fireplace, utility room, 3 large bedrooms and 3 baths. The master bedroom is accordingly dramatic. It has loads of closets and an elegant bath with sunken tub. ⅔ of an acre, mostly level, is well landscaped by William Kapranos. HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Long-Ignored Chemical Turned Out To Be Much-Used Aspirin

VAN DELLEN

Felix Hoffmann wanted to help his father who was crippled with arthritis. The young German chemist began searching through the records of chemical oddities.

In 1898, he persuaded his father to try aspirin, synthesized in 1853 by Charles Frederick von Gerhardt but shelf-bound because no one knew of its benefits. It relieved the father's pain and stiffness and triggered further studies.

SINCE ASPIRIN was introduced in the United States by The Bayer Company, we consume nearly 50 million tons daily. Many companies manufacture the drug. It is an old standby in rheumatic conditions. When pain is severe aspirin is taken several times a day — or as much as the person can tolerate.

Not everyone, however, can take aspirin. Some are so senstitive, that one-tenth of a 5 grain tablet produces serious reactions, such as hives, asthma, and congestion along the air passageways.

GASTROINTESTINAL irritation such as bleeding, heartburn of indigestion may be minimized by taking the salicylate with a glass of milk, food, or an antacid. Several years ago, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported that there was no difference in the irritative effects of buffered and ordinary aspirin. Coated salicylates are available for those who develop dyspepsia.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

ALTERED BASAL METABOLISM

A. B. writes: Is it possible to have a basal metabolic rating of plus 30 one week and minus 14 the next?

REPLY

Yes. Increased readings may be seen when the individual is nervous or emotionally upset. Errors also creep in through technical difficulties in calculation. This is one of the reasons why many physicians prefer using radioactive materials or the PBI test in determining thyroid activity.

KEEPING SKIN YOUTHFUL

A reader writes: What can an elderly woman do to keep her skin looking its best?

REPLY

Apply oils and lanolin, including cold and vanishing creams. Minimize exposure to the sun and wintry blasts. Avoid squinting by wearing dark glasses when out-of-doors. Meanwhile, enjoy life and stop frowning and grimacing. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on the aging skin.

CAN'T TAKE THE COLD

Mr. R. O. writes: Why do I become breathless when walking out of doors on a cold day? I'm never bothered in summer.

REPLY

This may be normal even though cold may interfere with breathing by constricting the bronchial tubes and blood vessels. A thorough examination of the heart and lungs is in order because individuals with heart trouble or chronic lung diseases usually are bothered more when the temperature drops.

DETACHED RETINA

S. R. writes: Does a detached retina result in blindness?

REPLY

The answer depends upon the area involved and the extent of the detachment of separation of the retina from the back of the eyeball. The surgical treatment, especially with ultrasound, has been most successful.

Today's Health Hint — Hydrogen peroxide that no longer bubbles should be discarded.

Burglar Steals $120 Bedspread

A burglar with a penchant for expensive bedspreads helped himself to a $120 brown one Wednesday at the home of Muriel Crawford Frink of 617 College Avenue, Kentfield the sheriff's department reported yesterday.

Also taken were two cameras, a projector and several blank checks.

Stereo equipment, a radio and an alarm clock were stolen yesterday from the home of Geraldine M. Underwood of 307 Ferndale Avenue, Mill Valley. A sliding glass door had been pried open at her home.

Sheriff's deputies also reported the theft of several articles from the car of Arany Von Szalav of Brisbane while it was parked in Marin City Wednesday. Taken were 10 rolls of film a car coat, umbrella, cigarette lighter and three books.

Mental Tests Set In Retrial

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court has ordered a psychiatric examination for Robert Peter Sundberg, 26, of San Rafael, convicted in 1967 of felony assault on a San Rafael police officer.

A higher court has ruled that Sundberg must be retried because the question of his sanity should have been investigated.

Sundberg was sentenced to a one-to-10-year term in state prison on Sept. 15, 1967, but is now in County Jail awaiting the new trial. The psychiatric test was ordered Wednesday.

Sundberg was accused of lunging at Patrolman Robert A. Larrison with a screwdriver when the officer came to investigate a disturbance report in Sundberg's room at the Carmel Hotel.

Naval Reserve Inspection Set

The annual inspection of the Naval Reserve Surface Division 12-31 (S) will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the division's training center, 153 Madison Avenue, San Rafael.

The public may attend the inspection of the unit, which includes about 60 men from Marin.

New Directors Voted At Farm Bureau Session

A 20-member board of directors was elected Thursday at the annual meeting of the Marin County Farm Bureau in Point Reyes Station.

The directors are William Barboni, James Grossi, Charles Clarkson, Anthony Nunes and John Volpi, all of the Novato area; A. J. Bianchi, Point Reyes Station; Eugene Brown, Petaluma; David Burbank and Alfred Poncia, both of Fallon; Wilford LaFranchi, Henry Tomasini and Stanley Swift, both of Nicasio; James Marshall, Mrs. Viola Mitchell, and Romeo Satori, all of Tomales; Donald McIsaac, Clarence Rogers, Boyd Stewart and Frank Truttman, all of Olema, and Horace Edrington, Healdsburg.

Officers will be elected at the directors' meeting at 10 a.m. Feb. 18 at the farm bureau office in Novato.

Also at yesterday's session, Richard Owens, secretary of the California Farm Bureau Federation, discussed state and federal legislation on schools and labor.

Work Session Set By Transit Panel

The San Francisco-Marin Water Transportation Study Committee will hold a public "work session" at 10 a.m. on Tuesday on its $45,000 study of the feasibility of ferry service between the two counties.

The meeting will be held in the San Francisco offices of the consultants for the study, Arthur D. Little Inc., 500 Sansome Street. The committee contracted with the firm last month to make the study, which is due June 30.

No Charges Filed Yet In Drug Case

No charges were filed yesterday against Valerie Van Nest, 20, of Tiburon, arrested Thursday on suspicion of having marijuana in her minibus, pending further investigation by the district attorney's office.

Miss Van Nest was arrested by the California Highway Patrol on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Greenbrae.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Long-Ignored Chemical Turned Out To Be Much-Used Aspirin

VAN DELLEN

Felix Hoffmann wanted to help his father who was crippled with arthritis. The young German chemist began searching through the records of chemical oddities.

In 1898, he persuaded his father to try aspirin, synthesized in 1853 by Charles Frederick von Gerhardt but shelf-bound because no one knew of its benefits. It relieved the father's pain and stiffness and triggered further studies.

SINCE ASPIRIN was introduced in the United States by The Bayer Company, we consume nearly 50 million tons daily. Many companies manufacture the drug. It is an old standby in rheumatic conditions. When pain is severe aspirin is taken several times a day — or as much as the person can tolerate.

Not everyone, however, can take aspirin. Some are so senstitive, that one-tenth of a 5 grain tablet produces serious reactions, such as hives, asthma, and congestion along the air passageways.

GASTROINTESTINAL irritation such as bleeding, heartburn of indigestion may be minimized by taking the salicylate with a glass of milk, food, or an antacid. Several years ago, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported that there was no difference in the irritative effects of buffered and ordinary aspirin. Coated salicylates are available for those who develop dyspepsia.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

ALTERED BASAL METABOLISM

A. B. writes: Is it possible to have a basal metabolic rating of plus 30 one week and minus 14 the next?

REPLY

Yes. Increased readings may be seen when the individual is nervous or emotionally upset. Errors also creep in through technical difficulties in calculation. This is one of the reasons why many physicians prefer using radioactive materials or the PBI test in determining thyroid activity.

KEEPING SKIN YOUTHFUL

A reader writes: What can an elderly woman do to keep her skin looking its best?

REPLY

Apply oils and lanolin, including cold and vanishing creams. Minimize exposure to the sun and wintry blasts. Avoid squinting by wearing dark glasses when out-of-doors. Meanwhile, enjoy life and stop frowning and grimacing. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on the aging skin.

CAN'T TAKE THE COLD

Mr. R. O. writes: Why do I become breathless when walking out of doors on a cold day? I'm never bothered in summer.

REPLY

This may be normal even though cold may interfere with breathing by constricting the bronchial tubes and blood vessels. A thorough examination of the heart and lungs is in order because individuals with heart trouble or chronic lung diseases usually are bothered more when the temperature drops.

DETACHED RETINA

S. R. writes: Does a detached retina result in blindness?

REPLY

The answer depends upon the area involved and the extent of the detachment of separation of the retina from the back of the eyeball. The surgical treatment, especially with ultrasound, has been most successful.

Today's Health Hint — Hydrogen peroxide that no longer bubbles should be discarded.

Burglar Steals $120 Bedspread

A burglar with a penchant for expensive bedspreads helped himself to a $120 brown one Wednesday at the home of Muriel Crawford Frink of 617 College Avenue, Kentfield the sheriff's department reported yesterday.

Also taken were two cameras, a projector and several blank checks.

Stereo equipment, a radio and an alarm clock were stolen yesterday from the home of Geraldine M. Underwood of 307 Ferndale Avenue, Mill Valley. A sliding glass door had been pried open at her home.

Sheriff's deputies also reported the theft of several articles from the car of Arany Von Szalav of Brisbane while it was parked in Marin City Wednesday. Taken were 10 rolls of film a car coat, umbrella, cigarette lighter and three books.

Mental Tests Set In Retrial

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court has ordered a psychiatric examination for Robert Peter Sundberg, 26, of San Rafael, convicted in 1967 of felony assault on a San Rafael police officer.

A higher court has ruled that Sundberg must be retried because the question of his sanity should have been investigated.

Sundberg was sentenced to a one-to-10-year term in state prison on Sept. 15, 1967, but is now in County Jail awaiting the new trial. The psychiatric test was ordered Wednesday.

Sundberg was accused of lunging at Patrolman Robert A. Larrison with a screwdriver when the officer came to investigate a disturbance report in Sundberg's room at the Carmel Hotel.

Naval Reserve Inspection Set

The annual inspection of the Naval Reserve Surface Division 12-31 (S) will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the division's training center, 153 Madison Avenue, San Rafael.

The public may attend the inspection of the unit, which includes about 60 men from Marin.

New Directors Voted At Farm Bureau Session

A 20-member board of directors was elected Thursday at the annual meeting of the Marin County Farm Bureau in Point Reyes Station.

The directors are William Barboni, James Grossi, Charles Clarkson, Anthony Nunes and John Volpi, all of the Novato area; A. J. Bianchi, Point Reyes Station; Eugene Brown, Petaluma; David Burbank and Alfred Poncia, both of Fallon; Wilford LaFranchi, Henry Tomasini and Stanley Swift, both of Nicasio; James Marshall, Mrs. Viola Mitchell, and Romeo Satori, all of Tomales; Donald McIsaac, Clarence Rogers, Boyd Stewart and Frank Truttman, all of Olema, and Horace Edrington, Healdsburg.

Officers will be elected at the directors' meeting at 10 a.m. Feb. 18 at the farm bureau office in Novato.

Also at yesterday's session, Richard Owens, secretary of the California Farm Bureau Federation, discussed state and federal legislation on schools and labor.

Work Session Set By Transit Panel

The San Francisco-Marin Water Transportation Study Committee will hold a public "work session" at 10 a.m. on Tuesday on its $45,000 study of the feasibility of ferry service between the two counties.

The meeting will be held in the San Francisco offices of the consultants for the study, Arthur D. Little Inc., 500 Sansome Street. The committee contracted with the firm last month to make the study, which is due June 30.

No Charges Filed Yet In Drug Case

No charges were filed yesterday against Valerie Van Nest, 20, of Tiburon, arrested Thursday on suspicion of having marijuana in her minibus, pending further investigation by the district attorney's office.

Miss Van Nest was arrested by the California Highway Patrol on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Greenbrae.

Trial Move Denied By Army Court

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A request to have the mutiny trial of an Oakland soldier moved from the Presidio was denied yesterday in the second day of a court-martial against one of 27 soldiers accused of mutiny.

Defense attorney Paul Halvonik, counsel for Pvt. Nesrey Sood, 25, also argued that his client was "denied a speedy trial" and that the mutiny charge did not apply.

Lt. Col. George R. Robinson, the Army judge, turned down all of Halvonik's motions.

Sood and 26 other soldiers were charged with mutiny following a sitdown strike last October to protest conditions at the prison and the shooting of an inmate during an alleged escape attempt.

Among those awaiting trial is Pvt. Keith C. Mather, of San Bruno, one of the so-called Marin City Nine. The group chained itself to a clergyman in an antiwar demonstration last summer at St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church.

Stall On Bridge Injures Couple

A Sausalito man and woman were injured today when their car slammed into another automobile stalled on the Golden Gate Bridge, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Robert J. White, a 50-year-old attorney who lives on a boat at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor, suffered a lacerated hand and Eleanor Rioux, 40, of 203 West Street, had a cut lip and possible fractured ribs. They were taken to St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco for treatment.

George W. Casassa, a 22-year-old student of 130 Via Lerida, San Rafael, told patrolmen that his car ran out of gas on the bridge about 2 a.m. The CHP reported White, the driver of the other car, apparently did not see Casassa's car.

Bones Found In Mill Valley Called Ancient

Bones discovered last Sunday in a Mill Valley creek bed are approximately 100-150 years old and probably those of Mexican Indian servants of early Spanish settlers, according to Marin County Deputy Coroner Keith C. Craig.

However, Craig, who said he had consulted with Dr. John McBeath, an amateur archaeologist from Novato, would not rule out the possibility that the bones might be those of Miwok Indians, known to have lived in the area up to the early 1880s.

Two skulls found with the bones were "very similar" to those of the Miwok Indians, Craig said. However, he noted that the teeth in the skulls were in very good condition, indicating that the Indians probably were Mexican servants on a good diet in an early Spanish home.

The teeth of the Miwok were usually pitted and broken from eating hard nuts.

The three shopping bags full of bones recovered by Frank and Scott Raney, of 20 Upperhill Road, Mill Valley, and Paul Fielder of 1 Underhill Road, contained enough thigh bones for six skeletons but only two skulls, Craig said.

One of the skulls belonged to a man, probably over 40, and the other one, somewhat smaller, to a woman who was around 25-30, Craig said.

Lucretia Little, Mill Valley's unofficial historian, told the Independent-Journal that an 1858 survey map of the Reed Ranch shows an Indian village and mound near the area in which the bones were discovered.

The youngsters found the bones in a sandy section of the Salt Creek bed adjacent to the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way in Scott Valley.

Paul Jones Files School Ballot Papers

Incumbent Paul L. Jones filed official papers yesterday as a candidate for the San Rafael Board of Education, but said later he may decide not to run.

Jones, area field director for the Civil Defense Administration, was appointed to the school board in 1967 and would be seeking his first elected term in the April 15 election.

Jones said he felt he had not been able to give the school board post enough of his time and that "I would be happy to have someone else take the job."

He said he was asking friends in his Terra Linda neighborhood whether any would be interested in replacing him. He emphasized, however, that his replacement did not have to come from Terra Linda. Jones is the only board member from the Dixie School District attendance area.

Jones said he would be leaving on an Eastern business trip that would not enable him to return to San Rafael until after the candidates' filing deadline Thursday.

The only other incumbent whose term expires is Lawrence I. Kramer, chairman. He has not filed candidacy papers with City Clerk W. C. Cornwell.

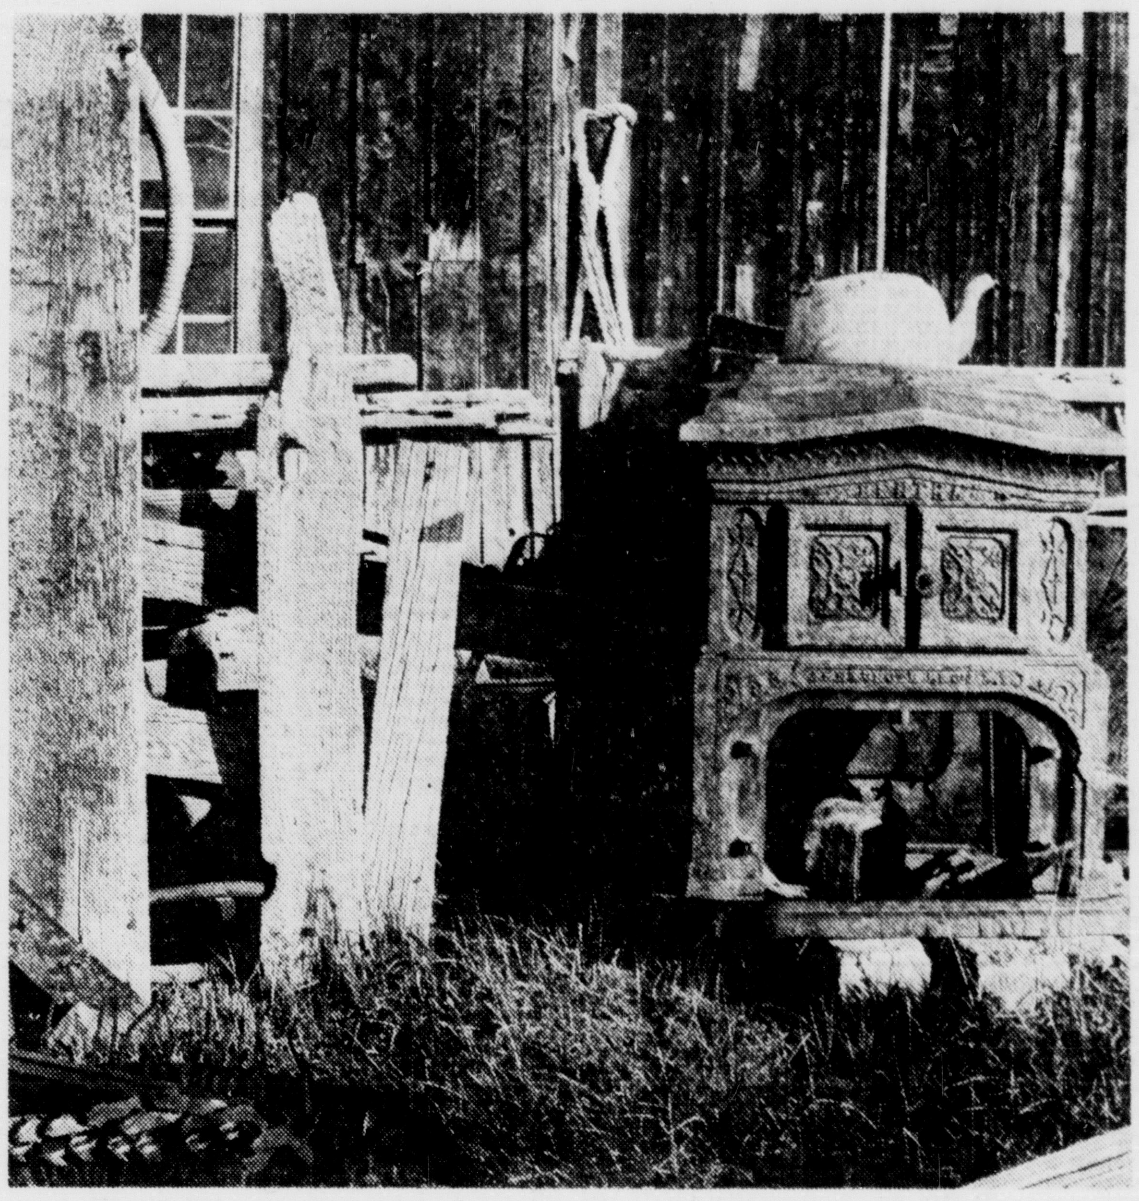
Franklin's Gift Boon To College

LANCASTER, Pa. (UPI)—What is now Franklin and Marshall College was chartered by the Pennsylvania legislature during the winter of 1787, only weeks before Colonial leaders met in Philadelphia to frame a constitution for the United States.

Named for Benjamin Franklin—whose cash contribution of 200 British pounds sterling is now valued in the endowment at more than $700,000—it was the third college in Pennsylvania and the 14th in the United States. In 1853 Franklin merged with Marshall College—named for the famed Chief Justice, John Marshall—and the combined colleges opened that year under the leadership of a board of trustees headed by James Buchanan, who later became the 15th President.

Rain Brings Fire

KIRCHDORF, Austria (AP) — Rain was blamed for causing fire on a railroad car of a freight train. Officials said the rain seeped through a leaky canvas that covered a load of 20 tons of quicklime and the developing heat set fire to the wooden boards of the car.



GHOST TOWN — Remnants of Bodie are among the subjects sensitively photographed by College of Marin instructor Thomas C. Johnson, who shares a show with John Dumas, ceramic artist at Anima Mundo in Mill Valley.

ART REVIEW

'Black, White, Clay' A Display Of Talents

By LAURA DEVENDORF

"Black, white and clay," an exhibit of photographs by Thomas C. Johnson and ceramic pots, forms and faces by John Dumas, is a fine combination of talent continuing through March 1 at Anima Mundi gallery, 352 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley.

Dumas' ceramics are earthy and raw and Johnson's photographs dwell on wood, metal, glass, flesh and other natural things. On one hand, Johnson shows depressing views of contemporary life — the tail ends of buses and littered, grimy garages. And it's a strange comparison with his photos of the decaying ghost town, Bodie.

SIMPLE DIGNITY

Somehow, the latter's dusty, cobwebbed interiors, littered with the same everyday sort of things, have a simple dignity, even beauty. And the mood is even stronger in the four exteriors where both loneliness and pride seem engraved in the graying, time-ridged wood Johnson examines so minutely. You can almost smell the dryness and feel its stiff, long-splintered surface.

STAGY NUDES

Another close-up series, this one of doors, has that same tactile quality. And while most of Johnson's nude studies seem stagy, one bending figure shot close-up becomes almost more recognizable as a free-form marble sculpture than as flesh.

Dumas' work is as unpretentious as his biography tacked on the wall. Excerpts from this read, "Dumas: registered human being . . . fashionably completed four years at Brown University . . ." and it concludes, "Seeking fullness in dirt, fire and water."

The latter statement is evidenced in all his work. It is free, earthy, irreverent, at times macabre, even ghoulish, usually gorgeous and always full of energy.

A heavy half-orb hangs above another, the sliced top of which results in an eerie form. Crude masks hang from the ceiling. Strange chunks of darkened clay dangle from the insides of crates. And gouged, bulging slabs, wall-hung or mounted on ceramic boxes are struck with skulls and birds with yawning, squatty beaks as openings.

BIRDS HIS THEME

Birds are Dumas' recurrent theme. They wrap their winging images around giant pots, their heads and necks emerging sharply from the curving plane. Sometimes he combines the ceramic birds with real driftwood, bones and feathers to build a total form, such as a ceramic body with real feather wings roosting on a driftwood perch.

It sounds terrible but it works, as do other Dumas' things because of the power, energy and natural taste in them.

Six Drinking Motorists Sentenced

Six persons were sentenced yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

John Henry Wiesner, 41, of 807 Estancia Way, San Rafael, was sentenced to 10 days in the County Jail, fined $211 and placed on 18 months probation. He was arrested Feb. 2 on Fourth Street in San Rafael.

Clifford Walter Parlee, 42, of 2 Wolfe Grade, Kentfield, who was arrested on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard last Aug. 23, was given a five-day suspended jail sentence, placed on one year probation and fined $200.

Clifford Eugene Allen, 38, of 767 St. Francis Avenue, Novato, was fined $150 and placed on six months probation. He was arrested by the California Highway Patrol Jan. 18 on Highway 101.

William Richard Smith, 51, of Novato, who was arrested last Oct. 7 in San Rafael, was fined $125 and placed on one year probation.

Mae Carolyn Borg, 53, of 530 Ethel Avenue, Mill Valley, was fined $150 and sentenced to one day in jail. She was also placed on a year's probation. She was arrested last June 5 in Mill Valley.

Milo Wilson LeFever, 36, of 27 Vendola Drive, San Rafael, who was arrested last Sept. 5 on Highway 101, was fined $125 and placed on six months' probation.

Suspect Admits Stolen Card Use

James Warren Tamburini, 21, of San Rafael, pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to attempting to buy a television set and radio with a stolen credit card.

He was ordered to appear in Marin Superior Court Monday.

Tamburini was arrested Dec. 19 in connection with the attempted purchase at Butler's Magnavox in Northgate Shopping Center.

Pharmacist Hit, Briefly Stunned

A 61-year-old pharmacist locking up the Marinwood Pharmacy for the night was struck on the head and knocked out for a few minutes Wednesday, according to the sheriff's department.

Claude F. Minchin of 525 Fairway Drive, Novato, recovered consciousness within a few minutes and was treated at Marin General Hospital for a scalp cut.

Minchin thought he might have been hit with a bottle.

Nothing was reported missing from the store, the sheriff's department said.

Car Club Open House

In a drive to enlist new members, the North Bay Corvette Association will have an open house tomorrow, 1-4 p.m., at the Campbell Bishop Chevrolet Co., Highway 101 at Paradise Drive, Corte Madera. Cars will be on display and phamplets will be distributed to tell the purpose and plans of the club.

Petaluma Eyes Road Projects

The Petaluma City Council — reviewing capital outlay projects at a study session today — sought programs that would have wide appeal and good chances for success on a possible June 10 bond issue.

In reviewing a proposal for $4,635,000 in street projects that would have to be financed through bond issues, the council agreed that a second Highway 101 overpass at the Caulfield Lane extension should receive top priority for bond issue consideration.

Estimated to cost the city $251,000, the project has long been sought by residents of East Petaluma who are often bogged down in heavy traffic on the lone Washington Street overpass. City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer questioned whether the west side residents would be hesitant to approve the project and suggested a west side project also be included in a bond issue.

Meyer recommended consideration of a traffic signal system at the Magnolia Avenue-Petaluma Boulevard North-Payran Street intersection. That west side project, estimated to cost nearly $100,000, had been recommended by City Engineer David Young to be financed by gas tax funds.

"If a bond issue is to pass, it must have something for everyone," Meyer said. Noting the bonding capacity of the city was now around $3 million, Meyer suggested a bond issue be kept down to the $500,000 level. He said the finance committee is currently preparing a recommendation to council on bond issue items.

The council agreed that projects improving traffic flow and the downtown core area would have more bond issue appeal than luxury items such as the development of a 30-acre Lucchesi park, also on the east side.

The council agreed that projects improving traffic flow and east side as a "necessity" and said it felt sure the voters would agree and approve it on a bond issue. Fire Chief Roscoe A. Benton has recommended construction of a new station on McDowell Boulevard South.

Pair Deny Theft In San Rafael

A Sebastopol man and his companion from San Francisco pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to a charge of stealing an adding machine from a San Rafael service station Jan. 25 after knocking down the attendant.

A preliminary hearing for Douglas Rice, 26, of Sebastopol and a co-defendant, Robert John Marlowe, 31, was set for Feb. 24.

The offense allegedly occurred at the Standard Service Station at 475 Third Street.

Transit Speaker

The Marin Real Estate Board will meet 8 a.m. Tuesday at the Corte Madera Lions Club to hear Dale W. Luehring, general manager of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, speak about transportation problems.

SENSITIVITY CLASS BRANDED A PLOT

Ex-Parole Officer Compares Sessions To Korean Communists' Brainwashing

By CHARLES YOAKUM

Sensitivity training is only a fancy name for brainwashing and is being used by segments of our government to perpetuate their own existence, a former law officer told a crowd of about 250 persons at Redwood High School last night.

Ed Kieckmann Jr., speaking at a lecture sponsored by the ultra-conservative Truth About Civil Turmoil (TACT) committee, likened this rapidly-spreading educational device to the brainwashing used by the Communists during the Korean war.

Dieckmann also attacked sex education classes, calling them "another arm of the same body," referring to sensitivity training courses.

Sensitivity training — which has received so much publicity in recent months — takes many forms, but usually involves an individual being subjected to strong group criticism of his personality after he is encouraged to reveal his innermost feelings. It is very similar to the group therapy used by psychologists and psychiatrists on the mentally ill.

Dieckmann is a former State parole officer in Huntington Beach who said he resigned last October when his superiors attempted to have him undergo sensitivity training with Al Prentice "Bunchy" Carter as the group leader.

Carter was one of two Black Panthers shot to death recently at UCLA.

Since then, Dieckmann has traveled nationally speaking out against sensitivity training.

Dieckmann said that school teachers, principals and administrators have all been pressured by the National Education Association and the National Training Laboratory to try to use sensitivity training.

"Call it what you will — sensitivity training, group criticism or psychodrama — it all adds up to the same thing," Dieckmann said. "It's the same technique used by the Nazis in their youth programs."

"Sensitivity training is actually just the opposite as it sounds," Dieckmann said, "it's a de-sensitizer."

Dieckmann said that the National Education Act, Title 3 of 1965 — which brought about the beginning of sensitivity training — was supported by Sen. Wayne Morse after being proposed by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell —"two old 'bugaboos' of ours."

Dieckmann said that the group criticism which goes on in many forms of sensitivity training is aimed at breaking down an individual's morality and internal loyalties.

Dieckmann said that the spectacular sensitivity training methods — such as the nude marathons — are not practiced in Communist countries "but are used only in target areas (of conspiracy.)"

He also warned the crowd "not to think that sensitivity training is something that is happening elsewhere."

"I understand that at Tamalpais High School they have a 'creeping and crawling session' with the students ending up in the center of the room for a slow 'pile-on.' "

He said that, at Long Beach State, a speech class became a sensitivity training class, that sex became the entire subject and that the final was "held in a motel."

"All they did was sit on a bed and reveal their innermost thoughts about sex," he added.

The vast majority of the large crowd was clearly with Dieckmann. Only one dissenter voiced an opinion during the question and answer session.

David Dwight, a psychology teacher at Terra Linda High School, said that he favored sensitivity training, although he had not used it himself. He said that "psychodrama" had been used by his high school, but that students were not forced to participate.

One member of the audience said that he understood 35 teachers from Mill Valley had been sent to a course on teaching sensitivity training last summer.

Dieckmann urged the audience "not to try and fight sensitivity training individually," but told them to join TACT and combat it on a much larger scale.

Funds Collected For Boardwalk

The necessary money has been collected from property owners of the Hugh Porter subdivision to repair and maintain the Greenbrae boardwalk, Lee R. Miller, Greenbrae Improvement Club recording secretary, said yesterday.

Miller would not reveal the amount of the money, saying that the contract is yet to be signed. He said, however, that the club is considering an $11,077 bid to do the repairs from von der Werth Inc., Greenbrae.

Election of officers, which had been planned for Thursday night's meeting, was continued.

Nearly 82 per cent of the items now stocked in frozen food cases were non-existent in 1957.

Legal Group Seeks Stay Of Execution

A stay of execution for Robert L. Massie, convicted killer who insists he wants to die in the gas chamber, was asked yesterday of the California Supreme Court.

A group of lawyers, who last year unsuccessfully challenged the constitutionality of the death penalty, made the request, contending the 27-year-old Massie is insane and should be given a sanity hearing.

Massie is scheduled to die in the San Quentin gas chamber March 12.

Last year, following the blanket stay of all executions by the California Supreme Court, pending arguments on the constitutionality of the death penalty, Massie filed a motion claiming it was his constitutional right to be executed.

Massie, convicted of killing a San Gabriel woman during a 1965 robbery, argued that persistent delays in his execution could be interpreted as cruel punishment.

The petition filed by the group of attorneys maintains Massie is waiving his rights without legal effect because he is insane.

Massie is one of four San Quentin Death Row inmates who have been scheduled to die since the blanket stay of executions was lifted in November after the Supreme Court ruled the death penalty was constitutional.

Pole Collision Hurts Driver

A Fairfax man was injured at 6:50 p.m. Thursday when his car struck a Pacific Gas and Electric Company power pole at 1914 Fourth Street, San Rafael, police reported.

Charles Ernest Hancok, 31, of 26 Redwood Road, Fairfax, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple abrasions and contusions.

His car struck the pole after he slammed on the brakes to avoid hitting another automo-

Trial Move Denied By Army Court

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A request to have the mutiny trial of an Oakland soldier moved from the Presidio was denied yesterday in the second day of a court-martial against one of 27 soldiers accused of mutiny.

Defense attorney Paul Halvonik, counsel for Pvt. Nesrey Sood, 25, also argued that his client was "denied a speedy trial" and that the mutiny charge did not apply.

Lt. Col. George R. Robinson, the Army judge, turned down all of Halvonik's motions.

Sood and 26 other soldiers were charged with mutiny following a sitdown strike last October to protest conditions at the prison and the shooting of an inmate during an alleged escape attempt.

Among those awaiting trial is Pvt. Keith C. Mather, of San Bruno, one of the so-called Marin City Nine. The group chained itself to a clergyman in an antiwar demonstration last summer at St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church.

Stall On Bridge Injures Couple

A Sausalito man and woman were injured today when their car slammed into another automobile stalled on the Golden Gate Bridge, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Robert J. White, a 50-year-old attorney who lives on a boat at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor, suffered a lacerated hand and Eleanor Rioux, 40, of 203 West Street, had a cut lip and possible fractured ribs. They were taken to St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco for treatment.

George W. Casassa, a 22-year-old student of 130 Via Lerida, San Rafael, told patrolmen that his car ran out of gas on the bridge about 2 a.m. The CHP reported White, the driver of the other car, apparently did not see Casassa's car.

Bones Found In Mill Valley Called Ancient

Bones discovered last Sunday in a Mill Valley creek bed are approximately 100-150 years old and probably those of Mexican Indian servants of early Spanish settlers, according to Marin County Deputy Coroner Keith C. Craig.

However, Craig, who said he had consulted with Dr. John McBeath, an amateur archaeologist from Novato, would not rule out the possibility that the bones might be those of Miwok Indians, known to have lived in the area up to the early 1880s.

Two skulls found with the bones were "very similar" to those of the Miwok Indians, Craig said. However, he noted that the teeth in the skulls were in very good condition, indicating that the Indians probably were Mexican servants on a good diet in an early Spanish home.

The teeth of the Miwok were usually pitted and broken from eating hard nuts.

The three shopping bags full of bones recovered by Frank and Scott Raney, of 20 Upperhill Road, Mill Valley, and Paul Fielder of 1 Underhill Road, contained enough thigh bones for six skeletons but only two skulls, Craig said.

One of the skulls belonged to a man, probably over 40, and the other one, somewhat smaller, to a woman who was around 25-30, Craig said.

Lucretia Little, Mill Valley's unofficial historian, told the Independent-Journal that an 1858 survey map of the Reed Ranch shows an Indian village and mound near the area in which the bones were discovered.

The youngsters found the bones in a sandy section of the Salt Creek bed adjacent to the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way in Scott Valley.

Paul Jones Files School Ballot Papers

Incumbent Paul L. Jones filed official papers yesterday as a candidate for the San Rafael Board of Education, but said later he may decide not to run.

Jones, area field director for the Civil Defense Administration, was appointed to the school board in 1967 and would be seeking his first elected term in the April 15 election.

Jones said he felt he had not been able to give the school board post enough of his time and that "I would be happy to have someone else take the job."

He said he was asking friends in his Terra Linda neighborhood whether any would be interested in replacing him. He emphasized, however, that his replacement did not have to come from Terra Linda. Jones is the only board member from the Dixie School District attendance area.

Jones said he would be leaving on an Eastern business trip that would not enable him to return to San Rafael until after the candidates' filing deadline Thursday.

The only other incumbent whose term expires is Lawrence I. Kramer, chairman. He has not filed candidacy papers with City Clerk W. C. Cornwell.

Franklin's Gift Boon To College

LANCASTER, Pa. (UPI)—What is now Franklin and Marshall College was chartered by the Pennsylvania legislature during the winter of 1787, only weeks before Colonial leaders met in Philadelphia to frame a constitution for the United States.

Named for Benjamin Franklin—whose cash contribution of 200 British pounds sterling is now valued in the endowment at more than $700,000—it was the third college in Pennsylvania and the 14th in the United States. In 1853 Franklin merged with Marshall College—named for the famed Chief Justice, John Marshall—and the combined colleges opened that year under the leadership of a board of trustees headed by James Buchanan, who later became the 15th President.

Rain Brings Fire

KIRCHDORF, Austria (AP) — Rain was blamed for causing fire on a railroad car of a freight train. Officials said the rain seeped through a leaky canvas that covered a load of 20 tons of quicklime and the developing heat set fire to the wooden boards of the car.

ART REVIEW

'Black, White, Clay' A Display Of Talents

By LAURA DEVENDORF

"Black, white and clay," an exhibit of photographs by Thomas C. Johnson and ceramic pots, forms and faces by John Dumas, is a fine combination of talent continuing through March 1 at Anima Mundi gallery, 352 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley.

Dumas' ceramics are earthy and raw and Johnson's photographs dwell on wood, metal, glass, flesh and other natural things. On one hand, Johnson shows depressing views of contemporary life — the tail ends of buses and littered, grimy garages. And it's a strange comparison with his photos of the decaying ghost town, Bodie.

SIMPLE DIGNITY

Somehow, the latter's dusty, cobwebbed interiors, littered with the same everyday sort of things, have a simple dignity, even beauty. And the mood is even stronger in the four exteriors where both loneliness and pride seem engraved in the graying, time-ridged wood Johnson examines so minutely. You can almost smell the dryness and feel its stiff, long-splintered surface.

STAGY NUDES

Another close-up series, this one of doors, has that same tactile quality. And while most of Johnson's nude studies seem stagy, one bending figure shot close-up becomes almost more recognizable as a free-form marble sculpture than as flesh.

Dumas' work is as unpretentious as his biography tacked on the wall. Excerpts from this read, "Dumas: registered human being . . . fashionably completed four years at Brown University . . ." and it concludes, "Seeking fullness in dirt, fire and water."

The latter statement is evidenced in all his work. It is free, earthy, irreverent, at times macabre, even ghoulish, usually gorgeous and always full of energy.

A heavy half-orb hangs above another, the sliced top of which results in an eerie form. Crude masks hang from the ceiling. Strange chunks of darkened clay dangle from the insides of crates. And gouged, bulging slabs, wall-hung or mounted on ceramic boxes are struck with skulls and birds with yawning, squatty beaks as openings.

BIRDS HIS THEME

Birds are Dumas' recurrent theme. They wrap their winging images around giant pots, their heads and necks emerging sharply from the curving plane. Sometimes he combines the ceramic birds with real driftwood, bones and feathers to build a total form, such as a ceramic body with real feather wings roosting on a driftwood perch.

It sounds terrible but it works, as do other Dumas' things because of the power, energy and natural taste in them.

Six Drinking Motorists Sentenced

Six persons were sentenced yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

John Henry Wiesner, 41, of 807 Estancia Way, San Rafael, was sentenced to 10 days in the County Jail, fined $211 and placed on 18 months probation. He was arrested Feb. 2 on Fourth Street in San Rafael.

Clifford Walter Parlee, 42, of 2 Wolfe Grade, Kentfield, who was arrested on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard last Aug. 23, was given a five-day suspended jail sentence, placed on one year probation and fined $200.

Clifford Eugene Allen, 38, of 767 St. Francis Avenue, Novato, was fined $150 and placed on six months probation. He was arrested by the California Highway Patrol Jan. 18 on Highway 101.

William Richard Smith, 51, of Novato, who was arrested last Oct. 7 in San Rafael, was fined $125 and placed on one year probation.

Mae Carolyn Borg, 53, of 530 Ethel Avenue, Mill Valley, was fined $150 and sentenced to one day in jail. She was also placed on a year's probation. She was arrested last June 5 in Mill Valley.

Milo Wilson LeFever, 36, of 27 Vendola Drive, San Rafael, who was arrested last Sept. 5 on Highway 101, was fined $125 and placed on six months' probation.

Suspect Admits Stolen Card Use

James Warren Tamburini, 21, of San Rafael, pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to attempting to buy a television set and radio with a stolen credit card.

He was ordered to appear in Marin Superior Court Monday.

Tamburini was arrested Dec. 19 in connection with the attempted purchase at Butler's Magnavox in Northgate Shopping Center.

Pharmacist Hit, Briefly Stunned

A 61-year-old pharmacist locking up the Marinwood Pharmacy for the night was struck on the head and knocked out for a few minutes Wednesday, according to the sheriff's department.

Claude F. Minchin of 525 Fairway Drive, Novato, recovered consciousness within a few minutes and was treated at Marin General Hospital for a scalp cut.

Minchin thought he might have been hit with a bottle.

Nothing was reported missing from the store, the sheriff's department said.

Car Club Open House

In a drive to enlist new members, the North Bay Corvette Association will have an open house tomorrow, 1-4 p.m., at the Campbell Bishop Chevrolet Co., Highway 101 at Paradise Drive, Corte Madera. Cars will be on display and phamplets will be distributed to tell the purpose and plans of the club.

Petaluma Eyes Road Projects

The Petaluma City Council — reviewing capital outlay projects at a study session today — sought programs that would have wide appeal and good chances for success on a possible June 10 bond issue.

In reviewing a proposal for $4,635,000 in street projects that would have to be financed through bond issues, the council agreed that a second Highway 101 overpass at the Caulfield Lane extension should receive top priority for bond issue consideration.

Estimated to cost the city $251,000, the project has long been sought by residents of East Petaluma who are often bogged down in heavy traffic on the lone Washington Street overpass. City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer questioned whether the west side residents would be hesitant to approve the project and suggested a west side project also be included in a bond issue.

Meyer recommended consideration of a traffic signal system at the Magnolia Avenue-Petaluma Boulevard North-Payran Street intersection. That west side project, estimated to cost nearly $100,000, had been recommended by City Engineer David Young to be financed by gas tax funds.

"If a bond issue is to pass, it must have something for everyone," Meyer said. Noting the bonding capacity of the city was now around $3 million, Meyer suggested a bond issue be kept down to the $500,000 level. He said the finance committee is currently preparing a recommendation to council on bond issue items.

The council agreed that projects improving traffic flow and the downtown core area would have more bond issue appeal than luxury items such as the development of a 30-acre Lucchesi park, also on the east side.

The council agreed that projects improving traffic flow and east side as a "necessity" and said it felt sure the voters would agree and approve it on a bond issue. Fire Chief Roscoe A. Benton has recommended construction of a new station on McDowell Boulevard South.

Pair Deny Theft In San Rafael

A Sebastopol man and his companion from San Francisco pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to a charge of stealing an adding machine from a San Rafael service station Jan. 25 after knocking down the attendant.

A preliminary hearing for Douglas Rice, 26, of Sebastopol and a co-defendant, Robert John Marlowe, 31, was set for Feb. 24.

The offense allegedly occurred at the Standard Service Station at 475 Third Street.

Transit Speaker

The Marin Real Estate Board will meet 8 a.m. Tuesday at the Corte Madera Lions Club to hear Dale W. Luehring, general manager of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, speak about transportation problems.

SENSITIVITY CLASS BRANDED A PLOT

Ex-Parole Officer Compares Sessions To Korean Communists' Brainwashing

By CHARLES YOAKUM

Sensitivity training is only a fancy name for brainwashing and is being used by segments of our government to perpetuate their own existence, a former law officer told a crowd of about 250 persons at Redwood High School last night.

Ed Kieckmann Jr., speaking at a lecture sponsored by the ultra-conservative Truth About Civil Turmoil (TACT) committee, likened this rapidly-spreading educational device to the brainwashing used by the Communists during the Korean war.

Dieckmann also attacked sex education classes, calling them "another arm of the same body," referring to sensitivity training courses.

Sensitivity training — which has received so much publicity in recent months — takes many forms, but usually involves an individual being subjected to strong group criticism of his personality after he is encouraged to reveal his innermost feelings. It is very similar to the group therapy used by psychologists and psychiatrists on the mentally ill.

Dieckmann is a former State parole officer in Huntington Beach who said he resigned last October when his superiors attempted to have him undergo sensitivity training with Al Prentice "Bunchy" Carter as the group leader.

Carter was one of two Black Panthers shot to death recently at UCLA.

Since then, Dieckmann has traveled nationally speaking out against sensitivity training.

Dieckmann said that school teachers, principals and administrators have all been pressured by the National Education Association and the National Training Laboratory to try to use sensitivity training.

"Call it what you will — sensitivity training, group criticism or psychodrama — it all adds up to the same thing," Dieckmann said. "It's the same technique used by the Nazis in their youth programs."

"Sensitivity training is actually just the opposite as it sounds," Dieckmann said, "it's a de-sensitizer."

Dieckmann said that the National Education Act, Title 3 of 1965 — which brought about the beginning of sensitivity training — was supported by Sen. Wayne Morse after being proposed by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell —"two old 'bugaboos' of ours."

Dieckmann said that the group criticism which goes on in many forms of sensitivity training is aimed at breaking down an individual's morality and internal loyalties.

Dieckmann said that the spectacular sensitivity training methods — such as the nude marathons — are not practiced in Communist countries "but are used only in target areas (of conspiracy.)"

He also warned the crowd "not to think that sensitivity training is something that is happening elsewhere."

"I understand that at Tamalpais High School they have a 'creeping and crawling session' with the students ending up in the center of the room for a slow 'pile-on.' "

He said that, at Long Beach State, a speech class became a sensitivity training class, that sex became the entire subject and that the final was "held in a motel."

"All they did was sit on a bed and reveal their innermost thoughts about sex," he added.

The vast majority of the large crowd was clearly with Dieckmann. Only one dissenter voiced an opinion during the question and answer session.

David Dwight, a psychology teacher at Terra Linda High School, said that he favored sensitivity training, although he had not used it himself. He said that "psychodrama" had been used by his high school, but that students were not forced to participate.

One member of the audience said that he understood 35 teachers from Mill Valley had been sent to a course on teaching sensitivity training last summer.

Dieckmann urged the audience "not to try and fight sensitivity training individually," but told them to join TACT and combat it on a much larger scale.

Funds Collected For Boardwalk

The necessary money has been collected from property owners of the Hugh Porter subdivision to repair and maintain the Greenbrae boardwalk, Lee R. Miller, Greenbrae Improvement Club recording secretary, said yesterday.

Miller would not reveal the amount of the money, saying that the contract is yet to be signed. He said, however, that the club is considering an $11,077 bid to do the repairs from von der Werth Inc., Greenbrae.

Election of officers, which had been planned for Thursday night's meeting, was continued.

Nearly 82 per cent of the items now stocked in frozen food cases were non-existent in 1957.

Legal Group Seeks Stay Of Execution

A stay of execution for Robert L. Massie, convicted killer who insists he wants to die in the gas chamber, was asked yesterday of the California Supreme Court.

A group of lawyers, who last year unsuccessfully challenged the constitutionality of the death penalty, made the request, contending the 27-year-old Massie is insane and should be given a sanity hearing.

Massie is scheduled to die in the San Quentin gas chamber March 12.

Last year, following the blanket stay of all executions by the California Supreme Court, pending arguments on the constitutionality of the death penalty, Massie filed a motion claiming it was his constitutional right to be executed.

Massie, convicted of killing a San Gabriel woman during a 1965 robbery, argued that persistent delays in his execution could be interpreted as cruel punishment.

The petition filed by the group of attorneys maintains Massie is waiving his rights without legal effect because he is insane.

Massie is one of four San Quentin Death Row inmates who have been scheduled to die since the blanket stay of executions was lifted in November after the Supreme Court ruled the death penalty was constitutional.

Pole Collision Hurts Driver

A Fairfax man was injured at 6:50 p.m. Thursday when his car struck a Pacific Gas and Electric Company power pole at 1914 Fourth Street, San Rafael, police reported.

Charles Ernest Hancok, 31, of 26 Redwood Road, Fairfax, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple abrasions and contusions.

His car struck the pole after he slammed on the brakes to avoid hitting another automo-

Wall Street Marches To World News Time

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market kept tune to the mixed news background in heavy trading this week.

North Vietnam kayoed hopes for an early breakthrough at the expanded Vietnam peace conference in Paris by demanding the ouster of South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu's administration as the first step in breaking the deadlock.

Still, investors drew some encouragement from word that the United States and North Vietnam have been meeting secretly outside the formal meetings. The fourth round of the four-cornered talks is scheduled for next Thursday.

Mideast tensions also created uncertainty among traders. But some were cheered by President Nixon's announcements the United States intends to take the initiative in the United Nations efforts to bring calm to that area.

Nixon said he was pursuing every possible avenue to peace in the Middle East because "it is an area that might explode into a major war."

Domestic news, generally viewed as constructive, included rising steel prices, record construction spending in December, increased auto sales in January, primarily the result of the big rise by General Motors; stepped up factory orders in the final month of 1968; a boost in installment credit in the same month, and news the nation's manufacturers enjoyed record corporate profits last year despite the 10 per cent tax surcharge.

The UPI market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a gain of 0.12 to 135.10. Of 1,709 issues traded, there were 810 advances, 780 declines. There were 112 new high set, 52 new lows.

The New York Stock Exchange index mirrored a rise of 26 cents to $58.64 in the average common share price.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index gained 0.52 to 103.53; Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrials advanced 1.80 to 947.85. DJ rails also firmed, but utilities retreated.

Volume swelled to 64,165,150 shares, up from 59,606,988 during the previous week. It also toppped the 47,439,810 shares at a like period a year ago.

Wall Street Marches To World News Time

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market kept tune to the mixed news background in heavy trading this week.

North Vietnam kayoed hopes for an early breakthrough at the expanded Vietnam peace conference in Paris by demanding the ouster of South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu's administration as the first step in breaking the deadlock.

Still, investors drew some encouragement from word that the United States and North Vietnam have been meeting secretly outside the formal meetings. The fourth round of the four-cornered talks is scheduled for next Thursday.

Mideast tensions also created uncertainty among traders. But some were cheered by President Nixon's announcements the United States intends to take the initiative in the United Nations efforts to bring calm to that area.

Nixon said he was pursuing every possible avenue to peace in the Middle East because "it is an area that might explode into a major war."

Domestic news, generally viewed as constructive, included rising steel prices, record construction spending in December, increased auto sales in January, primarily the result of the big rise by General Motors; stepped up factory orders in the final month of 1968; a boost in installment credit in the same month, and news the nation's manufacturers enjoyed record corporate profits last year despite the 10 per cent tax surcharge.

The UPI market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a gain of 0.12 to 135.10. Of 1,709 issues traded, there were 810 advances, 780 declines. There were 112 new high set, 52 new lows.

The New York Stock Exchange index mirrored a rise of 26 cents to $58.64 in the average common share price.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index gained 0.52 to 103.53; Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrials advanced 1.80 to 947.85. DJ rails also firmed, but utilities retreated.

Volume swelled to 64,165,150 shares, up from 59,606,988 during the previous week. It also toppped the 47,439,810 shares at a like period a year ago.

Episcopal Church: Catholic And Protestant?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Ask an Episcopalian whether his church is Catholic or Protestant, and he's likely to give you the baffling answer: "Both."

The Episcopal Church is one of 18 autonomous national churches which comprise a world-wide fellowship known as the Anglican Communion. It is the third oldest and third largest family of Reformation churches (the Lutherans and Presbyterians being first and second).

As the English expression of the reformation, the Anglican Communion is historically a Protestant body. But many Anglicans from the 16th Century until the present have bridled at being called Protestants.

They prefer to think of themselves as members of a reformed Catholic church—one which has retained the ancient Catholic creeds and the true Catholic sacraments, and which has preserved a threefold ministry of bishops, priests, and deacons who can trace their line of ordination back to the Apostles.

The claim of "Apostolic succession" for Anglican clergymen is based on the fact that the Church of England did not acquire a new ministry at the time of its establishment: It continued under the same bishops and priests it had before its break with Rome.

Anglicans contend that the Vatican itself tacitly recognized the validity of Anglican orders when it waited 12 years to excommunicate the clergymen who acknowledged Elizabeth as head of the Church of England. The Anglican attempt to retain what is valid in Catholic tradition while accepting the basic insights of the great Protestant reformers is a typically English solution. It is the English genius for compromise applied to religion. Some people find the result distasteful: They dismiss Anglicanism as being neither Catholic fish nor Protestant fowl. But others agree with the noted Anglican scholar Dr. Chad Walsh:

"If Christendom is ever to be reunited into one great Church, that Church will of necessity be one with sufficient scope and Catholic traditions. I believe the Anglican Communion is a small-scale model of what such a Church can be."

It is an indisputable fact that the Anglican Communion has succeeded for more than four hundred years in holding together in one body "Anglo-Catholics" whose worship is virtually indistinguishable from the Catholic mass; "high churchmen," who emphasize the Catholic heritage; "low churchmen," who lean more toward the Protestant tradition; "evangelicals," who are hard to tell from campmeeting Protestants; and finally most numerous of all — "broad churchmen," who cherish both the Catholic and the Protestant aspects of the Anglican via media, and who welcome the opportunity to serve as a bridge between the divided branches of the Christian family.

The Episcopal Church, like the Presbyterian churches, derived its name from the way it is governed. "Episkopos" is the Greek word for "bishop." Episcopal bishops have no more actual power than have the administrative officers of most Protestant bodies. Their wishes in such matters as the handling of money and the management of church-related institutions are subject to the action of democratically elected bodies representative of the church membership. Also, local congregations retain a large degree of autonomy.

But Episcopalians do not look upon their bishops primarily as administrative officers. They are supposed to be the spiritual shepherds of the flock, charged with preserving sound doctrine and interpreting the teachings of Christ.

Anglicanism came to America with the earliest English settlers. The first Anglican church was established at Jamestown, Va., in 1607 by a chaplain who accompanied Capt. John Smith's party. Before the revolution, Anglicanism was the established state religion of most of the Southern colonies, supported by tax revenues. George Washington, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, and many other founding fathers were Anglicans.

During the Revolution, the Anglican churches suffered from popular resentment against a religious body that recognized George III as its head. When the Revolutionary War began in 1776, the Anglican churches comprised the largest religious body in America. When it ended, they were one of the smallest.

The growth of the Episcopal Church was slow for many years following the Revolution. It continued to hug the Eastern seaboard, and neglected to evangelize the frontier, where other Protestant bodies were making tremendous strides. It acquired a reputation as a church that catered to the carriage trade and had no room for the masses—a reputation it still is trying to live down.

It was not until after World War II that the Episcopal Church finally shook off the lethargy that had earned it the nickname of "God's frozen people." The postwar boom in church membership came along just as Episcopalians were awakening to the fact that Jesus thought of them, too, when He said that the gospel must be preached "to every living creature."

Between 1950 and 1960, the membership of the Episcopal Church almost doubled. Today it is one of the six largest American denominations, with more than 3.3 million members. Among them are people from every race, nationality and economic group—living refutations of the old "class church" label.

If the Episcopal Church still has a special appeal for any one group of Americans, it is for the academic-intellectual professional community. Large numbers of scientists, doctors, lawyers, writers, college professors and the like, are to be found in the pews of Episcopal churches.

One reason is that Episcopal clergymen are notably well educated, and their sermons rarely if ever insult the intelligence of any listener, however, learned he may be.

Episcopalians probably do not drink any more than the members of some Protestant churches that are officially committed to total abstinence; but they are less furtive about it. The Episcopal Church condemns any use of alcohol that leads to drunkenness or impairs a person's ability to discharge his responsibilities, but sees no sin in moderate drinking at an appropriate time and place.

Episcopalians also take a relaxed attitude toward card-playing, dancing, Sunday golf, and other social activities that cause the blood pressure of a strict Calvinist to rise.

This should not be taken as indicating a laissez-faire attitude toward moral issues. No other church except the Roman Catholic Church takes such a dim view of divorce and Episcopalians have been in the front ranks of the fight for racial justice.

To outsiders, the most conspicuous virtue of the Episcopal Church is the beauty of its liturgy. Although many other churches have borrowed liberally from the Book of Common Prayer, its majestic cadences still sound most at home in an Episcopal setting.

Pastors And Chaplains Conference Tuesday

A pastors and chaplains conference will be held for three days beginning Tuesday at the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry.

The annual conference is sponsored by the seminary and the division of chaplaincy of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention in Atlanta, Ga.

Speakers will include W. Morgan Patterson, associate professor of church history at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.; George W. Cummins, division of chaplaincy director of the Home Mission Board, and Col. B. C. Trant, Hamilton Air Force Base chaplain.

Highlighting the convention will be discussions of "Issues in Church State Relations" by Dr. Arthur Insko and Dr. W. A. Carleton, both of the seminary, and Patterson; "Meeting the Present Crisis" by Lowell Sodeman and Richard McKay, assistant directors of the industrial chaplaincy of the Home Mission Board, and Cummins, and "Current Trends in Religious Education" by Dr. Roger Skelton, Geil Davis and J. C. Bradley, all of the seminary staff.

PULPIT GUEST — Rev. Herbert E. Gordon, member of the Presbytery of San Francisco, will speak at tomorrow's 10 a.m. service at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo. His topic will be "God and Space." He is the father of Rev. Roswell C. Gordon, the church's associate minister.

Drive Starts Soon For Church Organ

A campaign to raise $30,000 for a huge new pipe organ for St. Paul's Episcopal Chruch in San Rafael will begin March 30, members of the congregation decided at its annual meeting.

The organ, which will have between 2,500 and 3,000 pipes and will take two years to install, will be made available to serious students and for organ concerts.

Meeting Of Baptist Laymen Is Announced

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—A meeting of Baptist laymen from about a dozen Baptist conventions in North America is scheduled to be held here July 3-6.

Owen Cooper of Yazoo City, Miss., chairman of an ad hoc committee making plans for the meeting, to be called the Baptist Men's Congress on Evangelism and Lay Involvement, expressed hope that as many as 3,500 to 4,000 Baptist laymen and their pastors will attend.

Mercy Project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Baptist World reports that Britain's 300,000 Baptists will be asked to give at least a day's pay in 1969 to help people in underdeveloped countries.

Musical To Benefit Church In Marin City

The Church of All Faiths of Corte Madera, an affiliate of the American Baptist Convention, will present "a night of music" tomorrow at 8 p.m. as a benefit to the building fund of the Village Baptist Church of Marin City.

Several years ago it was the Village Baptist Church which offered its help to the Corte Madera church in completing its new building at 5461 Paradise Drive.

"It is our turn now to help the Village Baptist Church in its building program through a special evening offering," said Rev. Joseph L. Hughes, pastor of the Corte Madera church.

Special music will be presented by Alma Wells, a well-knowned Marin lyric soprano; the Golden Gaters, a barbershop quartet; Charles Allen, baritone from San Francisco; Lee Faulkner and Donald E. Carroll Sr., both of the church.

Priest Realizes $25,000 In Church-Saving Auction

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest has raised about $25,000 through an auction to keep his slum area parish alive.

Rev. William Donohue organized the two-day auction last weekend to raise part of the $50,000 needed to keep Sacred Heart Church and School open for another year.

Sacred Heart is in a Negro neighborhood. Its parishioners are poor and most of the 220 pupils in the school are non-Catholic.

The Diocese of Buffalo told Father Donohue that Sacred Heart had become too great a drain on the diocese and would be closed and merged with another parish unless it could raise $50,000 a year in self-help funds.

The 30-year-old priest, known to his congregation as "Father Bill," contacted 200 people and asked them to donate their time or goods to the auction to raise the money.

Among those assisting was Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y. He climbed up on a stuffed pink elephant and auctioned it for $100.

Text Selected For Training

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—The 1969 annual Assemblies of God Sunday School training program is under way, with more than 50,000 persons expected to participate during the year.

Each year a new training text is added to the curriculum for Sunday School teachers and officers in the Assemblies of God. The 1969 text, titled "Teaching for Christian Maturity," was written by Dr. George M. Flattery, president of the denomination's International Correspondence Institute.

Dr. John J. Canoles To Leave Church Post

Dr. John J. Canoles, who has been the acting pastor of the Novato Presbyterian Church since Rev. C. M. Croughan resigned Aug. 1, last Sunday announced his resignation as assistant pastor.

He will remain at the church, however, until April 1, according to Roger Smith, an elder of the church who made the announcement.

Dr. Canoles was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael from 1928 to 1959. Then he was assistant pastor at the Portalhurst Prebyterian Church in San Francisco for two years. He became affiliated with the Novato church in 1962.

Dr. and Mrs. Canoles will move to The Sequoias, a Presbyterian retirement home in Portola Valley later this spring.

Member Estimate

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Preliminary estimates place membership in the Southern Baptist Convention at the end of 1968 at 11.3 million, on the basis of data received from 25,369 of the approximately 34,000 churches in the denomination. This would be an increase of 180,000 over the 1967 membership.

Dr. Wilkins To Preach At Service

Dr. John R. Wilkins, of Petaluma, former director of missionary education of the Methodist Board of Missions, will preach at the 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Methodist Church of Mill Valley.

Dr. Wilkins, a retired Methodist minister, served in the national post for six years, until his retirement in 1964.

Prior to that Dr. Wilkins served as executive secretary of the missions board of the California-Nevada Conference and superintendent of two districts — San Jose and Redwood-Shasta.

Named Chairman

Dr. Harold K. Graves, president of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Strawberry, has been named chairman of the Inter-Agency Council of the Southern Baptist Convention of Nashville, Tenn.

HEALING FOR HUMAN NEED

Episcopal Church: Catholic And Protestant?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Ask an Episcopalian whether his church is Catholic or Protestant, and he's likely to give you the baffling answer: "Both."

The Episcopal Church is one of 18 autonomous national churches which comprise a world-wide fellowship known as the Anglican Communion. It is the third oldest and third largest family of Reformation churches (the Lutherans and Presbyterians being first and second).

As the English expression of the reformation, the Anglican Communion is historically a Protestant body. But many Anglicans from the 16th Century until the present have bridled at being called Protestants.

They prefer to think of themselves as members of a reformed Catholic church—one which has retained the ancient Catholic creeds and the true Catholic sacraments, and which has preserved a threefold ministry of bishops, priests, and deacons who can trace their line of ordination back to the Apostles.

The claim of "Apostolic succession" for Anglican clergymen is based on the fact that the Church of England did not acquire a new ministry at the time of its establishment: It continued under the same bishops and priests it had before its break with Rome.

Anglicans contend that the Vatican itself tacitly recognized the validity of Anglican orders when it waited 12 years to excommunicate the clergymen who acknowledged Elizabeth as head of the Church of England. The Anglican attempt to retain what is valid in Catholic tradition while accepting the basic insights of the great Protestant reformers is a typically English solution. It is the English genius for compromise applied to religion. Some people find the result distasteful: They dismiss Anglicanism as being neither Catholic fish nor Protestant fowl. But others agree with the noted Anglican scholar Dr. Chad Walsh:

"If Christendom is ever to be reunited into one great Church, that Church will of necessity be one with sufficient scope and Catholic traditions. I believe the Anglican Communion is a small-scale model of what such a Church can be."

It is an indisputable fact that the Anglican Communion has succeeded for more than four hundred years in holding together in one body "Anglo-Catholics" whose worship is virtually indistinguishable from the Catholic mass; "high churchmen," who emphasize the Catholic heritage; "low churchmen," who lean more toward the Protestant tradition; "evangelicals," who are hard to tell from campmeeting Protestants; and finally most numerous of all — "broad churchmen," who cherish both the Catholic and the Protestant aspects of the Anglican via media, and who welcome the opportunity to serve as a bridge between the divided branches of the Christian family.

The Episcopal Church, like the Presbyterian churches, derived its name from the way it is governed. "Episkopos" is the Greek word for "bishop." Episcopal bishops have no more actual power than have the administrative officers of most Protestant bodies. Their wishes in such matters as the handling of money and the management of church-related institutions are subject to the action of democratically elected bodies representative of the church membership. Also, local congregations retain a large degree of autonomy.

But Episcopalians do not look upon their bishops primarily as administrative officers. They are supposed to be the spiritual shepherds of the flock, charged with preserving sound doctrine and interpreting the teachings of Christ.

Anglicanism came to America with the earliest English settlers. The first Anglican church was established at Jamestown, Va., in 1607 by a chaplain who accompanied Capt. John Smith's party. Before the revolution, Anglicanism was the established state religion of most of the Southern colonies, supported by tax revenues. George Washington, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, and many other founding fathers were Anglicans.

During the Revolution, the Anglican churches suffered from popular resentment against a religious body that recognized George III as its head. When the Revolutionary War began in 1776, the Anglican churches comprised the largest religious body in America. When it ended, they were one of the smallest.

The growth of the Episcopal Church was slow for many years following the Revolution. It continued to hug the Eastern seaboard, and neglected to evangelize the frontier, where other Protestant bodies were making tremendous strides. It acquired a reputation as a church that catered to the carriage trade and had no room for the masses—a reputation it still is trying to live down.

It was not until after World War II that the Episcopal Church finally shook off the lethargy that had earned it the nickname of "God's frozen people." The postwar boom in church membership came along just as Episcopalians were awakening to the fact that Jesus thought of them, too, when He said that the gospel must be preached "to every living creature."

Between 1950 and 1960, the membership of the Episcopal Church almost doubled. Today it is one of the six largest American denominations, with more than 3.3 million members. Among them are people from every race, nationality and economic group—living refutations of the old "class church" label.

If the Episcopal Church still has a special appeal for any one group of Americans, it is for the academic-intellectual professional community. Large numbers of scientists, doctors, lawyers, writers, college professors and the like, are to be found in the pews of Episcopal churches.

One reason is that Episcopal clergymen are notably well educated, and their sermons rarely if ever insult the intelligence of any listener, however, learned he may be.

Episcopalians probably do not drink any more than the members of some Protestant churches that are officially committed to total abstinence; but they are less furtive about it. The Episcopal Church condemns any use of alcohol that leads to drunkenness or impairs a person's ability to discharge his responsibilities, but sees no sin in moderate drinking at an appropriate time and place.

Episcopalians also take a relaxed attitude toward card-playing, dancing, Sunday golf, and other social activities that cause the blood pressure of a strict Calvinist to rise.

This should not be taken as indicating a laissez-faire attitude toward moral issues. No other church except the Roman Catholic Church takes such a dim view of divorce and Episcopalians have been in the front ranks of the fight for racial justice.

To outsiders, the most conspicuous virtue of the Episcopal Church is the beauty of its liturgy. Although many other churches have borrowed liberally from the Book of Common Prayer, its majestic cadences still sound most at home in an Episcopal setting.

Pastors And Chaplains Conference Tuesday

A pastors and chaplains conference will be held for three days beginning Tuesday at the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry.

The annual conference is sponsored by the seminary and the division of chaplaincy of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention in Atlanta, Ga.

Speakers will include W. Morgan Patterson, associate professor of church history at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.; George W. Cummins, division of chaplaincy director of the Home Mission Board, and Col. B. C. Trant, Hamilton Air Force Base chaplain.

Highlighting the convention will be discussions of "Issues in Church State Relations" by Dr. Arthur Insko and Dr. W. A. Carleton, both of the seminary, and Patterson; "Meeting the Present Crisis" by Lowell Sodeman and Richard McKay, assistant directors of the industrial chaplaincy of the Home Mission Board, and Cummins, and "Current Trends in Religious Education" by Dr. Roger Skelton, Geil Davis and J. C. Bradley, all of the seminary staff.

PULPIT GUEST — Rev. Herbert E. Gordon, member of the Presbytery of San Francisco, will speak at tomorrow's 10 a.m. service at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo. His topic will be "God and Space." He is the father of Rev. Roswell C. Gordon, the church's associate minister.

Meeting Of Baptist Laymen Is Announced

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—A meeting of Baptist laymen from about a dozen Baptist conventions in North America is scheduled to be held here July 3-6.

Owen Cooper of Yazoo City, Miss., chairman of an ad hoc committee making plans for the meeting, to be called the Baptist Men's Congress on Evangelism and Lay Involvement, expressed hope that as many as 3,500 to 4,000 Baptist laymen and their pastors will attend.

Drive Starts Soon For Church Organ

A campaign to raise $30,000 for a huge new pipe organ for St. Paul's Episcopal Chruch in San Rafael will begin March 30, members of the congregation decided at its annual meeting.

The organ, which will have between 2,500 and 3,000 pipes and will take two years to install, will be made available to serious students and for organ concerts.

Mercy Project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Baptist World reports that Britain's 300,000 Baptists will be asked to give at least a day's pay in 1969 to help people in underdeveloped countries.

Musical To Benefit Church In Marin City

The Church of All Faiths of Corte Madera, an affiliate of the American Baptist Convention, will present "a night of music" tomorrow at 8 p.m. as a benefit to the building fund of the Village Baptist Church of Marin City.

Several years ago it was the Village Baptist Church which offered its help to the Corte Madera church in completing its new building at 5461 Paradise Drive.

"It is our turn now to help the Village Baptist Church in its building program through a special evening offering," said Rev. Joseph L. Hughes, pastor of the Corte Madera church.

Special music will be presented by Alma Wells, a well-known Marin lyric soprano; the Golden Gaters, a barbershop quartet; Charles Allen, baritone from San Francisco; Lee Faulkner and Donald E. Carroll Sr., both of the church.

Priest Realizes $25,000 In Church-Saving Auction

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest has raised about $25,000 through an auction to keep his slum area parish alive.

Rev. William Donohue organized the two-day auction last weekend to raise part of the $50,000 needed to keep Sacred Heart Church and School open for another year.

Sacred Heart is in a Negro neighborhood. Its parishioners are poor and most of the 220 pupils in the school are non-Catholic.

The Diocese of Buffalo told Father Donohue that Sacred Heart had become too great a drain on the diocese and would be closed and merged with another parish unless it could raise $50,000 a year in self-help funds.

The 30-year-old priest, known to his congregation as "Father Bill," contacted 200 people and asked them to donate their time or goods to the auction to raise the money.

Among those assisting was Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y. He climbed up on a stuffed pink elephant and auctioned it for $100.

Text Selected For Training

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—The 1969 annual Assemblies of God Sunday School training program is under way, with more than 50,000 persons expected to participate during the year.

Each year a new training text is added to the curriculum for Sunday School teachers and officers in the Assemblies of God. The 1969 text, titled "Teaching for Christian Maturity," was written by Dr. George M. Flattery, president of the denomination's International Correspondence Institute.

Dr. John J. Canoles To Leave Church Post

Dr. John J. Canoles, who has been the acting pastor of the Novato Presbyterian Church since Rev. C. M. Croughan resigned Aug. 1, last Sunday announced his resignation as assistant pastor.

He will remain at the church, however, until April 1, according to Roger Smith, an elder of the church who made the announcement.

Dr. Canoles was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael from 1928 to 1959. Then he was assistant pastor at the Portalhurst Prebyterian Church in San Francisco for two years. He became affiliated with the Novato church in 1962.

Dr. and Mrs. Canoles will move to The Sequoias, a Presbyterian retirement home in Portola Valley later this spring.

Member Estimate

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Preliminary estimates place membership in the Southern Baptist Convention at the end of 1968 at 11.3 million, on the basis of data received from 25,369 of the approximately 34,000 churches in the denomination. This would be an increase of 180,000 over the 1967 membership.

Dr. Wilkins To Preach At Service

Dr. John R. Wilkins, of Petaluma, former director of missionary education of the Methodist Board of Missions, will preach at the 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Methodist Church of Mill Valley.

Dr. Wilkins, a retired Methodist minister, served in the national post for six years, until his retirement in 1964.

Prior to that Dr. Wilkins served as executive secretary of the missions board of the California-Nevada Conference and superintendent of two districts — San Jose and Redwood-Shasta.

Named Chairman

Redwood Breezes; Marin Catholic Stuns Tam

As usual, there were four winners and four losers last night as the Marin County Athletic League opened the second half of its round-robin basketball schedule, but of the former, Redwood High School of Larkspur and Marin Catholic of Kentfield had extra reason for elation.

The league-leading Giants from Redwood looked better than ever as they avenged their only MCAL loss by routing San Rafael High 82-54, and the Wildcats gained their second win of a trying season in exciting fashion, upsetting Tamalpais of Mill Valley 54-53 in the last seven seconds.

In other games, second-place Novato High ran over Drake of San Anselmo 80-64 and Terra Linda High breezed past winless San Marin of Novato, 67-47.

The Redwood-San Rafael clash lost some luster when it was learned that Bulldog center Bill Sleezer had undergone an appendectomy the night before and would not play, but his teammates kept pace with the homecourt Giants for a quarter before the dam broke. With their fast break in high gear, the hosts ran of 50 points in the second and third quarters to end the argument.

Jerry Piro was superb for Redwood, grabbing 10 rebounds to share team leadership with Jim Peters and notching his season high of 27 points. While both of Redwood's 6-foot-, 6-inch postmen, sophomore Bill Challender and newly-eligible transfer Pete Webb, fouled out in the last period, they were not missed, as the issue was no longer in doubt.

Bruce Nave scored 20 points for San Rafael, which had beaten the Giants 56-55 a month earlier.

Sports

Tam and Marin Catholic both shot poorly early in their contest, but settled down to a basket-trading thriller in the last period. The Indians had a four-point lead with 17 seconds to go when Marin's Mike Parnow threw in a jumper, closing the deficit to 53-52. Whereupon Tam was fouled, missed the free shot, the 'Cats got the rebound, ran a fast break, and Mike Murray's layup with seven seconds left did the job.

Murray's 12 points and Steve Telender's 13 led Marin Catholic, while Bill Secor had 17 for Tam.

Ed Herrnberger and Steve McNally produced 25 points apiece as the Novato Hornets kept a game behind Redwood by outrunning Drake 80-64.

Novato got off to a quick 19-14 lead after a quarter and was never headed, despite 21 markers by Clark Jamison of the Pirates. Mark Silverman had 12 and Bill McClain and Brian Gaddy had nine each for Drake, while Chris Brush's nine followed the heavy artillery for Novato.

The Hornets, now 6-2 to Redwood's 7-1, thus stayed on the Giants' necks, a state of affairs that might last until the last game of the season, when Redwood treks to Novato.

Terra Linda High's Trojans remained in a tie for third in the MCAL behind Redwood and Novato by beating neophyte San Marin 67-47 at Terra Linda.

League-leading scorer Pat Purcell canned 23 points for Terra Linda, followed by Mike Peden's 16 and Mike Timmel's 10. Gary Howard topped San Marin as usual, with 21 points.

Fellas, A Joke's A Joke, But Golly . .

(News note: "His selection as commissioner of baseball not only surprised the sports world but the new commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, himself, who found out about it only a short time before the announcement.")

The scene is the front porch of Murchison Figbert, a certified public accountant, on a shady street in Peoria. It is early morning as a group of men in striped trousers, led by a portly old party with hexagonal glasses, a long cigar and a holder, and ashes on his protruding vest, pushes the doorbell. Murchison, still in his pajamas, his hair in his eyes and shaving cream around his ears, gropes to answer the door. The portly old man speaks, hand outthrust:

Portly: "Congratulations, Murchison, I am Walter O'Portly and you have just been selected commissioner of baseball!"

Murchison (suspicious): "Wait a minute! Whatever it is you're selling, I don't want any. Try next door."

O'Portly (hastily): "We already have. There's no one home there or HE would have been commissioner. No, Murchison, we're not selling anything. We're offering you a job at $100,000 a year and all the free martinis you can drink and still say 'No comment' coherently."

Need A Tennis Commissioner?

Murchison (dumbfounded): "But I don't know anything about baseball! I never even played it. Tennis is my game. Can't you make me commissioner of tennis?"

O'Portly: "Tut, tut, Murchison. All you have to know is the infield fly rule. McClurg, explain the infield fly rule to the commissioner. You don't? Well, never mind, Murchison. We'll hire somebody and put him in charge of the infield fly rule. You just say 'It's a league matter,' if it comes up."

Murchison (banging himself on the side of the head to be sure he is hearing right): "Fellows, a joke's a joke, but I'll be late for the office!"

O'Portly (smoothly): "No, no, Murchison. We have a limousine ready and your private plane to fly you to your new offices in the Empire State Building. We've rented an entire floor and we already have a list of prepared statements for you to make in any emergency. And a portable phone with a direct line to me at any time of the day or night. You may turn it off at night, but first you say, 'Good Night, Walter,' and give your longitude and latitude and estimated duration of sleep."

Complicated Ventriloquism Act

Murchison: "But I'm only a CPA! The press will crucify me. They'll call me 'Baseball's hidden debit' or 'The double bookkeeping,' or they say I'm going to change the name of the Red Sox to the Red Inks. Shouldn't you at least get a guy who has SEEN a game?"

O'Portly: "My boy, we know what we are doing. You see, what we need from you is a kind of complicated ventriloquism act. All you have to do is make sure they don't see my mouth move when YOU answer a question."

Murchison (desperate): "Shouldn't you get Stan Musial? Yogi Berra? Babe Ruth?"

O'Portly (desperate now, too): "Listen, Murchison, you're the 50,000th guy we've offered this to. I mean, consider we started at the Hudson River. My finger is sore from ringing doorbells. We stuck a pin in phone books from Hoboken to Harrisburg. We called phone numbers at random. We've advertised in the personal columns. We've wired every 'John Smith' in the country. We thought we lined up a guy in Tampa who was perfect for the commissioner. He's been in a coma for 11 years. But it turned out he'd once heard a game on the radio."

Gen. Watzisname Got Cobwebs

Murchison: "What happened to the commissioner you had—Gen. Watzisname?"

O'Portly (thoughtfully): "He got cobwebs, it got to be too much trouble to get the spiders out and chase the birds off his shoulders everytime we needed him at a World Series game."

Murchison (excited): "Wait a minute! I think I've got the man for you! A buddy of mine lives right down the street here and is an animal trainer . . ."

O'Portly (frowning): "An animal trainer! Sounds a bit too spunky and lively for what we had in mind."

Murchison (shouting): "Not him, dummy! His trained seal! His trained seal would be absolutely perfect for the commissioner of baseball! You can get him for 100,000 herrings in a bucket of water and he'll not only run the game for you but he'll play "Stars and Stripes Forever" for you on a bunch of bicycle horns before every game!"

Girl Jockey Wins Praise After Her Historic Ride

MIAMI (AP) — One Hialeah rail bird told another: "From now on when the morning line says 'No Boy' on a horse, it means Diane Crump is riding."

Not quite, it still means no jockey. But the tack rooms and paddocks of the major pari-mutuel thoroughbred tracks in America no longer are a man's world.

Diane Crump, 20, a cute blonde exercise girl who forgets things when she gets excited—and probably was the only jockey blushing while saddling up—pushed a slow horse for a mile and one-eighth yesterday, placing 10th in the 12-horse First Family Purse.

But even most male jockeys praised her ride and it was a first for any woman in this country.

"I did okay for the first time. Everything was just as I expected," Diane said later, her red and white silks and pink face heavily splattered with track mud.

Another girl jockey, Annbeth Reineit, 20, of Oslo, Norway, who has ridden only against girls on European tracks, watched Diane climb aboard the skittish Bridle 'n Bit owned by Tom Calumet of Chicago.

DIANE CRUMP
Barrier breaker

"I don't believe women can ride against professional jockeys. I don't believe she can be that good," Miss Reineit said.

But after the race the blonde Norwegian shook her head and her firm opposition: "She rode very well. She didn't do anything wrong. The horse was just no good."

Unknown to most of the crowd of 15,791, Diane began and ended by forgetting important details. In the starting gate she was listening to jockey Craig Perret give tips on how to handle Bridle 'n Bit when he interrupted to say, "Diane, you'd better put your goggles down." She had forgotten.

Riding past Rooney's Shield in the winner's circle, Diane apparently was rattled by cheers for her from the crowd, who apparently backed her in spirit although not at the tote windows. She dismounted and walked away without unsaddling her 50-1 horse for the weigh-in.

SCHEDULED AGAIN

Before she got the mud washed off, the Woodmount, Conn., girl who began riding when her family moved to Oldsmar, Fla., six years ago, was scheduled to go to the post here again next Tuesday—once again aboard Bridle 'n Bit.

Other girls have been assigned horses at major tracks—Penny Ann Early at Churchill Downs and Barbara Jo Rubin at Tropical, but in both cases jockey boycotts stymied the girls. At Tropical, 11 paid $100 fines for their action.

Several jockeys, including Hialeah leader Angel Cordero Jr., took themselves off mounts in the seventh race when Diane was entered. But seven others agreed to replace them and a full field of 12 went to the post.

Veteran jockey Manuel Ycaza—unsaddled by a five-day suspension—gave this opinion of Diane's ride: "She broke well, kept her horse out of trouble and drove when she should have. I wouldn't know what somebody else could have done with the horse."

Marin Tars Host DeAnza In Key Contest Tonight

More than a two-game winning streak will be on the line tonight in Kentfield when the College of Marin Tars host DeAnza College of Cupertino in a key Camino Norte Conference basketball test at 8 o'clock.

DeAnza wants to: Come back from its Wednesday loss to West Valley College in Campbell, a setback that seriously hampered the Dons' chances of overtaking unbeaten Contra Costa (20-3, eighth ranked in the state) in the CNC.

Marin's Tars want to: Prove they should have won their previous meeting, a 75-74 DeAnza win that still smarts, keep their winning string intact, and take over the role of pretender to Contra Costa's crown.

Marin (9-11) and 18th-rated DeAnza (15-7) are superficially alike, according to Tar coach Cal Riemcke. "We both like to take it easy and work our patterns, use muscle under the boards and play some defense," he said. Riemcke added his club matches up well with the Dons, but falls shy an inch or so in height at a couple of positions.

Center Cary Mitchell and forward John Seraceno, both 6 feet, 6 inches, are the frontline big men and leading scorers for DeAnza. Seraceno has averaged 14.8 points per game, and Mitchell 12.7, while guard Jim Martin runs the offense. John Dybvig adds outside shooting to the Don attack.

Riemcke will counter with the same starting five as has opened in recent weeks — Andre Horn and Daryl Ravani at guards, Tom Seidenberg and Ches Bornia at forwards, and Pat Schafer at center. Bob Tait and Gary Hanson, both impressive of late, will likely see action as subs.

Due to a conflicting Stanford game, the Marin contest will not be televised on Channel 38 as had been earlier announced.

Trevino In Good Position

PALM SPRINGS (UPI) — Rod Funseth has a cold and tough La Quinta to worry about today while Lee Trevino, the imperturable Texan, has it virtually made by playing the easier Indian Wells course in the fourth round of the $100,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament.

Funseth, the 35-year-old pro from San Jose, shot a one over 71 in the third round yesterday at Tamarisk and Trevino, the U. S. Open champ now playing his best golf of the year, matched it with a 71 at La Quinta.

That put Funseth at 10 under par 206 with two rounds to go in the 90-hole Hope Classic and Trevino at nine under 207.

La Quinta generally is regarded as the toughest course in the Hope this year and Indian Wells the easiest. La Quinta is a long and narrow layout while Indian Wells is shorter, although it, too, is fairly narrow.

The Hope is anything but a two-horse race for the top prize of $20,000.

TRAIL TREVINO

Two strokes behind Trevino with seven under par totals of 209 are Frank Beard, Art Wall, Gene Littler and Orville Moody, while at 210 are Bob Charles and Billy Casper.

Moody, from Killeen, Texas, got into the chase with the best competitive round of his career—a four under 68 at La Quinta in the third round.

Wall long as been one of the top pros around but a chronic back condition has slowed him down a number of times. Thus far, his back has been holding up as reflected by his sub-par rounds of 69-69-71.

Casper, who struggled in both the Crosby and Andy Williams tournaments, seems to have regained his putting eye. If that's so, then he is the man to

U.S. Skaters Shoot For Sweep Tonight

OAKLAND (AP) — With two titles tucked away—by tiny Janet Lynn in ladies' singles and Ronald and Cindy Kauffman in pairs—the United States tries for a sweep over Canada tonight in the North American Figure Skating Championships.

Tim Wood of Detroit takes a 770-point bulge over Jay Humphrey of Vancouver, B.C., into the men's free skating. Judy Schomeyer of Indianapolis and James Sladky of Rochester, N.Y., try to hold their 4.4-point lead over Donna Taylor and Bruce Lennie of Toronto in free dance.

Ronald Kauffman, 22, and Cindy, 20, received a standing ovation from the crowd of 8,014 after their clockwork performance last night.

The four-time U.S. pairs champions from Seattle received 5.9 points out of a possible 6.0 from two of the seven judges for technical merit and 5.9 from three of the judges for artistic expression.

RUGGED RONALD

With the rugged 6-foot-3 Ronald twirling Cindy and her flashing skates over his head, the brother-sister team compiled 325 points for two nights of performances, compared with 309.6 for JoJo Starbuck and Kenneth Shelley of Los Angeles.

The Canadian champions, Anna Forder and Richard Stephens of Fort Perry, Ont., finished fifth at 289.1 while the No. 2 Canadian couple, Mary Petrie and Robert McAvoy of Toronto, took third at 285.4.

"It was our highest point total ever," Cindy Kauffman said. Ronald, stationed in the Army at Ft. Carson, Colo., hopes to get his pilot's license. "I'd rather skate than fly but I've got to

Redwood Breezes; Marin Catholic Stuns Tam

As usual, there were four winners and four losers last night as the Marin County Athletic League opened the second half of its round-robin basketball schedule, but of the former, Redwood High School of Larkspur and Marin Catholic of Kentfield had extra reason for elation.

The league-leading Giants from Redwood looked better than ever as they avenged their only MCAL loss by routing San Rafael High 82-54, and the Wildcats gained their second win of a trying season in exciting fashion, upsetting Tamalpais of Mill Valley 54-53 in the last seven seconds.

In other games, second-place Novato High ran over Drake of San Anselmo 80-64 and Terra Linda High breezed past winless San Marin of Novato, 67-47.

The Redwood-San Rafael clash lost some luster when it was learned that Bulldog center Bill Sleezer had undergone an appendectomy the night before and would not play, but his teammates kept pace with the homecourt Giants for a quarter before the dam broke. With their fast break in high gear, the hosts ran of 50 points in the second and third quarters to end the argument.

Jerry Piro was superb for Redwood, grabbing 10 rebounds to share team leadership with Jim Peters and notching his season high of 27 points. While both of Redwood's 6-foot-, 6-inch postmen, sophomore Bill Challender and newly-eligible transfer Pete Webb, fouled out in the last period, they were not missed, as the issue was no longer in doubt.

Bruce Nave scored 20 points for San Rafael, which had beaten the Giants 56-55 a month earlier.

Tam and Marin Catholic both shot poorly early in their contest, but settled down to a basket-trading thriller in the last period. The Indians had a four-point lead with 17 seconds to go when Marin's Mike Parnow threw in a jumper, closing the deficit to 53-52. Whereupon Tam was fouled, missed the free shot, the 'Cats got the rebound, ran a fast break, and Mike Murray's layup with seven seconds left did the job.

Murray's 12 points and Steve Telender's 13 led Marin Catholic, while Bill Secor had 17 for Tam.

Ed Herrnberger and Steve McNally produced 25 points apiece as the Novato Hornets kept a game behind Redwood by outrunning Drake 80-64.

Novato got off to a quick 19-14 lead after a quarter and was never headed, despite 21 markers by Clark Jamison of the Pirates. Mark Silverman had 12 and Bill McClain and Brian Gaddy had nine each for Drake, while Chris Brush's nine followed the heavy artillery for Novato.

The Hornets, now 6-2 to Redwood's 7-1, thus stayed on the Giants' necks, a state of affairs that might last until the last game of the season, when Redwood treks to Novato.

Terra Linda High's Trojans remained in a tie for third in the MCAL behind Redwood and Novato by beating neophyte San Marin 67-47 at Terra Linda.

League-leading scorer Pat Purcell canned 23 points for Terra Linda, followed by Mike Peden's 16 and Mike Timmel's 10. Gary Howard topped San Marin as usual, with 21 points.

Fellas, A Joke's A Joke, But Golly . .

(News note: "His selection as commissioner of baseball not only surprised the sports world but the new commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, himself, who found out about it only a short time before the announcement.")

The scene is the front porch of Murchison Figbert, a certified public accountant, on a shady street in Peoria. It is early morning as a group of men in striped trousers, led by a portly old party with hexagonal glasses, a long cigar and a holder, and ashes on his protruding vest, pushes the doorbell. Murchison, still in his pajamas, his hair in his eyes and shaving cream around his ears, gropes to answer the door. The portly old man speaks, hand outthrust:

Portly: "Congratulations, Murchison, I am Walter O'Portly and you have just been selected commissioner of baseball!"

Murchison (suspicious): "Wait a minute! Whatever it is you're selling, I don't want any. Try next door."

O'Portly (hastily): "We already have. There's no one home there or HE would have been commissioner. No, Murchison, we're not selling anything. We're offering you a job at $100,000 a year and all the free martinis you can drink and still say 'No comment' coherently."

Need A Tennis Commissioner?

Murchison (dumbfounded): "But I don't know anything about baseball! I never even played it. Tennis is my game. Can't you make me commissioner of tennis?"

O'Portly: "Tut, tut, Murchison. All you have to know is the infield fly rule. McClurg, explain the infield fly rule to the commissioner. You don't? Well, never mind, Murchison. We'll hire somebody and put him in charge of the infield fly rule. You just say 'It's a league matter,' if it comes up."

Murchison (banging himself on the side of the head to be sure he is hearing right): "Fellows, a joke's a joke, but I'll be late for the office!"

O'Portly (smoothly): "No, no, Murchison. We have a limousine ready and your private plane to fly you to your new offices in the Empire State Building. We've rented an entire floor and we already have a list of prepared statements for you to make in any emergency. And a portable phone with a direct line to me at any time of the day or night. You may turn it off at night, but first you say, 'Good Night, Walter,' and give your longitude and latitude and estimated duration of sleep."

Complicated Ventriloquism Act

Murchison: "But I'm only a CPA! The press will crucify me. They'll call me 'Baseball's hidden debit' or 'The double bookkeeping,' or they say I'm going to change the name of the Red Sox to the Red Inks. Shouldn't you at least get a guy who has SEEN a game?"

O'Portly: "My boy, we know what we are doing. You see, what we need from you is a kind of complicated ventriloquism act. All you have to do is make sure they don't see my mouth move when YOU answer a question."

Murchison (desperate): "Shouldn't you get Stan Musial? Yogi Berra? Babe Ruth?"

O'Portly (desperate now, too): "Listen, Murchison, you're the 50,000th guy we've offered this to. I mean, consider we started at the Hudson River. My finger is sore from ringing doorbells. We stuck a pin in phone books from Hoboken to Harrisburg. We called phone numbers at random. We've advertised in the personal columns. We've wired every 'John Smith' in the country. We thought we lined up a guy in Tampa who was perfect for the commissioner. He's been in a coma for 11 years. But it turned out he'd once heard a game on the radio."

Gen. Watzisname Got Cobwebs

Murchison: "What happened to the commissioner you had—Gen. Watzisname?"

O'Portly (thoughtfully): "He got cobwebs, it got to be too much trouble to get the spiders out and chase the birds off his shoulders everytime we needed him at a World Series game."

Murchison (excited): "Wait a minute! I think I've got the man for you! A buddy of mine lives right down the street here and is an animal trainer . . ."

O'Portly (frowning): "An animal trainer! Sounds a bit too spunky and lively for what we had in mind."

Murchison (shouting): "Not him, dummy! His trained seal! His trained seal would be absolutely perfect for the commissioner of baseball! You can get him for 100,000 herrings in a bucket of water and he'll not only run the game for you but he'll play "Stars and Stripes Forever" for you on a bunch of bicycle horns before every game!"

Girl Jockey Wins Praise After Her Historic Ride

MIAMI (AP) — One Hialeah rail bird told another: "From now on when the morning line says 'No Boy' on a horse, it means Diane Crump is riding."

Not quite, it still means no jockey. But the tack rooms and paddocks of the major pari-mutuel thoroughbred tracks in America no longer are a man's world.

Diane Crump, 20, a cute blonde exercise girl who forgets things when she gets excited—and probably was the only jockey blushing while saddling up—pushed a slow horse for a mile and one-eighth yesterday, placing 10th in the 12-horse First Family Purse.

But even most male jockeys praised her ride and it was a first for any woman in this country.

"I did okay for the first time. Everything was just as I expected," Diane said later, her red and white silks and pink face heavily splattered with track mud.

Another girl jockey, Annbeth Reineit, 20, of Oslo, Norway, who has ridden only against girls on European tracks, watched Diane climb aboard the skittish Bridle 'n Bit owned by Tom Calumet of Chicago.

"I don't believe women can ride against professional jockeys. I don't believe she can be that good," Miss Reineit said.

But after the race the blonde Norwegian shook her head and her firm opposition: "She rode very well. She didn't do anything wrong. The horse was just no good."

Unknown to most of the crowd of 15,791, Diane began and ended by forgetting important details. In the starting gate she was listening to jockey Craig Perret give tips on how to handle Bridle 'n Bit when he interrupted to say, "Diane, you'd better put your goggles down." She had forgotten.

Riding past Rooney's Shield in the winner's circle, Diane apparently was rattled by cheers for her from the crowd, who apparently backed her in spirit although not at the tote windows. She dismounted and walked away without unsaddling her 50-1 horse for the weigh-in.

SCHEDULED AGAIN

Before she got the mud washed off, the Woodmount, Conn., girl who began riding when her family moved to Oldsmar, Fla., six years ago, was scheduled to go to the post here again next Tuesday—once again aboard Bridle 'n Bit.

Other girls have been assigned horses at major tracks—Penny Ann Early at Churchill Downs and Barbara Jo Rubin at Tropical, but in both cases jockey boycotts stymied the girls. At Tropical, 11 paid $100 fines for their action.

Several jockeys, including Hialeah leader Angel Cordero Jr., took themselves off mounts in the seventh race when Diane was entered. But seven others agreed to replace them and a full field of 12 went to the post.

Veteran jockey Manuel Ycaza—unsaddled by a five-day suspension—gave this opinion of Diane's ride: "She broke well, kept her horse out of trouble and drove when she should have. I wouldn't know what somebody else could have done with the horse."

Lew Sparks UCLA Charge; Cal Romps, Stanford Loses

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA basketball Coach John Wooden says he never expected to be behind at halftime but that's just where the nation's top - ranked college team was against a determined group of Washington Huskies.

But the Bruins survived and did it with Lew Alcindor playing defense and acting like a guard.

The Bruins wound up last night with a thrilling 62 - 51 triumph in a Pacific - 8 game, one of four played.

In other Pac-8 games, Washington State edged Southern Cal 72 - 70 in overtime, California crushed Oregon State 69 - 57 and Oregon tripped Stanford 74-72.

UCLA was down 33-29 at halftime against the Huskies. It was the first time in the short history of Pauley Pavilion that UCLA had trailed at intermission. But that didn't last long.

UCLA's fast break got the first five points after halftime for a short lead and midway through the half, Alcindor exploded defensively.

The 7-foot-1½ center stole a pass, dribbled the length of the court and passed off to teammate Lynn Shackelford for an easy basket.

ANOTHER STEAL

Seconds later, Alcindor duplicated the feat, but this time went all the way in for a solo basket and UCLA suddenly had a 48-43 lead.

The WSU-USC game was one of missed opportunities.

The Cougars' Dennis Hogg missed a shot at the end of regulation that might have won the game. The score was tied 67-67.

Both teams made 26 field goals but the Cougars hit on 20 of 29 foul shots for the victory. USC had 33 attempts but could hit on only 18.

Cal's 6-10 center, Bob Presley, concentrated on defense and held 7-foot Vic Bartolome to just seven points in the Golden Bear victory.

Charlie Johnson scored 19 points and Jackie Ridgle 18 in the triumph. Bill More got 23 for the losers.

CLASSY RESERVE

Oregon used only five starters and a reserve in chalking up its first Pac-8 victory but the reserve was Leonard Jackson.

Jackson, previously just a bench warmer, scored 14 points to share team scoring honors with Stan Love.

Stanford's Don Griffin, who had 28 points, missed a short jump shot with three seconds left in the game that would have tied it.

The Bruins remained unbeaten with their triumph and are now 5-0 in Pac-8 play.

Washington State, scheduled to take on the Bruins at Pauley Pavilion today, increased their Pac-8 mark to 5-1.

Washington dipped to 4-2; California evened up at 3-3; Southern Cal dropped to 2 - 3, Oregon State and Oregon are 1-4 and Stanford is 1-5.

make a living," he said.

Miss Lynn, a pert blonde 15-year-old from Rockford, Ill., received four first-place votes in ladies' free skating to nip Karen Magnussen, 16, of Vancouver, by 1.4 points in the over-all standings.

STRONG COMEBACK

Miss Lynn, the U.S. champion, made up 13 points after trailing Miss Magnussen after the compulsory figures. Both faltered on the double loop in free skating.

"I had a letdown Thursday night but I feel I skated very well tonight," said Miss Lynn, who went out last on the chopped-up ice.

Ths Canadian champ, Linda Carbonetto, 19, of Toronto, pulled up from fifth to third while Tina Noyes, 20, of Colorado Springs, Colo., slipped to fourth despite a flawless exhibition.

Wood, a 19-year-old pre-law student at John Carroll University in Cleveland, was placed first in the men's compulsory figures by all seven judges.

Third behind Humphrey was John Misha Petkevich, a Harvard student from Great Falls, Mont. Gary Visconti of Detroit was fourth.

In dance, Debbie Gerken and Raymond Tiedemann of New York moved up from fourth to third, followed by Mary Church and Tom Falls of Toronto.

Barry Injured As Oaks Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Superstar Rick Barry was injured and carried from the court on a stretcher late in a 124-122 Oakland Oak victory over Kentucky.

Barry suffered what an Oakland trainer said might be a pinched nerve during overtime in last night's contest.

Before being carried out, Barry scored 41 points for the Oaks, who came from behind to knot the count at 115-115 at the final whistle.

Barry was scheduled for X-rays today at a local hospital.

The winning baskets were two free throws by Ira Harge.

The Oaks outscored the Colonels 28-26 and 26-23 in the final two periods to send the game into overtime.

Sonoma State's Streak Snapped

Hayward State College snapped Sonoma State's three-game winning streak with a chilling 92-91 basketball verdict at Hayward last night.

Sonoma State came back to tie the score at 84-84 after trailing by 52-41 at halftime, but couldn't avert its eighth Far Western Conference loss against a lone win.

Ray Solomon led Sonoma State with 30 points.

LOVING COUPLE FIGHTS IT OUT

Light-heavyweights Paul Johnson (white trunks) of New York City and Jimmy Dupree of Jersey City, N.J., couldn't stay away from each other during their fight in Madison Square Garden as they grappled like wrestlers, finally falling intertwined. Referee Teddy Martin had to unravel the mess and help them up. Dupree won on a technical knockout in the ninth round.

New Shoe Curtails Football Injuries

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A shoe developed at West Point drew interest yesterday from professional football representatives at a two-day workshop on football injuries sponsored by the National Research Council.

Dr. John B. Kress, associate director of physical education at the U.S. Military Academy, discussed the shoe. It has four short cleats in the front, but none on its flat, slightly corrugated heel.

INTRAMURAL TEST

"We designed it pretty much ourselves and experimented with it for about five years," Kress told newsmen. "We use it only in our intramural program. While using it, we've had 33 knee injuries, almost all of them insignificant, and that's in 10,000 man hours of play.

"Only one of those injuries required surgery," Kress added.

Kress explained that the flat heel, unlike other heels, allows a leg to swivel when hit from the side rather than stay implanted in the ground, making a man less prone to knee injuries.

Dr. Fred C. Reynolds, team physician of the St. Louis Cardinals, program chairman, said, "Mainly we are trying to find out the state of our knowledge of the types of research on preventing injuries, in number and severity, and to promote further investigation that might change the injury picture."

OVEREMPHASIZED

Some of the professional football people at the workshop said football injuries were being overemphasized. Reynolds, when asked if he thought this was true, gave an emphatic "No."

"Numbers are not quite as important as severity," Reynolds said. "I don't think over a period of years we've had more injuries. We've had good years and bad years as far as that goes. But when they do occur and are severe, they can influence a team's ability to compete."

Petaluma Loses Second Straight

Slumping Petaluma High School's basketball team, with top scorer Pete Daggett "held" to 18 points, lost its second straight North Bay League contest last night, bowing to Hogan High, 69-66, at Vallejo.

Daggett had hit over 30 points in his last three games. The rest of the Trojans couldn't quite pick up the slack, despite 21 points by Larry Riis.

Larry Husband scored 23 points and Terry Sumpter 21 for the winners. Petaluma is now 14-6 won-lost on the season, and 5-4 in league play.

St. Vincent's Beats San Rafael Cadets

St. Vincent's High School of Petaluma needed a final period splurge to hold back San Rafael Military Academy, 73-66, in a Bay Counties League basketball game at Petaluma yesterday.

St. Vincent's led 41-26 at the half but the Cadets scored 40 points in the second half to make it close.

Santa Clara Rolls Over Loyola Five

Surging on and on are the Santa Clara Broncos, undefeated this basketball season and now third ranked nationally.

They whipped Loyola of Los Angeles in a West Coast Athletic Conference game 82-65 last night to boost their season record to 19-0.

Dennis Awtrey and Ralph Ogden each scored 30 points to spark the victory.

In addition to hitting the hoop repeatedly, the Broncos held control with command of the boards. Awtrey grabbed 19 rebounds.

Elsewhere in the WCAC, Pepperdine dumped host University of San Francisco 71-64.

Leading the Pepperdine attack was Tom Egerer, with 31 points.

Outstanding in a losing cause was USF's Pete Cross with 32 points. He also tied Bill Russell for the USF record of scoring 30 points or more in four games.

Stanford Hires New Football Assistant

COMBINED AP & UPI

STANFORD -- Roger Theder, a former coach at Bowling Green and Northern Illinois, was named an assistant football coach at Stanford University.

Theder will serve as an end coach at Stanford where he was a volunteer assistant last year while teaching at nearby College of San Mateo.

Theder, 29, is a graduate of Western Michigan University.

BASEBALL

SAN FRANCISCO — Thomas J. Frye, a righthanded pitcher-outfielder who was San Francisco's No. 1 pick in the February free agent draft, has signed a contract with the Giants.

The 6-1, 200-pounder is attending North Carolina State University and lives in Fairmont, N.C.

GENERAL

OAKLAND — The California State Athletic Commission has a new chairman. He is William Houston, Orinda, who succeeds Dan O. Kilroy, Sacramento, for on year.

At the Friday meeting, commissioner Douglas Hawden announced his retirement and the commission tabled a motion by Kilroy that would permit the suturing of cuts on fighters between rounds of a bout.

In addition, the commission granted promoter's licenses to Don Chargin Winterland, San Francisco, Jim Pusateri Oakland Coliseum-Arena and Jim Cosenza Concord High School Auditorium.

FOOTBALL

SAN JOSE — DeWayne Dewey King, former defensive football coach at three colleges, has been named an assistant at San Jose State by new head coach Joe McMullen.

King, 41, has coached at Rutgers, Pennsylvania and Michigan State. At San Jose, he will coach the defensive backs.

An author of a book on pass defense, King is the first assistant to be selected by McMullen, who took over as head coach from Harry Anderson at the end of the 1968 season.

CHICAGO — Joe Fortunato resigned as defensive coach of the Chicago Bears. Fortunado, 38, was a star linebacker for the Bears during 14 National Football League seasons.

TRACK AND FIELD

NEW YORK — Frank Murphy of Villanova won the mile run in 4:04.4 at the Madison Square Garden Invitational meet.

FORT WORTH, Tex. — Willie Davenport equaled the world record of 6.8 seconds in winning the 60-yard high hurdles at the Fort Worth Coaches Indoor Games.

TENNIS

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Okker of Holland defeated Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1 and gained the semifinals of the Philadelphia International Open with Australians Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Tony Roche.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—A committee recommended drastic changes in the setup of the USLTA, including hiring of a commissioner at a salary of $50,000 a year.

BOWLING

DENVER — Jerry McClary of Denver rolled a perfect 300 game in the $45,000 PBA Denver Open.

HORSE RACING

ARCADIA — Nice Mistake, $29, led all the way in winning the feature at Santa Anita by three lengths over Author's Royal.

Warriors Host Royals Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—With the Harlem Globetrotters as a curtain-raiser, the San Francisco Warriors entertain the Cincinnati Royals in a National Basketball Association game tonight at the Cow Palace.

Both the Warriors and the Royals will be without several of their mainstays. Al Attles and Joe Ellis of San Francisco are injured as is Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati, which will also be without Tom Van Arsdale who must attend an Air Force Reserve meeting.

The Globetrotters, court jesters of the game, face the New York Nationals in the first game at 7 o'clock.

Lew Sparks UCLA Charge; Cal Romps, Stanford Loses

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA basketball Coach John Wooden says he never expected to be behind at halftime but that's just where the nation's top - ranked college team was against a determined group of Washington Huskies.

But the Bruins survived and did it with Lew Alcindor playing defense and acting like a guard.

The Bruins wound up last night with a thrilling 62 - 51 triumph in a Pacific - 8 game, one of four played.

In other Pac-8 games, Washington State edged Southern Cal 72 - 70 in overtime, California crushed Oregon State 69 - 57 and Oregon tripped Stanford 74-72.

UCLA was down 33-29 at halftime against the Huskies. It was the first time in the short history of Pauley Pavilion that UCLA had trailed at intermission. But that didn't last long.

UCLA's fast break got the first five points after halftime for a short lead and midway through the half, Alcindor exploded defensively.

The 7-foot-1½ center stole a pass, dribbled the length of the court and passed off to teammate Lynn Shackelford for an easy basket.

ANOTHER STEAL

Seconds later, Alcindor duplicated the feat, but this time went all the way in for a solo basket and UCLA suddenly had a 48-43 lead.

The WSU-USC game was one of missed opportunities.

The Cougars' Dennis Hogg missed a shot at the end of regulation that might have won the game. The score was tied 67-67.

Both teams made 26 field goals but the Cougars hit on 20 of 29 foul shots for the victory. USC had 33 attempts but could hit on only 18.

Cal's 6-10 center, Bob Presley, concentrated on defense and held 7-foot Vic Bartolome to just seven points in the Golden Bear victory.

Charlie Johnson scored 19 points and Jackie Ridgle 18 in the triumph. Bill More got 23 for the losers.

CLASSY RESERVE

Oregon used only five starters and a reserve in chalking up its first Pac-8 victory but the reserve was Leonard Jackson.

Jackson, previously just a bench warmer, scored 14 points to share team scoring honors with Stan Love.

Stanford's Don Griffin, who had 28 points, missed a short jump shot with three seconds left in the game that would have tied it.

The Bruins remained unbeaten with their triumph and are now 5-0 in Pac-8 play.

Washington State, scheduled to take on the Bruins at Pauley Pavilion today, increased their Pac-8 mark to 5-1.

Washington dipped to 4-2; California evened up at 3-3; Southern Cal dropped to 2 - 3, Oregon State and Oregon are 1-4 and Stanford is 1-5.

make a living," he said.

Miss Lynn, a pert blonde 15-year-old from Rockford, Ill., received four first-place votes in ladies' free skating to nip Karen Magnussen, 16, of Vancouver, by 1.4 points in the over-all standings.

STRONG COMEBACK

Miss Lynn, the U.S. champion, made up 13 points after trailing Miss Magnussen after the compulsory figures. Both faltered on the double loop in free skating.

"I had a letdown Thursday night but I feel I skated very well tonight," said Miss Lynn, who went out last on the chopped-up ice.

Ths Canadian champ, Linda Carbonetto, 19, of Toronto, pulled up from fifth to third while Tina Noyes, 20, of Colorado Springs, Colo., slipped to fourth despite a flawless exhibition.

Wood, a 19-year-old pre-law student at John Carroll University in Cleveland, was placed first in the men's compulsory figures by all seven judges.

Third behind Humphrey was John Misha Petkevich, a Harvard student from Great Falls, Mont. Gary Visconti of Detroit was fourth.

In dance, Debbie Gerken and Raymond Tiedemann of New York moved up from fourth to third, followed by Mary Church and Tom Falls of Toronto.

Barry Injured As Oaks Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Superstar Rick Barry was injured and carried from the court on a stretcher late in a 124-122 Oakland Oak victory over Kentucky.

Barry suffered what an Oakland trainer said might be a pinched nerve during overtime in last night's contest.

Before being carried out, Barry scored 41 points for the Oaks, who came from behind to knot the count at 115-115 at the final whistle.

Barry was scheduled for X-rays today at a local hospital.

The winning baskets were two free throws by Ira Harge.

The Oaks outscored the Colonels 28-26 and 26-23 in the final two periods to send the game into overtime.

Sonoma State's Streak Snapped

Hayward State College snapped Sonoma State's three-game winning streak with a chilling 92-91 basketball verdict at Hayward last night.

Sonoma State came back to tie the score at 84-84 after trailing by 52-41 at halftime, but couldn't avert its eighth Far Western Conference loss against a lone win.

Ray Solomon led Sonoma State with 30 points.

LOVING COUPLE FIGHTS IT OUT

Light-heavyweights Paul Johnson (white trunks) of New York City and Jimmy Dupree of Jersey City, N.J., couldn't stay away from each other during their fight in Madison Square Garden as they grappled like wrestlers, finally falling intertwined. Referee Teddy Martin had to unravel the mess and help them up. Dupree won on a technical knockout in the ninth round.

New Shoe Curtails Football Injuries

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A shoe developed at West Point drew interest yesterday from professional football representatives at a two-day workshop on football injuries sponsored by the National Research Council.

Dr. John B. Kress, associate director of physical education at the U.S. Military Academy, discussed the shoe. It has four short cleats in the front, but none on its flat, slightly corrugated heel.

INTRAMURAL TEST

"We designed it pretty much ourselves and experimented with it for about five years," Kress told newsmen. "We use it only in our intramural program. While using it, we've had 33 knee injuries, almost all of them insignificant, and that's in 10,000 man hours of play.

"Only one of those injuries required surgery," Kress added.

Kress explained that the flat heel, unlike other heels, allows a leg to swivel when hit from the side rather than stay implanted in the ground, making a man less prone to knee injuries.

Dr. Fred C. Reynolds, team physician of the St. Louis Cardinals, program chairman, said, "Mainly we are trying to find out the state of our knowledge of the types of research on preventing injuries, in number and severity, and to promote further investigation that might change the injury picture."

OVEREMPHASIZED

Some of the professional football people at the workshop said football injuries were being overemphasized. Reynolds, when asked if he thought this was true, gave an emphatic "No."

"Numbers are not quite as important as severity," Reynolds said. "I don't think over a period of years we've had more injuries. We've had good years and bad years as far as that goes. But when they do occur and are severe, they can influence a team's ability to compete."

Petaluma Loses Second Straight

Slumping Petaluma High School's basketball team, with top scorer Pete Daggett "held" to 18 points, lost its second straight North Bay League contest last night, bowing to Hogan High, 69-66, at Vallejo.

Daggett had hit over 30 points in his last three games. The rest of the Trojans couldn't quite pick up the slack, despite 21 points by Larry Riis.

Larry Husband scored 23 points and Terry Sumpter 21 for the winners. Petaluma is now 14-6 won-lost on the season, and 5-4 in league play.

St. Vincent's Beats San Rafael Cadets

St. Vincent's High School of Petaluma needed a final period splurge to hold back San Rafael Military Academy, 73-66, in a Bay Counties League basketball game at Petaluma yesterday.

St. Vincent's led 41-26 at the half but the Cadets scored 40 points in the second half to make it close.

Santa Clara Rolls Over Loyola Five

Surging on and on are the Santa Clara Broncos, undefeated this basketball season and now third ranked nationally.

They whipped Loyola of Los Angeles in a West Coast Athletic Conference game 82-65 last night to boost their season record to 19-0.

Dennis Awtrey and Ralph Ogden each scored 30 points to spark the victory.

In addition to hitting the hoop repeatedly, the Broncos held control with command of the boards. Awtrey grabbed 19 rebounds.

Elsewhere in the WCAC, Pepperdine dumped host University of San Francisco 71-64.

Leading the Pepperdine attack was Tom Egerer, with 31 points.

Outstanding in a losing cause was USF's Pete Cross with 32 points. He also tied Bill Russell for the USF record of scoring 30 points or more in four games.

Stanford Hires New Football Assistant

COMBINED AP & UPI

STANFORD -- Roger Theder, a former coach at Bowling Green and Northern Illinois, was named an assistant football coach at Stanford University.

Theder will serve as an end coach at Stanford where he was a volunteer assistant last year while teaching at nearby College of San Mateo.

Theder, 29, is a graduate of Western Michigan University.

BASEBALL

SAN FRANCISCO — Thomas J. Frye, a righthanded pitcher-outfielder who was San Francisco's No. 1 pick in the February free agent draft, has signed a contract with the Giants.

The 6-1, 200-pounder is attending North Carolina State University and lives in Fairmont, N.C.

GENERAL

OAKLAND — The California State Athletic Commission has a new chairman. He is William Houston, Orinda, who succeeds Dan O. Kilroy, Sacramento, for on year.

At the Friday meeting, commissioner Douglas Hawden announced his retirement and the commission tabled a motion by Kilroy that would permit the suturing of cuts on fighters between rounds of a bout.

In addition, the commission granted promoter's licenses to Don Chargin Winterland, San Francisco, Jim Pusateri Oakland Coliseum-Arena and Jim Cosenza Concord High School Auditorium.

FOOTBALL

SAN JOSE — DeWayne Dewey King, former defensive football coach at three colleges, has been named an assistant at San Jose State by new head coach Joe McMullen.

King, 41, has coached at Rutgers, Pennsylvania and Michigan State. At San Jose, he will coach the defensive backs.

An author of a book on pass defense, King is the first assistant to be selected by McMullen, who took over as head coach from Harry Anderson at the end of the 1968 season.

CHICAGO — Joe Fortunato resigned as defensive coach of the Chicago Bears. Fortunado, 38, was a star linebacker for the Bears during 14 National Football League seasons.

TRACK AND FIELD

NEW YORK — Frank Murphy of Villanova won the mile run in 4:04.4 at the Madison Square Garden Invitational meet.

FORT WORTH, Tex. — Willie Davenport equaled the world record of 6.8 seconds in winning the 60-yard high hurdles at the Fort Worth Coaches Indoor Games.

TENNIS

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Okker of Holland defeated Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1 and gained the semifinals of the Philadelphia International Open with Australians Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Tony Roche.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—A committee recommended drastic changes in the setup of the USLTA, including hiring of a commissioner at a salary of $50,000 a year.

BOWLING

DENVER — Jerry McClary of Denver rolled a perfect 300 game in the $45,000 PBA Denver Open.

HORSE RACING

ARCADIA — Nice Mistake, $29, led all the way in winning the feature at Santa Anita by three lengths over Author's Royal.

Warriors Host Royals Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—With the Harlem Globetrotters as a curtain-raiser, the San Francisco Warriors entertain the Cincinnati Royals in a National Basketball Association game tonight at the Cow Palace.

Both the Warriors and the Royals will be without several of their mainstays. Al Attles and Joe Ellis of San Francisco are injured as is Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati, which will also be without Tom Van Arsdale who must attend an Air Force Reserve meeting.

The Globetrotters, court jesters of the game, face the New York Nationals in the first game at 7 o'clock.

AVERAGE PLAY

Ask the average bridge enthusiast to play today's hand at six spades and he will go down, a victim of blindness. He sees dummy's solitary club as a singleton and therefore ruffs the ten and jack of clubs in dummy. Sooner or later South must try the diamond finesse, losing two diamond tricks.

During the bidding North made a doubtful free raise because he expected his singleton club to provide ruffing tricks. During the play, South is misled by the same illusiion. Actually, the slam is unbeatable if declarer never ruffs a club in dummy.

RUFFS HEARTS

Ater winning the first trick with the ace of hearts South should ruff a heart with a trump honor. South leads a low trump t dummy and ruffs the other low heart with another trump honro. Now South leads his remaining low trump to dummy and returns the singleton club.

When East plays low, South takes a finesse with the ten of clubs. West wins the trick, of course, but then cannot make a safe return.

SOUTH READY

If West returns a club, South wins two clubs and the ace of diamonds to take care of dummy's three low diamonds. If West returns a diamond, South wins two diamonds and the ace of clubs. If West returns a heart, South wins one trump and his two aces, still playing dummy's three low diamonds.

South must see himself as the dummy rather than as declarer. He ruffs out North's losing hearts and sets up North as the master hand.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday Feb. 8 the 39th day of 1969 with 326 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1587 Mary Queen of Scots was beheaded after being charged with plotting the murder of Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1940 every 10th person of two villages near Warsaw, Poland was shot in repirsal for the deaths of two German soldiers.

In 1963 Premier Karim Kassim of Iraq was overthrown in a military coup. He was executed the following day.

In 1964 Princess Irene of the Netherlands renounced her right to the throne to marry Spanish Prince Juan Carlos. They were wed two months later.

A thought for the day: Amos Bronson Alcott said, "Greater is he who is above temptation then he, who being tempted, overcomes."

45 Drake Seniors In Scholar Race

Forty-five Drake High School seniors have ranked as semifinals in competition for California state college scholarships.

The students were chosen as a result of a scholastic aptitude test, which required a minimum score of 992.

The semifinalists will be judged further on the basis of financial need and grades. They are required to send financial statements and transcripts of their grades to the scholarship commission if they decide to proceed in the competition.

About 5.800 scholarships will be awarded to incoming college freshmen this year. The winners will be announced about April 11.

Semifinalists from San Anselmo are Dave Alvarado, Sheldon Ball, Chuck Boerger, Murray Bruce, Charles Bryant, Deirdre Bullis, John Cherry, Chris Cone, Jean Cummings, Miriam Forristal, Gary Glenn, Jean Goodman, Ric Harnsberger, Kristi Hein and Judy Hertzel.

Also Kathy Hyde, Marc Jones, Larry Kirkendall, Tim Luders, Laura Mathews, Lucy McGee, Laurie McHatton, Shelley Powers, Becky Reist, Jerry Retke, Terri Rudee, Kathy Schabel, Les Schlaegel, Alicia Snyder, Sylvia Sower, Laura Spence, Dave Tang, Joan Van Arnum and John Wiederhoeft.

Qualifying from Fairfax were Robert Charves, Mike Davlin, Ann-Marie Gare, John Giammona, Diane Giosso, Hervey Grasso, Rosana Orr, and Michele Williamson.

Pat Fahey of Nicasio, Virginia Gilstrap of Woodacre and Chris Wall of Forest Knolls also qualified.

Misdemeanor Charge

45 Drake Seniors In Scholar Race

Forty-five Drake High School seniors have ranked as semifinals in competition for California state college scholarships.

The students were chosen as a result of a scholastic aptitude test, which required a minimum score of 992.

The semifinalists will be judged further on the basis of financial need and grades. They are required to send financial statements and transcripts of their grades to the scholarship commission if they decide to proceed in the competition.

About 5,800 scholarships will be awarded to incoming college freshmen this year. The winners will be announced about April 11.

Semifinalists from San Anselmo are Dave Alvarado, Sheldon Ball, Chuck Boerger, Murray Bruce, Charles Bryant, Deirdre Bullis, John Cherry, Chris Cone, Jean Cummings, Miriam Forristal, Gary Glenn, Jean Goodman, Ric Harnsberger, Kristi Hein and Judy Hertzel.

Also Kathy Hyde, Marc Jones, Larry Kirkendall, Tim Luders, Laura Mathews, Lucy McGee, Laurie McHatton, Shelley Powers, Becky Reist, Jerry Retke, Terri Rudee, Kathy Schabel, Les Schlaegel, Alicia Snyder, Sylvia Sower, Laura Spence, Dave Tang, Joan Van Arnum and John Wiederhoeft.

Qualifying from Fairfax were Robert Charves, Mike Davlin, Ann-Marie Gare, John Giammona, Diane Giosso, Hervey Grasso, Rowena Orr, and Michele Williamson.

Pat Fahey of Nicasio, Virginia Gilstrap of Woodacre and Chris Wall of Forest Knolls also qualified.

15 Petaluma Seniors Feted For Scholarship

Fifteen students of Petaluma Senior High School have been honored in the annual Bank of America achievement awards program, according to Dr. Dan Montgomery, principal.

Four students won plaques for achievements in special fields and may compete for awards ranging up to $1,000. They are Derek Lorenz, science and mathematics; Debbie Yates, fine arts; Terri Miller, liberal arts, and Anne Wong, vocational arts.

Cited for superior performance were Hannelore Jordt, business; Pat Brown, foreign languages; Dan Hollis, mathematics; Darryl Tsujihara, laboratory science; Terry Jensen, music; Richard Prentiss, industrial arts; Eileen Woebling, home economics; Kathy Kneeland, art; Marge Pippus, English and Jim Arnett, social studies.

The winners were chosen by the faculty.

Boat Works Reports Thefts From Craft

Garvie Boat Works at 60 Bay Street, San Rafael, reported to police yesterday that a record player, telescope and spotlight were taken from a 42-foot boat being repaired.

L. R. Custer, of San Francisco, the boat's owner, estimated the loss at $310.

Absentee Ballot Deadline Is Set

Absentee ballots for San Rafael Elementary School District's $2.1 million bond election Feb. 18 must reach the county clerk's office in the Marin County Courthouse in San Rafael no later than Tuesday.

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported Feb. 3 that such ballots need not reach the clerk's office till Feb. 17.

Absentee ballots are available at the courthouse or by writing to Peter Meyer, elections officer, Courthouse, San Rafael.

Innocent Plea To Credit Card Forgery

Richard Anthony Conte, 31, of Corte Madera, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of credit card forgery. A preliminary hearing was set for 9:30 a.m. March 4.

Conted was arrested Jan. 25 after an Emporium security guard described him, officers said.

689 Donate Blood During Last Month

The Irwin Memorial Blood bank reported an all-time record of 689 blood donors visited the Marin Blood Center during January.

The Marin center, at 506 Fourth Street, San Rafael, gave an appeal for help after other communities across the nation reported a critical blood shortage.

Alto Firefighting Plan Is Refused

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire Protection District board has turned down a Mill Valley proposal to share fire protection of the Alto commercial strip recently annexed to Mill Valley.

The board Thursday night said it was not interested in "hit and miss" protection and should be responsible either for all the strip or for none of it, Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr. said. The city proposed Alto protect only the developed parts of the strip, Heynen said.

The board also hired Fred Lepage as an extra deputy fireman and made permanent the appointment of Michael Thompson as lieutenant.

The first vaudeville theater in America, the Gaiety Museum, opened in Boston in 1883.

The Editor's Notebook

Heroes Becoms Villains As The Years Roll By

EVERY GENERATION produces its share of observers who come to believe the world has turned topsy-turvy.

If you are a newspaper editor (or a newspaper reader) there are times when you think such observations may be correct.

If you read the editor's mail and eaves-dropped on his telephone conversations over the past couple of decades, you would be sure the world is all mixed up.

IN THE FIRST WEEK of February of 1949, for instance, a fearless editorial criticizing the Northwestern Pacific Railroad (and its corporate parent, Southern Pacific) would have resulted in (1) cries of righteous indignation and denunciation from the railroad as well as frowns from local business leaders, wondering what had loosened the fearless editor's trolly, and (2) a few surreptitious words of agreement and approval from some who wouldn't want anyone to know they harbored misgivings about the mighty NWP-SP.

If any editor wants reaction today, he needs only to write an editorial lauding and praising NWP and SP. The mail will bulge with signed denunciations of railroads in general, NWP and SP in particular, and especially for newspaper editors who find anything good to say about these public villains.

In many respects, railroads — including NWP and SP — are doing a better job than ever. But you don't see many editorial comments to this effect from fearless editors.

THE TELEPHONE COMPANY, PG&E, Greyhound, the airlines and even the Golden Gate Bridge Board fall into the same category as NWP and the other railroads.

They are all doing in many respects a better job for the public than ever before. But you don't see much editorial comment to that effect.

If a fearless editor want to be denounced, excoriated, criticized and damned, he needs only to write something commendatory about today's set of public villains.

Two decades ago, if you editorially blamed anything on "subversives," you were sure to be accused of "red-baiting" and waving a red herring.

Write today that dedicated revolutionaries are among instigators of campus turmoil and you get a batch of letters of applause and agreement.

Criticize the church editorially 20 years ago and you would be lucky to avoid being run out of town. (It did happen to some California editors only two decades ago.) Write an editorial today extolling the accomplishments of the church and you are the target of snide criticism.

If you spoke out against freeways and highway development in 1949, you risked denunciation. Speak out today in favor of highway development or freeway extension and you are certain of denunciation, from a different quarter.

Give the loggers the editorial devil for descecrating our forest two decades ago and you were certain to be the target for powerful reprisals. Praise the commercial lumber interests' reforestation operations now and powerful guns of organized conservationists will unlimber their criticism upon you.

The list of topsy-turvy comparisons can be endless.

HOW DOES AN EDITOR MAINTAIN his equilibrium?

Nature has provided for that.

Scar tissue gives you a tougher hide as you grow older.

Right Man For The Job

Occasionally some appointment to high public office causes us to exclaim, "There's a really first-class choice of the man for the job."

Such was the case with announcement yesterday of appointment of Jerome B. Gilbert, general manager of the North Marin Water District, to be executive officer of the California Water Resources Control Board.

"Jerry" Gilbert has headed the North Marin district for 10 years. They have been years of great growth, and he has guided that growth expertly. He has worked well with the district board and with its citizens. He has proved knowledgeable about water problems and district operations, and willing to share his knowledge. Recently, as chairman of the Bay Area Water Quality Control Board, he has demonstrated his ability anew in a field very similar to that which will be his in the state post.

Besides all that, Gilbert has been that almost-rarity among salaried public servants: a man who always gives straight answers to straight questions, and never tries to hide the truth. That has earned him special respect among those of us who gather and report the news.

Bouquets And Brickbat

BOUQUET to the Marin County Transit District Board for its unanmous approval of the proposal to turn inter-county bus operation over to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, which has the money to do the job. We trust the transit district will now get busy on a feeder bus system for Marin, without which improved inter-county service can do little to relieve the traffic snarl.

BRICKBAT to John A. Miskimen for voting as a Bay Area Air Pollution Control District director for a ban on backyard burning, despite the fact that the San Rafael City Council, of which he is a member, had gone on record—along with almost every other city council in Marin—against the proposal.

BOUQUET to the San Rafael City Council majority of Fred E. Jensen, Harry A. Barbier and Frederick C. Robbins Jr. for voting to put the proposed city lease-purchase golf course to referendum of the people before obligating taxpayers for it.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

Mother Manges was gratified. "You see, Jerry," she beamed, "I told you that was a nice little boy next door. I was glad to observe from the window just now that you had made friends with him and were helping him pick up his marbles." "Marbles!" scoffed Jerry. "I socked him in the jaw. Those weren't marbles; those were teeth!"

Jane Morgan claims she knows a producer whose weekly salary now goes to five figures: three redheads and two blondes.

A visitor from outer space visited a washroom and caught sight of a paper towel dispenser. He whispered to it, "Pardon me, miss, but your slip is showing."

REMEMBER WHEN?

Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, proposed a single authority to operate bridges, airports and seaports in the Bay Area.

Why Is Maillard Silent On Pueblo?

We have all been wondering why our Congressman William Mailliard has not spoken out on the USS Pueblo. Is it because he has made himself a rear admiral in the Navy and does not want to disturb them? He should help the men — many of them residents of California.

I think it is possible to fault the student activists at San Francisco State and elsewhere for a bad choice of tactics. Some of their professed goals are good and valid while others are nonsense but their tactics are very like to be "counter-productive," as I believe the fashionable terminology goes.

The ideals of the "left" are not usually the sort of things that can be quickly absorbed emotionally; that is, such concepts as mutual responsibility and the universal brotherhood of all life, or all mammals, or at least all mankind. On the other hand, the right thrives on instinctive Xenophobia, fear of "those others."

Now the technique of the activists has been the use of emotional pressure and confrontation rather than the use of reason. Once this precedent has been firmly set, it is certain the right will, some day, counter-attack with the same weapons and these are their long suit. Emotional exhortations to the defense of the cross and the flag, when turned up to a frenzied pitch, are practically irresistible. Further, if such a counter-attack comes with all stops out, the results will not only be disastrous to the goals of the left, but could easily be disastrous to the world in general.

Confusion Abounds In Pueblo Story

The Pueblo story gets more complicated each week. In one sentence Admiral Johnson had assistance for the Pueblo on call. Lieutenant Commander Clark claimed there were neither ships nor planes in position to come to the aid of the Pueblo on time.

Yet Commander Bucher's SOS was quickly implemented by U.S bombers from a South Korean base, which were over Pueblo in less than half an hour! Before they could scatter the enemy, they received orders to disengage and go home! Why?

Justice Brings Family's Thanks

We wish to express our appreciation for all the hard work the district attorney's office put forth in apprehending the murderers of Shirley and Curtis Ackley and seeing justice brought forth.

This is but humble gratitude that we as a family can express. For the speedy apprehension, the Marin County sheriff's department and the district attorney brought two killers to justice. The killers are Johnny Sommerhalter and Kenneth Preston, both of Santa Rosa.

Without the help of these two offices, justice would have never been sought. As we stated before: Thank you all for seeing justice brought forth.

Duty Adds The Lustre To Beauty Of Life

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

Ellen Sturgis Hooper observes a fundamental truth of life: "I slept and dreamed that life was beauty. I woke — and found that life was duty."

But where is the truth to be found? Is it in the dream of sleeping, or in the reality of awaking? Is it in the grueling tasks of daily living, or in the drifting euphoric ecstacy? Perhaps the truth lies in the middle. For life is both beauty and duty, intermingled and fused in the balance of co-existence.

The most beautiful things in life, the most satisfying joys of living, the most gratifying experiences of consciousness, are nearest and freest. Money cannot buy them. They are obtained only by one's own powers, in the involvement of the duties of the heart and in the disciplines of the mind. Only by our conscious efforts and liberating toil can we discover them.

THE ARENA of struggle and adventure is everywhere: two persons walk in the street; one gazes into the night and observes the stars, the other dips into the deep black and finds darkness; one is grandiose and listens to the whole world, the other is lonely and hears only his footsteps; one grasps the next opportunity, the other gropes for the next step; one is living in time and building in space, the other is existing in a vacuum.

Beauty is not a hallowed vision unfolding itself to the eye. It is a discovery for those who quest for it dutifully. It is a relationship, not an escape; a reality, not an illusion; a lifetime journey, not a weekend "trip."

ANY THRILL and joy that is sought for its own sake will bring no lasting happiness and no enduring pleasure. The beauty of joy must grow out of the duty of inner struggle, of daring adventure, of a life-consciousness that reaches out into the lives and loves of souls and sights.

It is outgoing engaging duty, not retreating self-indulgent happiness-hunting that will bring us the higher joys of the spirit and the deeper verities and ecstacies of life. The high priests of chemical bliss, the potion gobblers and the dial-a-salvation and see-God proponents, are self-deluding when they seek to crowd the fugitive moment with the eternity of a Heaven or a Hell.

WHEN ELIJAH sought the divine spirit, he found it not in the blaze bursting lightning, neither in the power-crushing earhtquake, nor yet in the energy-sweeping whirlwind. For it was in the still small voice of duty and in the sanctuary of his heart. Because greatness and divine grace are not produced in abrupt, earth-shaking, spectacular and dramatic acts. They are the great works of the small rays of a life of sunshine, sprinkled with the countless drops of the rain of human kindness that lavish growth and warmth to the world.

Whether our duties are great or small, in public life or in private enterprise, in making a living or in keeping a home, in the office or in the plant, in the classroom or in the boiler room, each and everyone of us can feel a sense of satisfaction in fulfilling his duties aright, whatever they may be.

No one summed it up better than Emerson when he linked God to man and made duty the binding element between them: "So nigh is grandeur to our dust, so near is God to man, when duty whispers low, 'Thou must,' the youth replies, 'I can.' "

THE DRUMMONDS

Congressional Reorganization Bill Needs, Deserves Public Support

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — It's Them Against Us, and to most people government is Them.

And unless government moves more to be Us, it is encouraging frustration and violence.

Congress in particular has got to do a better job, and the public will have to push it into doing it.

Majority rule must have more power in Congress, and its creaky machinery must be modernized so that it can transact the public business more openly, more efficiently, and more reponsively.

FORTUNATELY, a package of measures to do this is being put up to the House by a sizable bipartisan group, led by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, R-Ill.

They are modest but useful reforms and all headed in the right direction — toward loosening the stifling dominance of powerful committee chairmen and making Congress more responsive to its own majority so that it can be more responsive to the majority of the people.

There is momentum behind the Rumsfeld push, but we need to bear in mind that most of the senior, powerful members of Congress like self-reform about the way Winnie the Pooh likes sour honey.

This is why strong public support will be needed, and to that end we should know what the reform proposals would do and why they are critical to the Congress and to the country.

SEPARATELY, these reforms are not very exciting but, added together, they go to the heart of making democratic government function more democratically. Here are some of the things they provide:

1—Senate committees must meet on "written consent of a majority of the committee." Sounds innocent, but without it committee chairmen can single-handedly suffocate legislation by refusing to call a meeting.

2—Congressional committee meetings shall be public unless the majority rules otherwise.

3—Roll-call votes on bills within committees shall be made public.

4—A committee chairman must report on the written demand of a committee majority, within seven days, any measure approved by the committee. This is crucial. Some committee chairmen have pigeonholed approved bills for months.

5—No more proxy voting.

6—There shall be a roll-call vote in both houses on all appropriations bills. In the past, billions of dollars have been approved without it being known how anybody voted.

7—Every bill must contain a committee estimate of the cost of carrying it out.

8—There shall be a permanent Joint Committee on Congressional Operations to give continual study to congressional functioning and how to improve it.

THESE ARE NOT casual proposals. Most of them were unanimously urged by the Monroney Joint Committee on Congressional Reorganization in 1967 and passed by the Senate 75 to 9. Then the House Democratic leadership raised its hands in holy horror and arrogantly proved the need of these reforms by keeping them buried in the dark recesses of outdated rules.

These measures are coming forward again at a moment when they are especially important. Many Americans, who want nothing to do with the destructive militants, feel frustrated and on the outside looking in when it comes to the functioning of their government.

Unless Congress wants to feed this frustration and the fuel the cause of violence, it must prove that government by the consent of the governed requires that Congress must be responsible to the majority of the governed. It can only be so when its own majority can put its hands on the levers of Congress.

That's what it is all about. That is why the new congressional reorganization bill needs public support — and deserves it.

Peace, Welfare And Justice —And Crime In Washington

WASHINGTON — The crime problem in Washington, D.C., as everyone knows by now, is serious. And everyone is worried about it because it could have an effect on the national policies of the country. It's very difficult for people to make decisions on the affairs of state when they are living in an atmosphere of apprehension and anxiety.

Let me explain what I mean.

THE OTHER DAY I was getting a briefing on America's defense posture from my good friend, Gen. A. B. Em at the Pentagon.

"The United States has never been stronger, in spite of everything you read," General Em told me. "We've got hardware in every part of the globe and, while we're not looking for trouble, I assure you that there isn't a nation in the world, including you-know-who, who would mess with us. But, of course, our real business is peace."

"It's good to talk to someone who is neither a Dove nor a Hawk," I said.

"Without giving away any secret information, our missile sites right here in the continental United States could knock out anything the other side could send over."

AN AIDE walked in. "I'm sorry to bother you, sir, but your car has been stolen."

"My car!"

"Yes, sir. Right off the Pentagon parking lot."

"Of all the nerve!" the general shouted. He put on his coat and said to me, "I'm sorry I have to break this up." And then, to his aide, "Let's go ahead with the bombing raid on the DMZ. And double the bomb loads."

I WANDERED OVER to State to see if I could talk a friend on the Middle East desk into having lunch. He was wrestling with the tricky situation out there. "It's our policy to find a peaceful solution to this problem, making sure that neither the Arabs nor the Israelis feel they've won anything. But at the same time we must calm the fears of both parties and urge them to reconcile their differences."

Just then his secretary came in. "It's your wife on the phone." He picked it up. "Hello . . . What do you mean someone broke into the house? They took everything? . . . I know you wanted me to put bars on the windows. . . . Will you calm down? . . . Yes, I'm coming home right away." He slammed down the phone.

"What about the position paper you were going to do on the crisis?" his secretary asked.

My friend was heading for the door. "The hell with the position paper. The Arabs and Israelis can kill themselves for all I care." And he walked out, slamming the door.

I HAD NOTHING better to do, so I decided to look up a pal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. He was just going over plans for a large housing project for one of the major cities. "What we have to do is give people decent housing," he said.

"Once we can improve the environment, we will be able to deal with the problems of the underprivileged and disenfranchised. Now this model program, if it works, could be repeated in every part of the country and. . . . "

"Mr. Bostitch." A uniformed guard rushed in. "They just robbed the employees credit union downstairs and took $20,000.

"That does it!" said Bostitch as he tore up the plans into little pieces. "No more Mr. Nice Guy."

I WAS ABOUT to go back to my office when I ran into a judge. "We must get to the root of crime and eradicate the causes of it," he said as we walked back to his court. "Punishing people is not the solution for the long haul." In his chambers he said to his clerk, "Where's my robe?"

"Someone stole it during lunch."

Red-faced, the judge took his seat on the bench in his regular suit, and before the defense attorney could even make his plea in the first case, the judge slammed down his gavel and said, "Twenty years."

8—There shall be a permanent Joint Committee on Congressional Operations to give continual study to congressional functioning and how to improve it.

THESE ARE NOT casual proposals. Most of them were unanimously urged by the Monroney Joint Committee on Congressional Reorganization in 1967 and passed by the Senate 75 to 9. Then the House Democratic leadership raised its hands in holy horror and arrogantly proved the need of these reforms by keeping them buried in the dark recesses of outdated rules.

These measures are coming forward again at a moment when they are especially important. Many Americans, who want nothing to do with the destructive militants, feel frustrated and on the outside looking in when it comes to the functioning of their government.

Unless Congress wants to feed this frustration and the fuel the cause of violence, it must prove that government by the consent of the governed requires that Congress must be responsible to the majority of the governed. It can only be so when its own majority can put its hands on the levers of Congress.

That's what it is all about. That is why the new congressional reorganization bill needs public support — and deserves it.

ART BUCHWALD

Peace, Welfare And Justice —And Crime In Washington

WASHINGTON — The crime problem in Washington, D.C., as everyone knows by now, is serious. And everyone is worried about it because it could have an effect on the national policies of the country. It's very difficult for people to make decisions on the affairs of state when they are living in an atmosphere of apprehension and anxiety.

Let me explain what I mean.

THE OTHER DAY I was getting a briefing on America's defense posture from my good friend, Gen. A. B. Em at the Pentagon.

"The United States has never been stronger, in spite of everything you read," General Em told me. "We've got hardware in every part of the globe and, while we're not looking for trouble, I assure you that there isn't a nation in the world, including you-know-who, who would mess with us. But, of course, our real business is peace."

"It's good to talk to someone who is neither a Dove nor a Hawk," I said.

"Without giving away any secret information, our missile sites right here in the continental United States could knock out anything the other side could send over."

AN AIDE walked in. "I'm sorry to bother you, sir, but your car has been stolen."

"My car!"

"Yes, sir. Right off the Pentagon parking lot."

"Of all the nerve!" the general shouted. He put on his coat and said to me, "I'm sorry I have to break this up." And then, to his aide, "Let's go ahead with the bombing raid on the DMZ. And double the bomb loads."

I WANDERED OVER to State to see if I could talk a friend on the Middle East desk into having lunch. He was wrestling with the tricky situation out there. "It's our policy to find a peaceful solution to this problem, making sure that neither the Arabs nor the Israelis feel they've won anything. But at the same time we must calm the fears of both parties and urge them to reconcile their differences."

Just then his secretary came in. "It's your wife on the phone." He picked it up. "Hello . . . What do you mean someone broke into the house? They took everything? . . . I know you wanted me to put bars on the windows. . . . Will you calm down? . . . Yes, I'm coming home right away." He slammed down the phone.

"What about the position paper you were going to do on the crisis?" his secretary asked.

My friend was heading for the door. "The hell with the position paper. The Arabs and Israelis can kill themselves for all I care." And he walked out, slamming the door.

I HAD NOTHING better to do, so I decided to look up a pal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. He was just going over plans for a large housing project for one of the major cities. "What we have to do is give people decent housing," he said.

"Once we can improve the environment, we will be able to deal with the problems of the underprivileged and disenfranchised. Now this model program, if it works, could be repeated in every part of the country and. . . . "

"Mr. Bostitch." A uniformed guard rushed in. "They just robbed the employees credit union downstairs and took $20,000.

"That does it!" said Bostitch as he tore up the plans into little pieces. "No more Mr. Nice Guy."

I WAS ABOUT to go back to my office when I ran into a judge. "We must get to the root of crime and eradicate the causes of it," he said as we walked back to his court. "Punishing people is not the solution for the long haul." In his chambers he said to his clerk, "Where's my robe?"

"Someone stole it during lunch."

Red-faced, the judge took his seat on the bench in his regular suit, and before the defense attorney could even make his plea in the first case, the judge slammed down his gavel and said, "Twenty years."

NOW... Here's A Special Money-Saving Offer

ADVERTISED IN LIFE

ONLY LUMACOTE the "Climatized Coating" WILL GIVE YOUR HOME LASTING PROTECTION AND BEAUTY NEVER BEFORE OFFERED

Guaranteed
15 Years
AGAINST CHIPPING
FLAKING AND PEELING

LUMACOTE

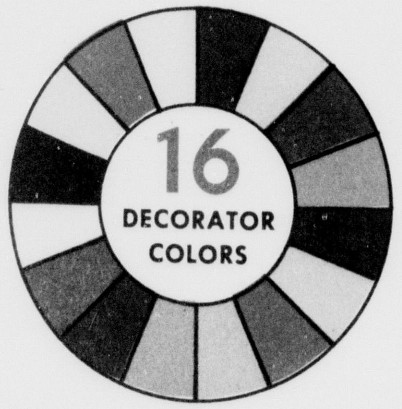
the "Climatized Coating"

Applied with special heavy duty equipment under 450 lbs. of pressure per square inch to a thickness approximately 20 times that of ordinary paint, that coating actually fuses itself to the wall surface and becomes a permanent part of the wall assuring longer lasting beauty, protection and insulation.

SAVE MONEY YEAR AFTER YEAR

One high pressure application bonds directly onto any surface without mess or odor . . . insulates, waterproofs, eliminates repainting and increases your property values.

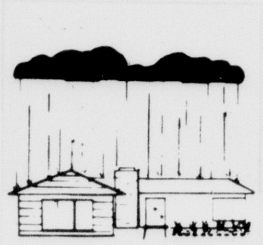
COVER ALL SURFACES TO SEAL CRACKS, HOLES AND ALL OTHER DEFECTS.



Carefully selected by leading decorators, each color is outstanding in its ability to enhance the appearance of any building, in addition to its weathering resistant qualities. The "Climatized" Coating may be applied over any existing color or finish . . . it wil not fade or discolor and is easily washed.

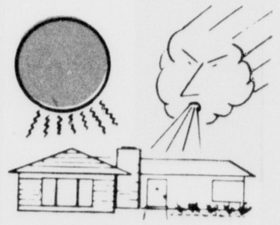
NO MONEY DOWN

terms to fit your budget



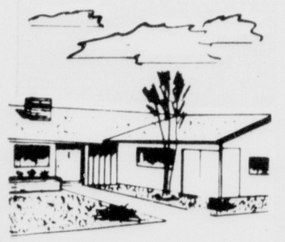
WATERPROOFS

Provides a "raincoat" for your building . . . stops constant absorption of moisture. The "Climatized" Coating will not oxidize; its waterproofing ability fully meets U.S. Government Specification SS-W-00110 (SA-FSS).



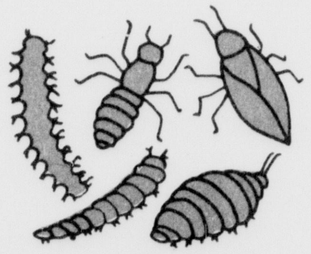
INSULATES

SAVE MONEY ON FUEL BILLS! You get better insulation than with many conventional insulating materials . . . your house will be warmer in winter and cooler in summer.



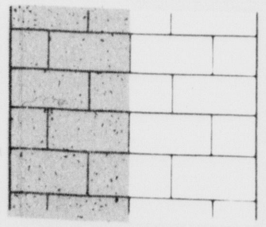
BEAUTIFIES and PROTECTS

Surface imperfections are covered by a beautiful, unblemished finish that is guaranteed to resist deterioration. Eliminate year in and year out need for costly repainting and maintenance.



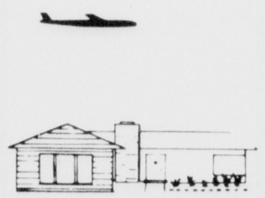
FIGHTS BUGS and FUNGUS

Formulated with TERMIKILL (an especially prepared additive), the "Climatized" Coating is designed to eliminate fungus, dry-rot, mildew, milspores, termite life and other noxious growth. Meets and exceeds U.S. Government Specification TT-P-29B.



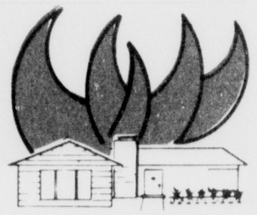
WILL NOT CHIP FLAKE or PEEL

Built-in toughness and flexibility make it possible for the "Climatized" Coating to retain its "brand-new" look for years and years . . . you'll be glad you chose this fully tested and guaranteed product!



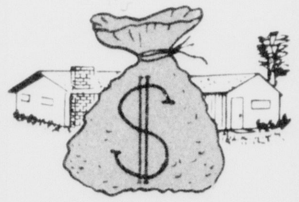
REDUCES NOISE

Nature's most effective sound barrier is trapped, still air . . . in the "Climatized" Coating there are millions of air bubbles doing the job of absorbing sound waves from traffic, overhead aircraft, neighbors, etc.



FIRE RETARDANT

Extensive laboratory testing, plus years of experience in the field, show the "Climatized" Coating to be absolutely unable to support combustion. In many cases this ability to endure heat and flames has saved the building.



INCREASES VALUE OF PROPERTY

Protection against deterioration means your property will be worth even more as the years go by . . . you'll be relieved of worry about maintenance, paint and repair bills . . . you'll be happier with a beautiful "brand-new" appearance that is guaranteed to last.

Grandfather Builds Cradle For A Baby

For The First Grandchild, It Had To Be Something Special

By DON KEOWN

A first grandchild, thought Robert Cooper of Kentfield, is deserving of something special.

So when their oldest daughter, Mrs. Richard Raznikov of Berkeley, informed the Coopers she was expecting her first child, her father asked her: "How would you like a cradle for the baby?"

Mrs. Raznikov was pleased with the suggestion, and so Cooper set out to build what had to be no ordinary cradle.

Cooper is an experienced home handyman, having remodeled his house at 14 Acadia Avenue and having built such furniture pieces as bookcases and cabinets.

BUT THE CRADLE he produced after four and a half months of working evenings and weekends in his home workshop he regards as his crowning achievement.

"I've never produced anything else this finely crafted," he says.

To begin with, there was the wood.

"I selected the very finest walnut," he says.

A GREAT DEAL of the pleasure Cooper derived from his project he credits to that selection.

"It was wonderful wood to work with," he says. "From now on I'm working with nothing but walnut and brass."

Cooper's workshop is located in one half of his double garage.

"My son and I keep our miniature railroad in the other half of the garage," he laughs, "and the cars sit outside."

IN IT HE HAS the usual power saw, and a lathe. But it is not the lathe ordinarily associated with woodwork. Rather, it is a metal-turning lathe. And while not customarily used for turning wood, its precisely minute and controlled calibration has enabled Cooper, working from his own drawings, to produce his spokes and other carved cradle parts in remarkably fine detail.

Indicative of the care that Cooper put into his project are the ornamental brass caps which he produced himself to cover the screw heads.

The rocking mechanism with its ball-bearing action reflects the same striving for perfection as does the furniture.

COOPER THEN climaxed his project by giving the walnut a handrubbed oil finish that brought out the grain of the fine wood in all its glory.

Use of the metal lathe on wood, however, did pose one problem.

"The sawdust from the wood soaks up the oil, and it is next to impossible to keep the machine oiled," he says. "But since I don't have a wood lathe, I just pour on the oil and try to do my best."

HIS BEST IS very, very good.

The cradle, with a swinging crib that measures 34 by 17 inches, has won the praise of those accustomed to professional cabinetry.

Cooper completed the cradle in time so that it was in the Raznikov home in Berkeley and waiting when baby Jessica, born Jan. 24 at Marin General Hospital, and her mother arrived there.

Says Mrs. Cooper of her husband's project: "It is the kind of thing that is passed down from generation to generation."

COOPER ADMITS: "Yes, I made it as an heirloom."

Thus Mrs. Raznikov insists her father should affix his signature somewhere on the cradle so that future generations will remain aware of who the builder was.

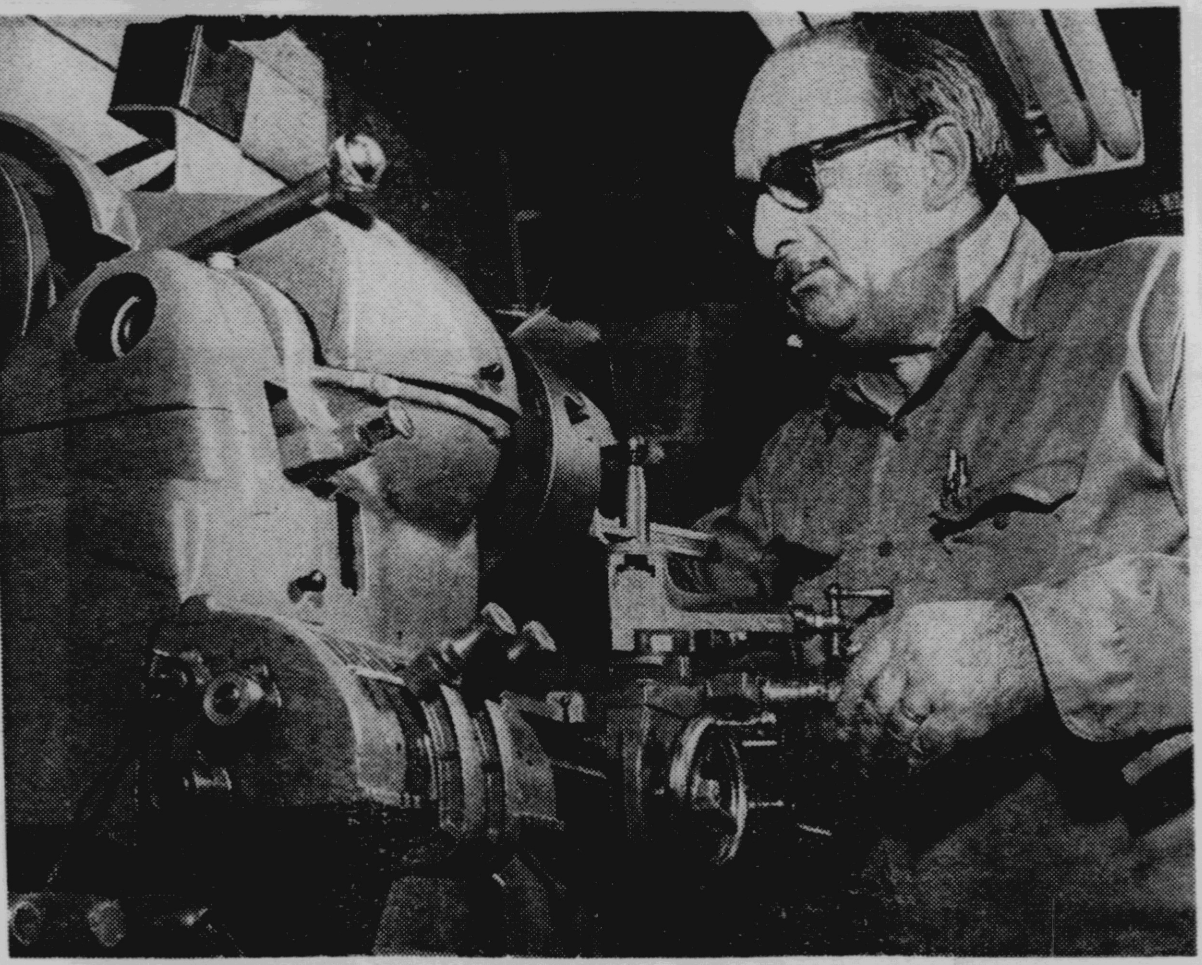
"But," laughs Cooper, "I hate to mar it. Maybe I'll put my name somewhere on the bottom though."

Cooper, a long-time electrician now working for the city and county of San Francisco as an electrical inspector, says that his next project is likely to be a cabinet with drawers that his wife wants for their home.

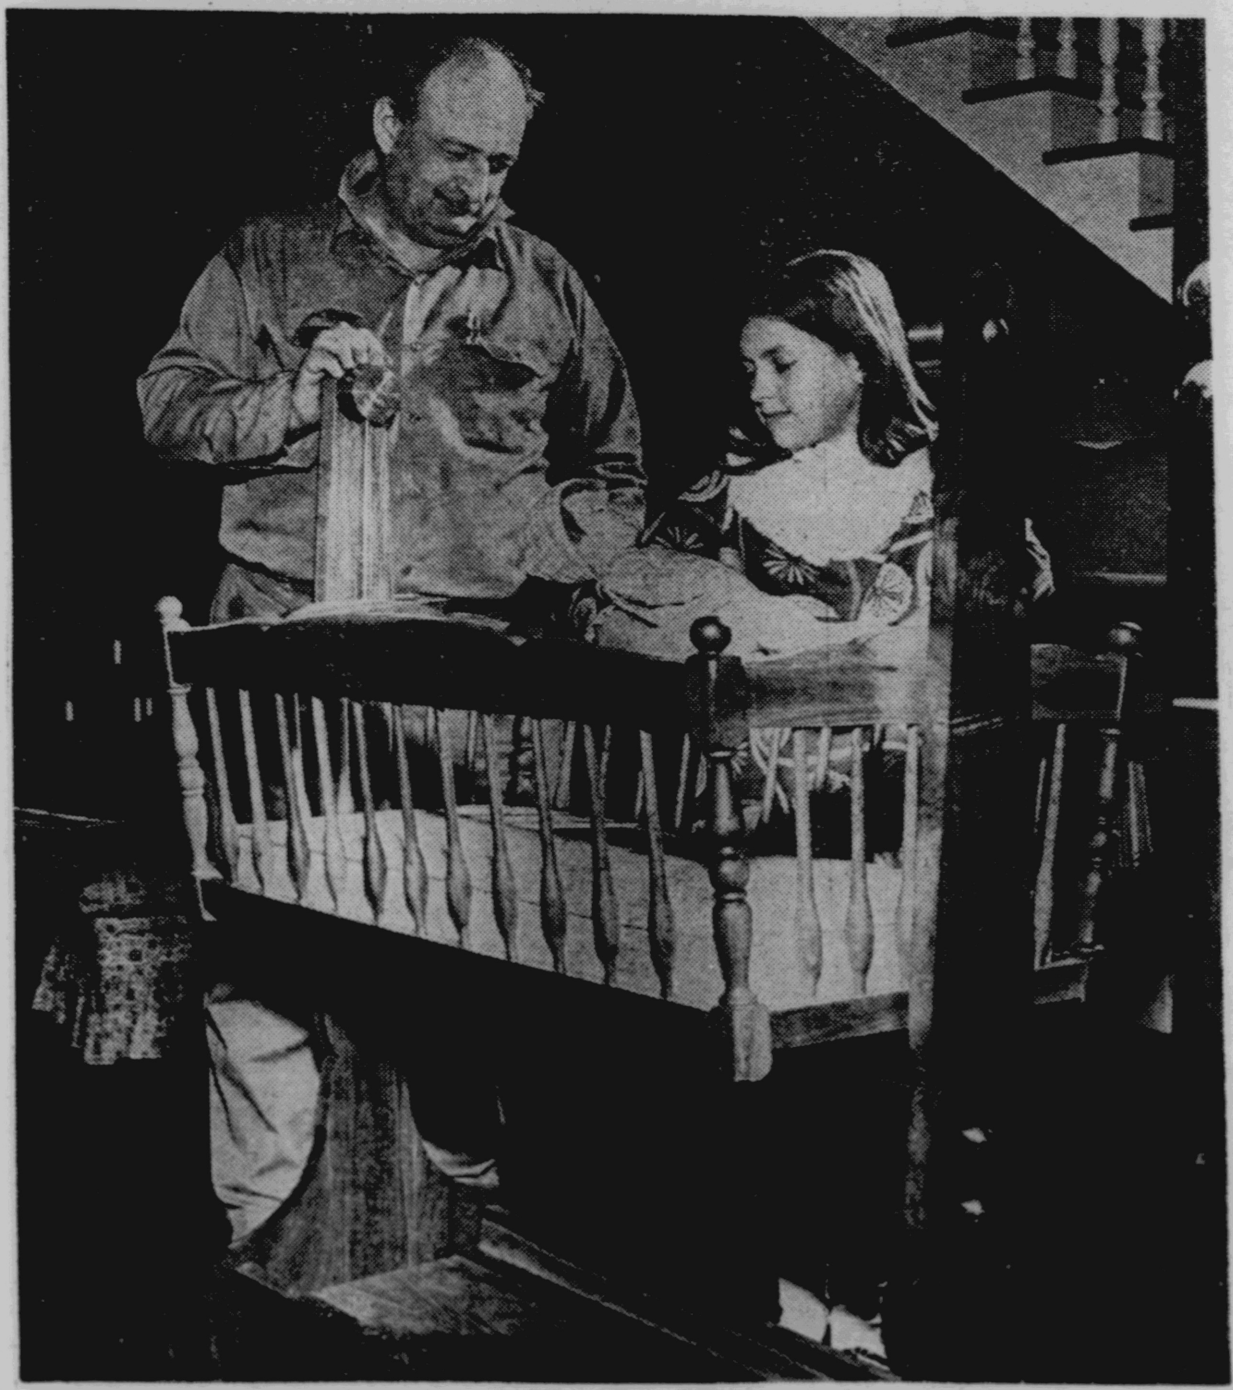
"I'LL PROBABLY start producing some sketches until I work out what she wants," he says.

Despite four and a half months during which most of his off-duty hours were spent in the workshop, Cooper is ready to proceed with his next woodcrafting job without delay.

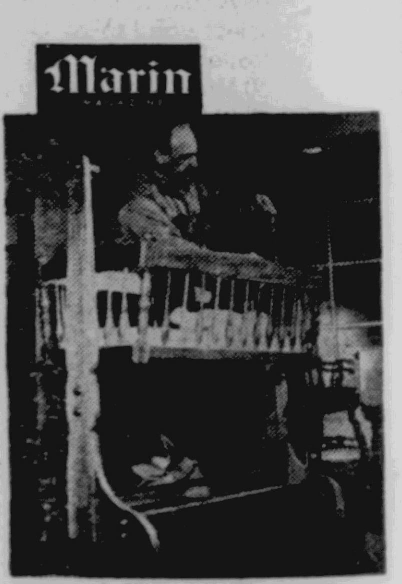
"I've discovered that when you use really top-grade woods, it isn't work at all," he says. "It's pure pleasure."



IN THE WORKSHOP at his Kentfield home, Robert Cooper used a metal-turning lathe for a woodworking project as he built a cradle for his first grandchild. The use of the machinist's lathe with its precise calibration enabled him to produce some fine detailing. But it also posed some special problems.



LITTLE Shirley Eddy and her doll help Robert Cooper in a "try-out" of the finished cradle. Cooper, an electrical inspector, finished his home project in time so that it was ready and waiting for his newly arrived granddaughter, baby Jessica Raznikov, at her Berkeley home.



COVER PHOTO

ROBERT COOPER uses his tape measure to check the dimensions of the cradle he built from fine walnut and brass for his first grandchild. The project is exemplary in its preciseness, every joint fitting perfectly. Cooper planned the cradle as a family heirloom to be passed along from generation to generation. AT RIGHT, Winifred Tanner, medical technologist at Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, determines the Rh types of two blood donors by spinning specimens in a centrifuge, then observing the test tubes containing the donors' red blood cells in an anti-Rh serum. In close-up above, cells in the test tube at right have been clumped by the reaction of the serum, indicating an Rh positive type. In tube at left, cells failed to agglutinate, indicating an Rh negative type.

Marin Blood Donors Play Vital Role In New Heart Surgery

At 8 o'clock on a recent Friday evening, Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society received an emergency order from Palo Alto Stanford Hospital for 13 pints of Group O, Rh positive blood.

The fresh blood was needed within six hours for heart transplant surgery on a 54-year-old housewife.

Irwin Blood Bank relayed the request to its Marin Blood Center where recruiters phoned 13 local donors to provide the blood. These donors included three housewives, four business men, a librarian, optician, student, airline ticket agent, machinist and an operating engineer.

THE SEVEN men and six women began arriving at the blood center at 9 p.m.

By midnight, the blood had been delivered to the headquarters blood bank in San Francisco. There it was processed in the laboratory and at 1 a.m. was rushed to Palo Alto Stanford Hospital in time for the surgery.

Although this was the first time Marin County blood donors have been called upon to play a behind-the-scenes role in transplant surgery, helping to provide blood vital to regular heart surgery has become a routine responsibility at the seven-year-old Marin Blood Center.

OPEN HEART surgery, unheard of a dozen years ago, is now being performed at a rate of 16 operations a week in seven hospitals served by Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Each operation requires an average of 16 units or pints of blood of the type matching that of the patient. The blood must be received from the donor within 48 hours before the surgery.

Depending on the procedure of the individual hospital, up to 10 of these units are drawn by the blood bank into plastic bags containing a special anti-coagulant solution (heparin) for use in priming the heart-lung machine during the operation. The remainder of the needed blood is drawn into plastic bags containing another anti-coagulant solution (ACD) and is used to provide post-operative transfusions for the patient.

In the past 10 years, the blood bank has provided more than 70,000 pints of blood for more than 5,000 patients undergoing open heart surgery in hospitals it serves.

EXCEPT IN unusual cases (such as the heart transplant described earlier) the blood used for the heart-lung machine is drawn at the headquarters blood bank in San Francisco. However, donors at the Marin Blood Center are playing an increasingly important role in filling orders for the blood used for transfusions for heart surgery patients.

The center, at 506 Fourth Street, San Rafael, is open to donors Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. On Tuesdays and Thursdays it is open to provide blood bank information and to recruit donors by telephone for the next day's needs.

When Marin donors are needed to assist in filling orders for heart surgery, the center is notified by the headquarters blood bank at least a day in advance.

RECENTLY, WHEN blood banks all over the country were experiencing a serious seasonal shortage of blood, the Marin Blood Center was able to provide four hard-to-get units of fresh Group AB, Rh negative blood for a heart patient.

AB negative blood occurs in only one person out of 167, or 0.6 per cent of the population. There are only 17 known donors with this type of blood currently listed in the Marin Blood Center's files — many others having AB Negative. Other hard-to-get negative blood types (A, B, and O Negative) are urgently sought by the center.

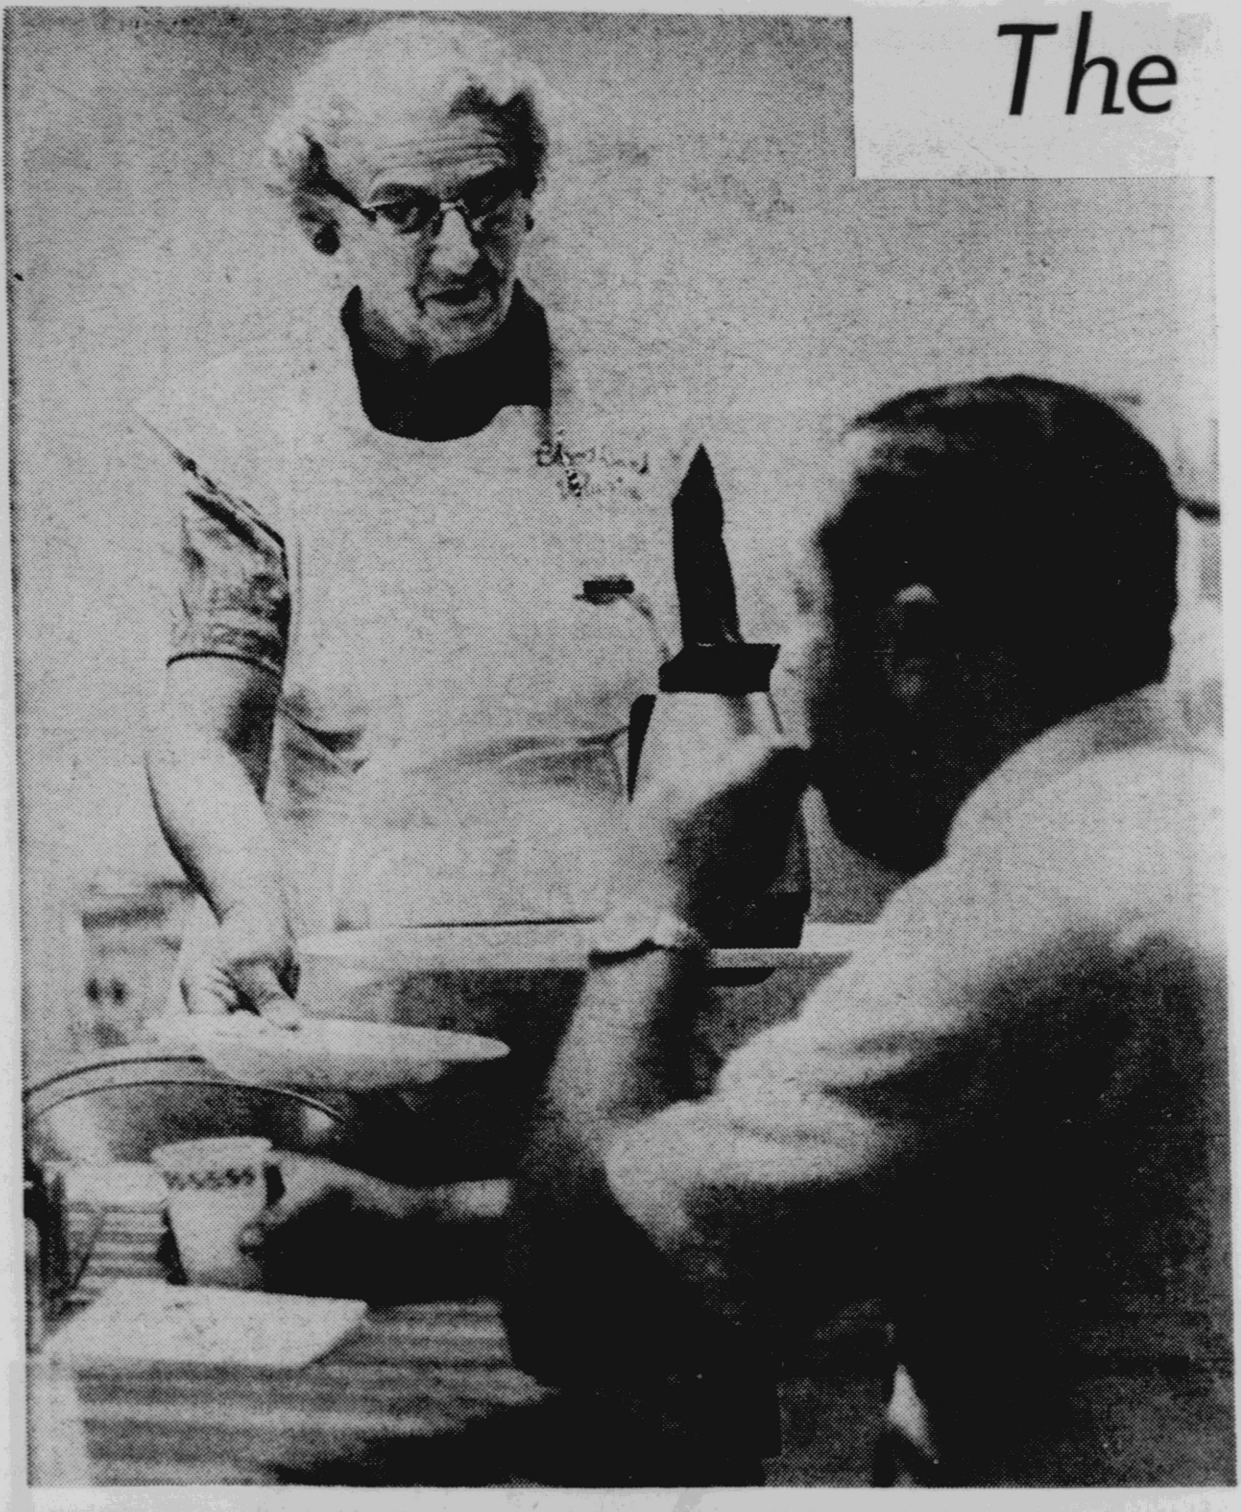
The Need For Blood



A DONOR AT the Marin Blood Center is served the customary refreshments by volunteer Mrs. Chester Monti after making his contribution to the vital program.

The Marin Blood Center began operations as an auxiliary of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society in May of 1961. It is sponsored by the Marin Medical Society and has the active support of many civic groups. Since its inception, it has collected 35,718 net units of blood.

DURING 1969, Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will need 100,000 units of blood to meet the requirements of 59 hospitals in eight counties —six of these hospitals in Marin. Although Marin County residents often receive blood as patients in San Francisco hospitals and elsewhere, as well as those in Marin, this year the blood bank will consign to Marin hospitals alone some 6,950 units of blood in the various groups and Rh types.

To keep pace with the growing local demand for blood, Marin residents, who donated 5,974 net units during 1968, will be expected to increase this total by nearly 1,000 units during 1969.

The past few years have seen a steady growth in the use of the components of whole blood for transfusion therapy.

In the past, the great majority of transfusions involved a unit of whole blood given by one donor and used by one patient. Now it is becoming more usual to fractionate a unit of blood into its component parts and to use these components to treat not just one but several patients.

THIS IS accomplished by drawing the blood into a special plastic bag with one or more satellite compartments. By spinning the bag in a centrifuge, the particular components — such as red cells or platelets — may be separated from the liquid portion of the blood and collected in the satellite compartments. The remaining liquid portion may be used to produce further components, such as fresh frozen plasma or cryoprecipitate, or be returned to the red blood cells to produce "platelet poor" blood or "leukocyte poor" blood.

The various components are used for patients with specific problems such as anemia, burns, hemorrhaging and various blood disorders.

Time is usually a vital factor in the preparation of components — most of which must be processed almost immediately, and some of which must be transfused within very few hours after the blood is received from the donor.

RECENTLY, A 34-year-old housewife receiving massive transfusions at a San Francisco hospital quickly drained supplies of the relatively uncommon Group O, Rh negative blood (one person in 15 has it).

Sixteen donors with blood of this type were recruited by the Marin Blood Center. Each unit of the blood was processed in the blood bank's laboratory to provide a unit of packed red cells needed the same day by the patient. The remaining plasma was used for other components.

Many recent cases can be cited in which patients hospitalized in Marin have created extraordinary demands for blood and blood components.

AMONG THESE patients (all hospitalized at Marin General Hospital) were a post-operative cancer patient who used 50 units of platelet concentrates in a nine-day period, a hemophiliac (bleeder) who used 48 units of cryoprecipitates in less than a month, and a victim of Hodgkins Disease who used 32 units of whole blood and platelet concentrates in a 10-day period.

Voluntary blood donors perform a dual service.

First, their gifts of blood are essential day after day in meeting both the regular and the special transfusion needs of the sick and injured. Second, every blood donation made is an investment in future protection for the donor, his family and neighbors.

When a donor gives a pint of blood, he receives a "credit" from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. At any time within a year from the date of donation, he may request the release of the credit for his own use or for any one else who may need blood. Or he may credit his blood donation to one of the many Blood Donor Club accounts maintained with the blood bank for the mutual protection of members of business, social, fraternal, church and community organizations.

Marin Blood Center is open Monday from noon to 6 p.m., Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Daedalians Find A Home At Hamilton

Military Flying Fraternity Welcomed To Air Base

To the uninitiated, the Order of Daedalians sounds very much like a college literary society or some kind of a secret, mystical organization.

There is, however, nothing secret or mystic about the Daedalians. And the membership of that unusual fraternal organization is much more at home at one of Uncle Sam's big air bases than on one of today's college campuses.

In fact, Hamilton Air Force Base is home or headquarters to one of its proudest units.

The Order of Daedalians was organized in 1934 by a small group of World War I aviators, the men who fought the first great battles in the skies.

THEIR PURPOSES: To preserve the extraordinary esprit de corps that had existed among them, and to impress upon a sometimes reluctant nation the importance of air power as a means of defense.

They were men dedicated to the thesis that the United States, for its own protection, must maintain a military air supremacy among the world powers.

Originally, membership was restricted to those commissioned officers of the U. S. army, navy and marine corps who had qualified as military aviators prior to Nov. 11, 1918, and to their male progeny.

BUT AS THE years began to thin their ranks, the Daedalians amended their bylaws to permit successive generations of military aviators to become eligible for membership in the name of deceased founder members, or in the name of deceased pilots who could have qualified as founder members.

Today the order maintains three categories of membership: founder member, hereditary member and named member.

The relaxed rules by no means open up the membership to all those who have worn military pilot wings. The honor is bestowed only upon those who are currently serving on active duty or are officially retired from active duty with the U. S. armed forces, and then only upon personal invitation and the recommendations of at least three Daedalians in good standing.

ON RARE occasions the order will waive its requirements and bestow membership upon some one who has made an outstanding contribution to aviation. The Daedalians do not solicit applications for membership.

The name "Daedalians" is derived from Greek mythology.

According to legend, Daedalus and his son Icarus were imprisoned on the island of Crete by the powerful King Minos. Unable to escape by land or sea, Daedalus reasoned that the king could not control the realm of the birds, and that therefore, he and Icarus should fly to freedom.

After fashioning wings of bird feathers and wax, Daedalus tutored his son in the mysteries of flight, cautioning him especially not to fly too low and too near the sea lest the spray sodden his feathers, nor too close to the sun lest the sun's heat melt the wax.

BUT WHEN father and son finally made their flight, Icarus, in his exuberance, disobeyed his parent's instructions and flew higher and higher. The sun did melt the wax, the wings disintegrated and Icarus plunged into what is now known as the Icarian Sea.

Daedalus, heartbroken, flew on to Greece to live out his years pondering the tragic fate of his son.

While the story is myth, the World War I pilots nevertheless decided to honor Daedalus as

ORDER OF DAEDALIANS

Golden Gate Flight Now Has A Home

the originator of man's quest to fly by adopting his name.

TODAY, THE Order of Daedalians numbers more than 4,000 active members in 22 chapters that have been designated as "flights."

Golden Gate Flight No. 5 was established for members residing in the San Francisco Bay Area and in nearby communities, and now has a roster of approximately 400 men, about half of whom reside in Northern California. Marin County has contributed 25 Daedalians to Flight No. 5. Many of the other members are overseas in active military service.

Until fairly recently, Flight No. 5 also represented the Order of Daedalians in most of the western states including Alaska and Hawaii. With the encouragement and support of Flight No. 5, however, new units were formed for the Los Angeles area (Flight No. 7), the San Diego area (Flight No. 13) and Alaska (Polar Flight No. 10 in Anchorage and Farthest North Flight No. 21 at Fairbanks).

SAIGON FLIGHT No. 14 is headquartered in Saigon. And movements are under way to form Cascade Flight No.22 in Seattle and Aloha Flight No. 23 in Hawaii.

It is Golden Gate Flight No. 5 that recently found a home at Hamilton Air Force Base. Until then, the unit lacked a permanent base of operations using the Presidio of San Francisco postal address as its "headquarters."

Col. Charles L. Praul of Flight No. 5, former base commander at Hamilton, was instrumental in making available to the Northern California Daedalians space in the Officers' Club at the North Marin installation. The facilities there will serve as a combination office and historical display room where will repose Flight 5's flags, trophies and a photographic history of military aviation.

IN THEIR EFFORT to assure the continuation of American preeminence in the air and space, the Daedalians encourage and counsel young men to become armed forces aviators.

The Daedalian Foundation, supported by the financial contributions from the members, annually presents awards to outstanding military commands and units to instill a competitive spirit and a striving for excellence in the flying services.

Perhaps most coveted is the Daedalian Flying Safety Trophy that goes to the command achieving the best record for flight safety each year. Other Daedalian awards are for excellence in the maintenance of aircraft and weapon systems, and for superior technical supply and personnel management systems.

AWARDS ARE made, too, to distinguished graduates of the four military academies including scholarship grants of $2,500 for advanced studies in the aeronautical and astronautical sciences.

An outstanding pilot graduate at each of the respective services' advanced flying schools is given a special achievement award.

To recognize excellence in civil aviation, the Order of Daedalians annually presents a trophy to an airline flight crew that has shown extraordinary skill, knowledge and judgment in the air under emergency flying conditions.

The organization of Golden Gate Flight No. 5, as well as the other flights, is along quasi-military lines. There is an executive staff elected annually in December. The presiding officer bears the title of flight captain and is the chief administrator, assisted by a vice captain, a flight adjutant, a flight treasurer and a flight provost marshal.

LT. COL. DON Disbrow, U. S. Air Force Retired, a veteran pilot of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, is the current flight captain. He is a Vacaville resident.

Lt. Col. William Gatchet of Hamilton Base is the vice captain, Col. Robin C. Cannon of Novato the flight adjutant, Lt. Col. Samuel S. Richards of Oakland the flight treasurer and Col. Charles O. Garrels of Brentwood the flight provost marshal.

Col. Charles T. Stoffer of Greenbrae, a pioneer flyer of renown, is the flight historian.

Six standing committees are appointed for specific functions, and their chairmen along with

"Who Stained The Neck Of My Dress?"
At least once a year I answer this complaint which is asked much more frequently. Usually, the "stain" is noticed when a garment if first removed from storage. The "stain" wasn't there when the dress was put away, but now it is.
The "stain" is actually a color removal caused by a cold wave solution. Somehow in a beauty shop or at home, a hair set lotion has come in contact with the garment. The oxidizing agent in the lotion works very slowly, often taking three or four months in storage. Sometimes the color loss isn't noticed until after the garment has been drycleaned. Once the color has been removed, it cannot be restored. Take care, we repeat, to wear a "don't care" garment when having your hair set or doing it yourself.

ELLIOT SE O488147

An Exclusive Organization For Men Who Have Battled In Skies

Marin Well Represented On Roster Of Aviation's Order Of Daedalians

the executive staff make up the flight's board of directors.

Golden Gate Flight 5's roster is replete with illustrious names from military and civilian aviation history.

INCLUDED ARE Col. John A. MacCready, the first pilot to fly non-stop across the American continent in 1922 and a pioneer in high altitude flight; Gen. Otto P. Weyland, a distinguished Air Force commander, and Maj. Gen. Carroll W. McColpin of American Eagle Squadron fame.

Of special interest to Marinites is the name of the late Clinton Jones, a Marin County native who was a leading flying ace of World War I.

Captain Jones, born and reared in Ross, was credited with downing eight enemy aircraft plus three unconfirmed victories in aerial combat over France in 1918. Serving with the 22nd Aero Squadron, American Expeditionary Force, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross for gallantry in action.

RECENTLY THE World War I hero's son, Clinton Jones III, presented a 1918 photographic portrait of his father to Golden Gate Flight 5. It will be permanently displayed at the new headquarters at Hamilton Base.

The Daedalians generally are a hardy lot, and the founding members, 70-odd years and older, looking back on military careers that reach back half a century and more, hold their own with their younger compatriots.

"They know how to enjoy themselves," says Colonel Disbrow, "and it takes a major catastrophe to keep them away from our meetings and activities."

HE POINTS to Col. Edward V. Pettis of San Jose, a youthful 81 who not only promises that he will still be around at 90, but will still be attending the national conventions of the Daedalians as well.

"Ed means it," adds the Flight 5 captain, "and no one of us doubt him. I'll bet he keeps his word."

The Daedalian founder members do not dwell in the past. Their interest is as up to date as today's space explorations and exploits. But coaxed by their younger fraternal brothers, they'll sometimes tell stories of what it was like to fly back in 1918.

ONE SUCH is Maj. Stuart E. Elliott of San Rafael. He recalls clearly the exact date — July 1, 1918 — that he was transfered from a pilots' pool to the 13th Aero Squadron of the Second Pursuit Group, a newly organized squadron commanded by Lafayette Escardrille veteran Capt. Charles J. Biddle, for active duty.

"We were equipped with 21 of the latest model Spad XIIIs," he relates. "They were powered with 220 horsepower-geared Hispano Suiza motors with a range of two hours and 20 minutes flying time. They carried two Marlin machine guns synchronized to fire through the propeller, and two 12-kilo bombs attached to a rack beneath the cockpit. Their top speed was 136

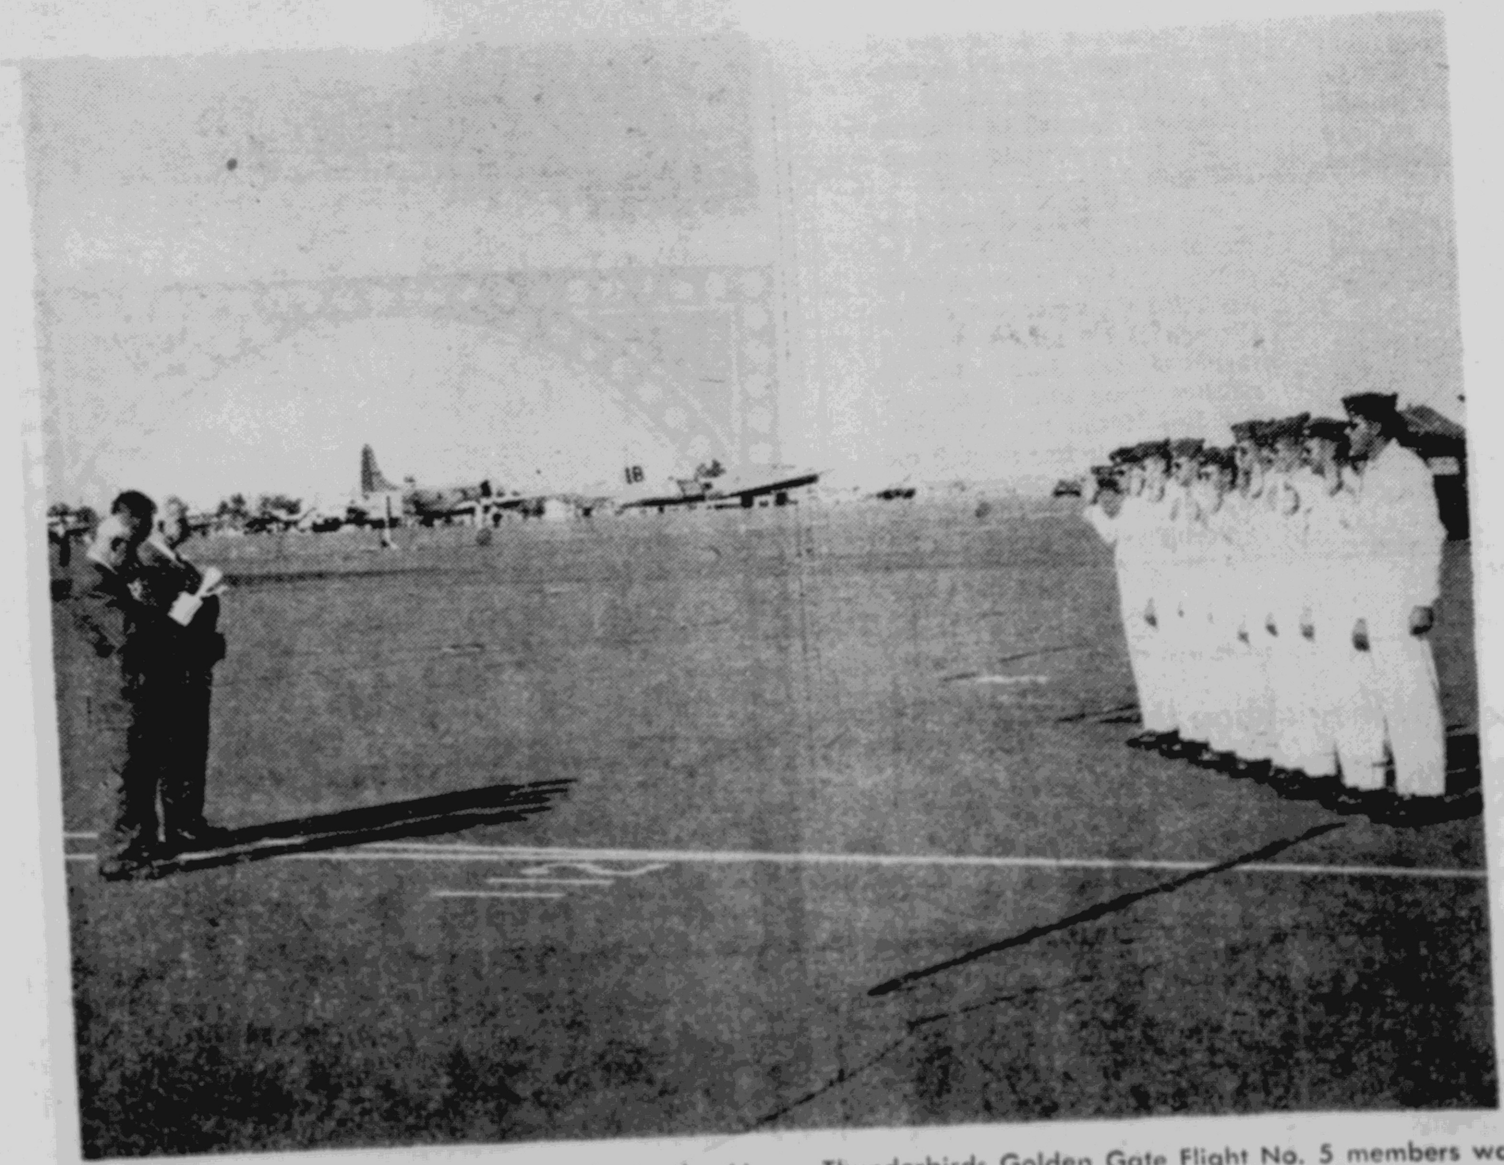
The Order Of Daedalians Supports U.S.

Organization Of Armed Forces Fliers Insists We Must Maintain Our Aerial Superiority

A DISMANTLED Jenny of World War I vintage was unloaded at Sacramento to play a part in an Order of Daedalians function. More than a few of the members of the military aviation fraternity had once flown the Jennies. This vintage aircraft had been "airlifted" by C-124 to Sacramento from the widely known Harrah's collection at Reno.



THE INTERNATIONALLY-KNOWN Thunderbirds, the Air Force's precision and stunt flying team, were indicted into the Order of Daedalians at Hamilton Air Force Base. Conducting the initiation ritual that made the Thunderbirds Golden Gate Flight No. 5 members was Col. Livingston Irving of Oakland. The Daedalians infrequently waive their rigid membership requirement rules to take in men who have made especially noteworthy contributions to aviation.

miles an hour.

"Our squadron was organized into three flights that patrolled a 40-mile front on the Toul area extending to St. Mihiel on the west. I flew with the first flight and was the No. 2 wingman to the leader who was none other than Princeton's immortal Hobey Baker, who also came from the Lafayette Escadrille. We alternated the flights at 6,000, 12,000 and 18.000 feet levels.

"OPPOSING US on the German side were an assortment of older Phalzes and Albatrosses, several photo reconaissance Rumplers and a squadron of modern Fokkers. We had bagged a few of the older planes and now action was lagging until one day near St. Mihiel six of us observed six Fokkers flying in the same direction, all at 18,000 feet.

"Both flights began a climbing match, seeking the advantage of the higher altitude prior to attack. The air was thin and cold and the Spads flew wobbly as we reached 21,000 feet and well above the also struggling Fokkers. We dove and chased them 15 miles inside the enemy lines and almost to the ground where we had to give up our quarry due to heavy ground fire.

"The results were indeterminate, but that engagement must have created a record height for World War I fighters. Oxygen and parachutes had not been developed and the open cockpits lacked heat or comfort provisions."

THE START of the St. Mihiel offensive, Major Elliott recalls, marked an end to the lull in the aerial excitement as well.

"It was hot mustard then," he says, "right up until the Armistice."

The famed Richtofen Circus was transferred to an area relatively close to Elliott's squadron.

"Although the baron was by then dead, his brother, Ernst Udet, Herman Goering and other top German aces made the going very rough for us. In the first two days of the drive they downed six of our pilots."

Shortly thereafter, Elliott says, his unit was transferred to another hot spot, Belrain in the Argonne, "and the action remained quite heavy."

HARKENING BACK to a lighter side of those thrill-filled days of more than half a century ago, Elliott says: "In my 18 months on the Allied front I never saw a flier with one of those long scarves streaming back from his collar.

"A muffler in any event was well-tucked beneath a garment so that it could not become entangled in control wires."

And he adds with a smile: "Naturally, while flying over the lines, I never spotted Errol Flynn — nor Snoopy."

Thus do these pioneers of military aviation exchange humor-tinged recollections at their periodic get-togethers. But always the emphasis remains upon the present — how to help keep Uncle Sam's aerial ar strong and ready for all eve tualities.

which Flight 5 is always well represented. The traditional site for that meeting has been Kelly Air Force Base at San Antonio, Tex. But when the San Antonio Exposition caused a shortage of accommodations in 1968, the convention was shifted to Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio.

Approximately 800 members flew in for a busy three-day program and for the renewal of cherished friendships.

Gen. Frank P. Lahm of Flight No. 9, hosts for the 1968 event, has urged that the 1969 convention also be held at Wright-Patterson. But other flights are also interested and it seems likely that the 1969 gathering will be at Ent Air Force Base in Colorado under auspices of Falcon Flight No. 11. San Diego Flight No. 13 hopes to be the 1970 host.

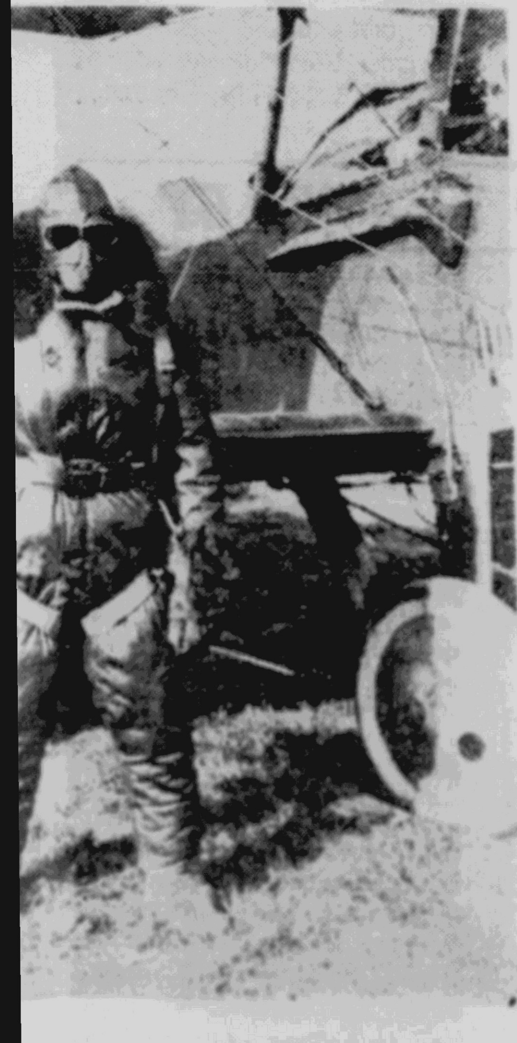
Observes Colonel Disbrow: "With a little campaigning on the part of Marin County, San Rafael and Novato chambers of commerce, there is no reason why the 1971 Daedalian convention might not be held at Hamilton Air Force Base, especially in view of the new convention accommodations going up in Marin."

BUT WHETHER the big national gathering is brought here or not, more and more Marinites in the future are going to recognize the Order of Daedalians for what it is. No longer will it be mistaken for a college literary or debating society.

"Now that we have a permanent home base at Hamilton," says Colonel Disbrow, "Northern Californians can expect to hear a great deal more about the Daedalians and Flight 5.

"Aviators have a way of making their presence known!"

ROWING, NOT aviation, was the subject of the moment when these three ex-aviators and ex-oarsmen got together at a Daedalian social function. Left to right they are Jim Cavagnaro of Sonoma County, famous rowing coach Carrol (Ky) Ebright of Berkeley, and Edson (Jack) Berlin of Marin.



AMONG THE celebrities from aviation belonging to Golden Gate Flight No. 5, Order of Daedalians, is Col. John A. Macready, whose most famous feat occurred in 1923 when with another lieutenant, Oakley Kelly, he made the first non-stop transcontinental flight, New York to San Diego, in 26 hours, 50 minutes. Colonel Macready, now residing in Mariposa, regards his pioneering flights in high altitudes as a more significant contribution to aviation. At left he is seen in full regalia for a 1920 flight to 40,000 feet, the first entry by man into outer space where he encountered temperatures 82 degrees below zero and atmospheric pressure that fell from 14.7 pounds to one pound. Above, Macready is shown after landing from his historic altitude record flight with dignitaries that included Orville Wright, at right, the father of aviation and an official observer of his exploit.

The Prettiest Spot In India

The Travel Pages

Lazy lagoons, palm-fringed beaches, groves of mangoes, pineapples and coconut make Goa, India's tiny state, one of the most pleasant and prettiest places on earth.

For those who enjoy historical attractions in addition to natural beauty, little Goa, only 80 minutes by air from Bombay, offers these, too, as well as cozy hotels with all the amenities.

The sights in Goa are surprising — more European than Indian. This is because the Portuguese ruled there for 450 years, and left their imprint on the people in such fields as religion and architecture as seen in the numerous churches and convents. There is also a sprinkling of Hindu temples, and the 600,000 inhabitants of Goa live in harmony while practicing either Christianity or Hinduism.

GOA HAS AN abundance of deep rivers, so one of the most delightful ways of getting from place to place is by boat. At the tourist office in the heart of Panjim, the capital, you can make arrangements for a boat to transport you to Old Goa, once the handsome 16th and 17th Century capital, and now just a shell of its former glory days.

After you diesmbark from your boat at Old Goa, you will pass through the Viceregal Arch. Centuries ago, this privilege was reserved for the entrance of each new viceroy who marched through the arch with great ceremony as a symbolic entrance to the city, before taking office.

Old Goa is easy to explore on foot. As you stroll in the town square, now just a field of wildflowers, it may chill you to know that inquisitions were conducted there in former days. On the hillside near Old Goa, you can find bits of painted patterned bricks that used to adorn some of the churches that are now in a state of decay.

THERE IS NO fixed itinerary needed for strolling through Old Goa to see the remaining houses of worship. But, you should make sure to see:

Bom Jesus Basilica — The largest in Old Goa, it took 10 years to build and is in the Jesuit style of architecture. In the richly decorative interior, there is a lavishly adorned casket containing the body of St. Francis of Xavier. The casket was a gift from a former Duke of Tuscany, and the bronze panels on it depict scenes from Francis' life. The entire chapel is marble, inlaid with semi-precious stones and decorated with paintings of the saint's life.

A small museum, adjoining this chapel, has some sacred objects that are worth seeing.

The Chapel of St. Catherine is a gem of a church in the Renaissance style, one of the earliest and smallest in Old Goa.

St. Francis of Assisi Church and Convent is a lovely example of Portuguese religious art; the spacious church has a simple facade with an interior embellished by a rich stucco ceiling and a great many carvings. There is a museum adjacent with old portraits of former governors and other historical and religious paintings.

St. Cajetan is where carvings, twisted columns — the best of the flamboyant baroque — can be seen within, while the outside is an elegant neo-classic in design with twin towers and a dome. There is a gracefully arched window with panes of seashells in delicate pastel hues. The tombs of former Portuguese rulers are in the crypt.

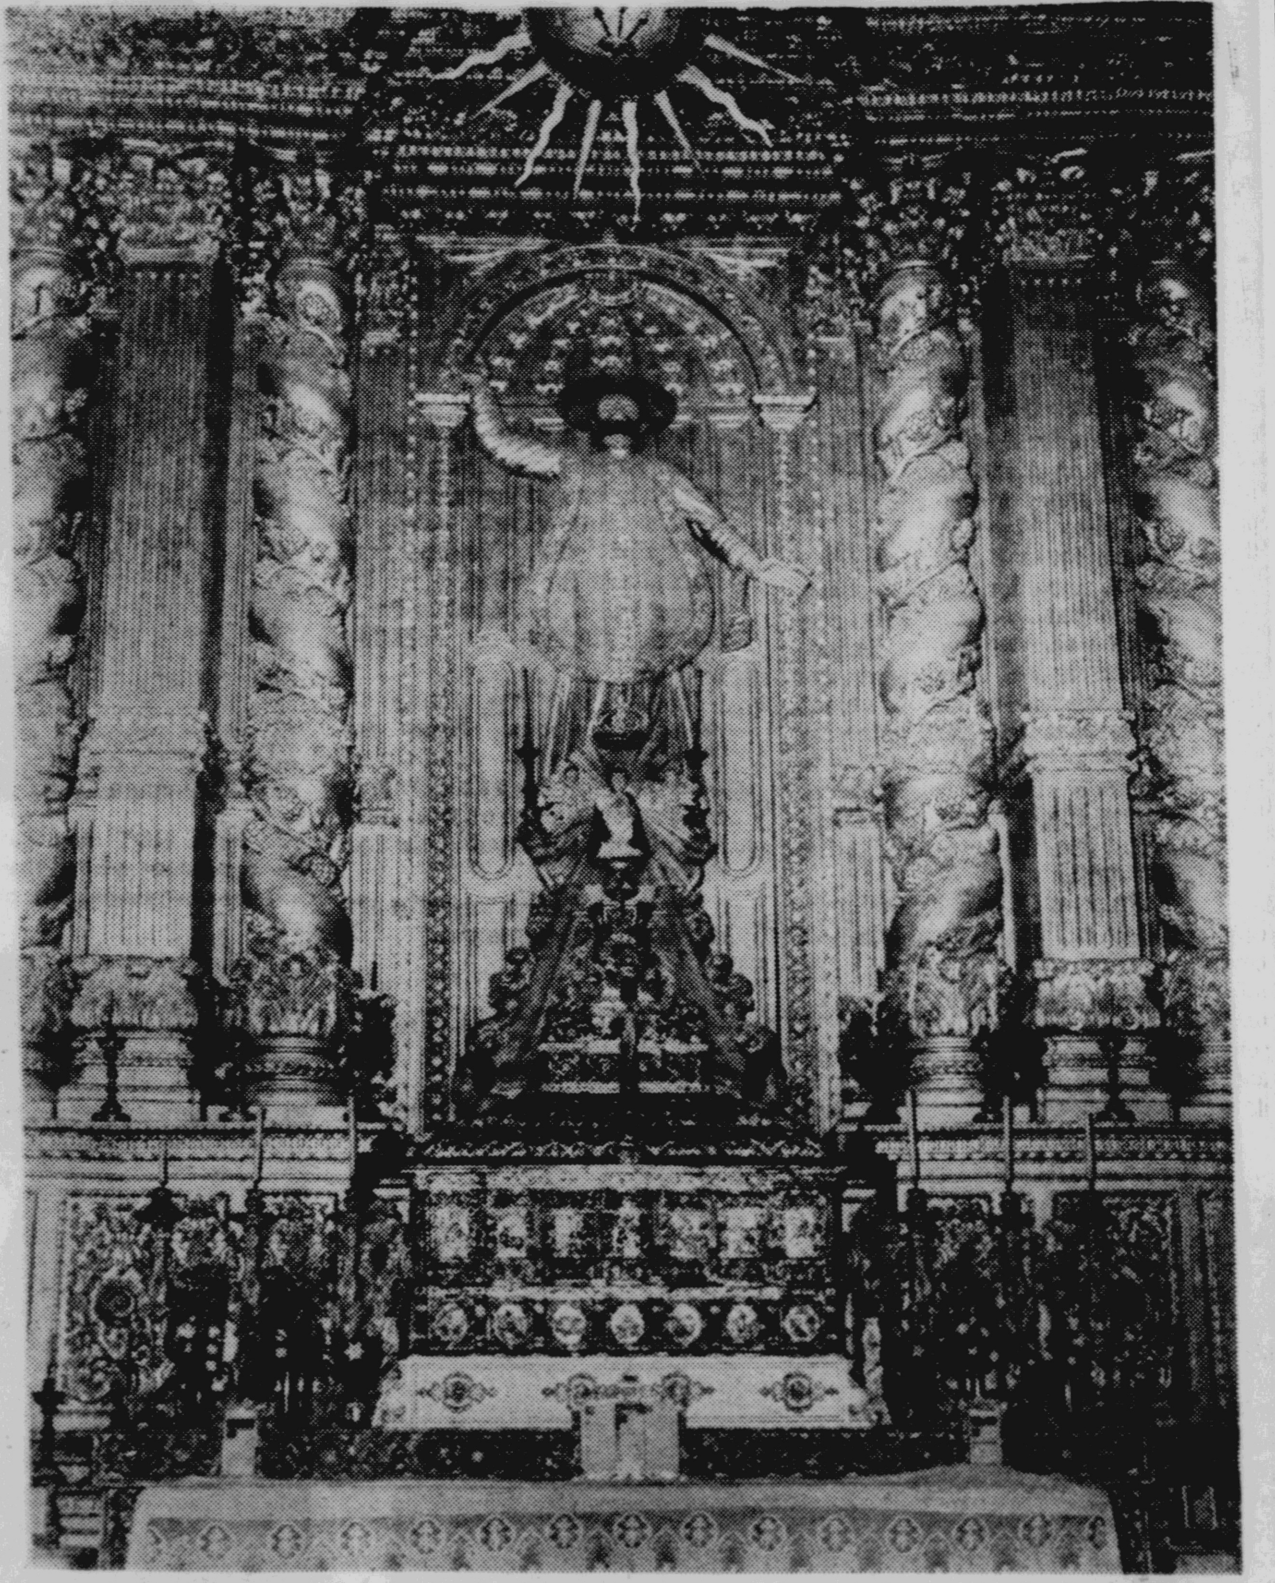
Se Cathedral is huge, white, with barrel vaulted ceilings and such trappings as Corinthian columns, richly carved scenes of the life of Christ and the Virgin, and captivating altar pieces. In a corner is a cross upon which a vision of Christ was supposed to have appeared in 1919.

AFTER YOUR cathedral viewing, you can walk up the hill of Monte Santo to see further remnants of the days of the Portuguese. Chief among these is the convent of the Church of Santa Monica which once held more than 100 nuns, but slowly diminished until the last nun died in 1885. A cross believed to be miraculous, can be seen in the pristine convent church.

As to other Goa points of interest, inland, near the town of Ponga, is the tastefully designed Mangesh Temple, a Hindu place of worship with a cool white marble interior.

With his sightseeing duties fulfilled, the smart tourist makes a beeline for one of Goa's idyllic beaches. There are many along the coastline, but two of the most popular are at Colva and Calangute beaches where there are long stretches of sand and cool coconut groves for shade.

But even these beaches are not Coney Island popular. Goa has not been "discovered," as yet. But it should be — by you.



THIS MAGNIFICENTLY ornate shrine to St. Francis Xavier is to be seen in India's state of Goa on the Arabian Sea. The saint's body is entombed in the richly adorned casket in Bom Jesus Basilica in Old Goa.

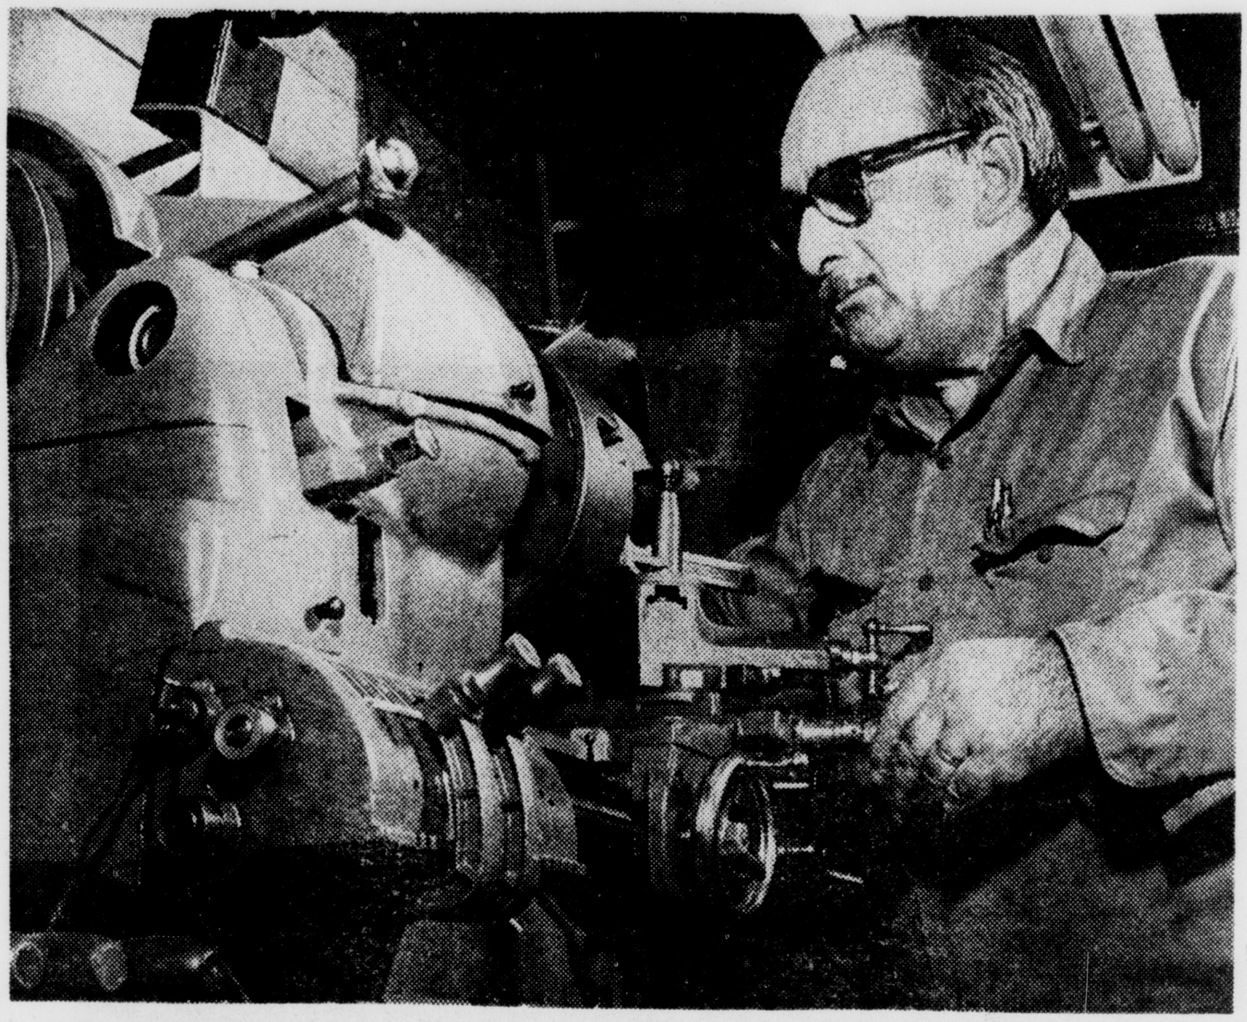
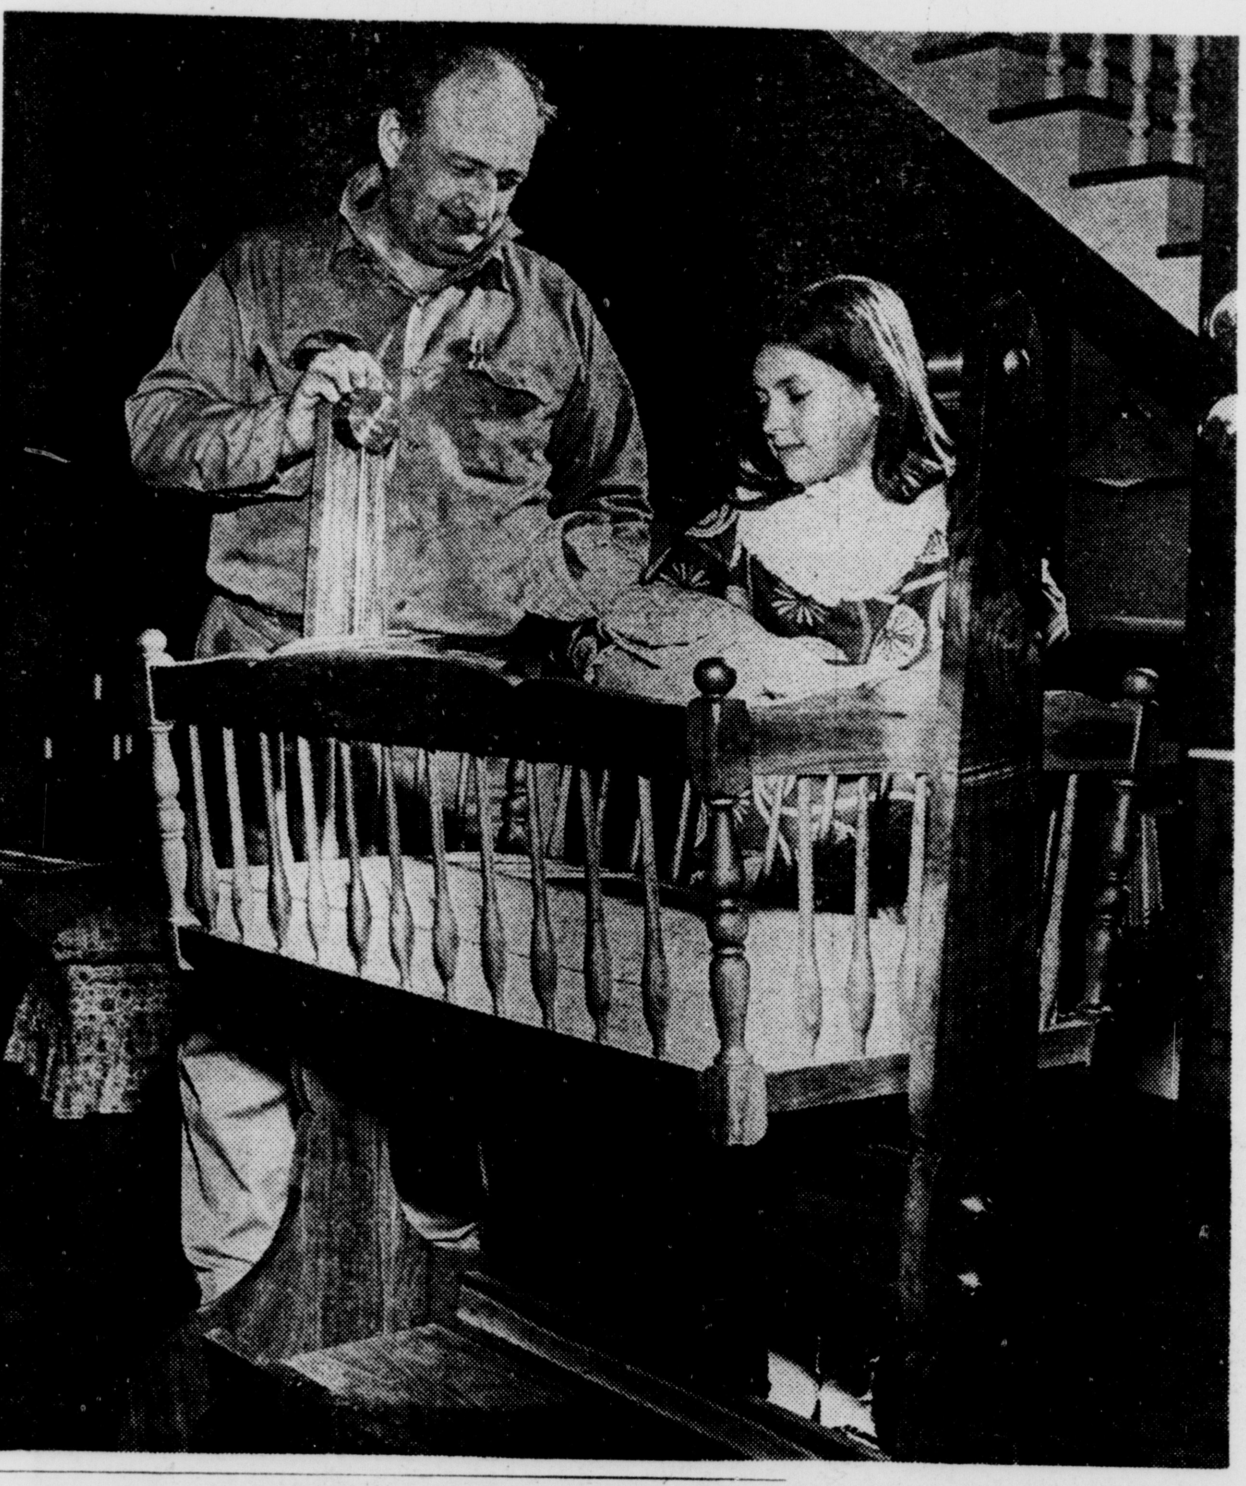
Grandfather Builds Cradle For A Baby

For The First Grandchild, It Had To Be Something Special

By DON KEOWN



IN THE WORKSHOP at his Kentfield home, Robert Cooper used a metal-turning lathe for a woodworking project as he built a cradle for his first grandchild. The use of the machinist's lathe with its precise calibration enabled him to produce some fine detailing. But it also posed some special problems.



LITTLE Shirley Eddy and her doll help Robert Cooper in a "try-out" of the finished cradle. Cooper, an electrical inspector, finished his home project in time so that it was ready and waiting for his newly arrived granddaughter, baby Jessica Raznikov, at her Berkeley home.

A first grandchild, thought Robert Cooper of Kentfield, is deserving of something special.

So when their oldest daughter, Mrs. Richard Raznikov of Berkeley, informed the Coopers she was expecting her first child, her father asked her: "How would you like a cradle for the baby?"

Mrs. Raznikov was pleased with the suggestion, and so Cooper set out to build what had to be no ordinary cradle.

Cooper is an experienced home handyman, having remodeled his house at 14 Acadia Avenue and having built such furniture pieces as bookcases and cabinets.

BUT THE CRADLE he produced after four and a half months of working evenings and weekends in his home workshop he regards as his crowning achievement.

"I've never produced anything else this finely crafted," he says.

To begin with, there was the wood.

"I selected the very finest walnut," he says.

A GREAT DEAL of the pleasure Cooper derived from his project he credits to that selection.

"It was wonderful wood to work with," he says. "From now on I'm working with nothing but walnut and brass."

Cooper's workshop is located in one half of his double garage.

"My son and I keep our miniature railroad in the other half of the garage," he laughs, "and the cars sit outside."

IN IT HE HAS the usual power saw, and a lathe. But it is not the lathe ordinarily associated with woodwork. Rather, it is a metal-turning lathe. And while not customarily used for turning wood, its precisely minute and controlled calibration has enabled Cooper, working from his own drawings, to produce his spokes and other carved cradle parts in remarkably fine detail.

Indicative of the care that Cooper put into his project are the ornamental brass caps which he produced himself to cover the screw heads.

The rocking mechanism with its ball-bearing action reflects the same striving for perfection as does the furniture.

COOPER THEN climaxed his project by giving the walnut a handrubbed oil finish that brought out the grain of the fine wood in all its glory.

Use of the metal lathe on wood, however, did pose one problem.

"The sawdust from the wood soaks up the oil, and it is next to impossible to keep the machine oiled," he says. "But since I don't have a wood lathe, I just pour on the oil and try to do my best."

HIS BEST IS very, very good.

The cradle, with a swinging crib that measures 34 by 17 inches, has won the praise of those accustomed to professional cabinetry.

Cooper completed the cradle in time so that it was in the Raznikov home in Berkeley and waiting when baby Jessica, born Jan. 24 at Marin General Hospital, and her mother arrived there.

Says Mrs. Cooper of her husband's project: "It is the kind of thing that is passed down from generation to generation."

COOPER ADMITS: "Yes, I made it as an heirloom."

Thus Mrs. Raznikov insists her father should affix his signature somewhere on the cradle so that future generations will remain aware of who the builder was.

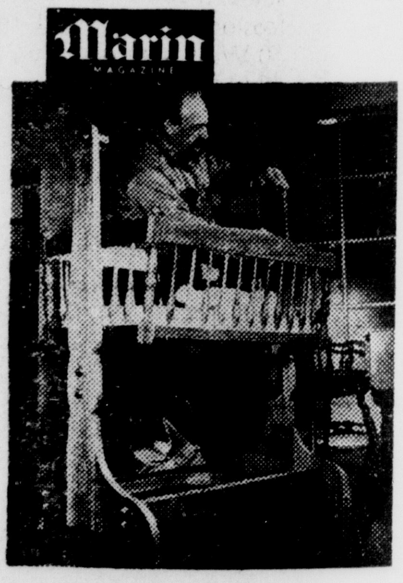
"But," laughs Cooper, "I hate to mar it. Maybe I'll put my name somewhere on the bottom though."

Cooper, a long-time electrician now working for the city and county of San Francisco as an electrical inspector, says that his next project is likely to be a cabinet with drawers that his wife wants for their home.

"I'LL PROBABLY start producing some sketches until I work out what she wants," he says.

Despite four and a half months during which most of his off-duty hours were spent in the workshop, Cooper is ready to proceed with his next wood-crafting job without delay.

"I've discovered that when you use really top-grade woods, it isn't work at all," he says. "It's pure pleasure."



COVER PHOTO

ROBERT COOPER uses his tape measure to check the dimensions of the cradle he built from fine walnut and brass for his first grandchild. The project is exemplary in its preciseness, every joint fitting perfectly. Cooper planned the cradle as a family heirloom to be passed along from generation to generation. The Arizona Town That Refused To Lie Down And Die

What happens to a town threatened with oblivion by the march of progress; a town founded in the best traditions of the Old West by miners and pioneers, and instrumental in the history of a frontier state?

A town, like a family, is only as strong as the people who comprise it, and Wickenburg, Ariz., has kept the determination of its forefathers intact. While many cities fight for survival against freeways bulldozing through the center of town, Wickenburg's nemesis is just the reverse.

Located in central Arizona on the major east-west highways to California, the town is shortly to be bypassed by a new route 40 miles to the south — an eventuality that could liquidate several businesses immediately and eventually rob the town of its livlihood — tourism.

FACED WITH this, other communities have given up after a brief fight, leaving the town to those who moved in to take advantage of the depressed real estate and those few who chose to remain. Wickenburg, however, is unique in that almost every resident is thereby choice rather than necessity. Its businesses were established by people who came as visitors, liked the town for its climate, geography and atmosphere, and stayed on. Then they looked around to see what "their" town needed to keep it growing, and proceeded to fill that need.

Now these same citizens have taken a longer look and decided that the community deserves to survive.

Now that tourists will no longer be delivered to the door in such great numbers, how will the town go out and bring them in — and make them want to stay? How does it convince residents that the community is worth saving and revitalizing in the face of possible disaster?

FIRST IT rallies and reorganizes its chamber of commerce: throws out the "nothing-can-be-done" attitude; silences the "it's-been tried" contingent; refuses to accept the "can't-afford-it" view; and comes up with a group and spirit that say, "Let's go!". And Wickenburg has taken off with the bit in its teeth, but with the firm hand of the Roundup Club (the chamber of commerce) on the reins to guide it.

Spurred by local interest and the exhilaration of its possibilities, the Maricopa County Historical Society chose Wickenburg as the spot for the Maricopa County Museum — a fitting tribute to its past and a show of confidence in its future.

The Desert Caballeros, a riding group of men from 27 states, contributed its fine collection of western artifacts, and local talent and devotion had made the museum a point of town pride.

THE TOWN council was encouraged to build a municipal park with a shooting range, and a new arena for the thrills and spills of rodeo and gymkhana entertainment befitting the Old West tradition.

Local business men joined with a winter resident in the same field to establish a radio station. Listed as the smallest in the world, it tells the Wickenburg story to some 40,000 persons each day on the highways and in neighboring towns.

The community has organized an industrial development group, with money in the bank waiting to go to a business that would fit into the life of Wickenburg without heavy industry and its resultant air pollution and problems, but with the promise of employment for the town's young people. Moreover, for immediate growth, this same group has gotten an industrial air park off the drawing boards and fast abuilding on the outskirts, with the first commercial fly-in slated for May, 1969.

CONSTRUCTION is also about to begin on an $85,000 public library, financed by residents and designed by one of Arizona's leading architects.

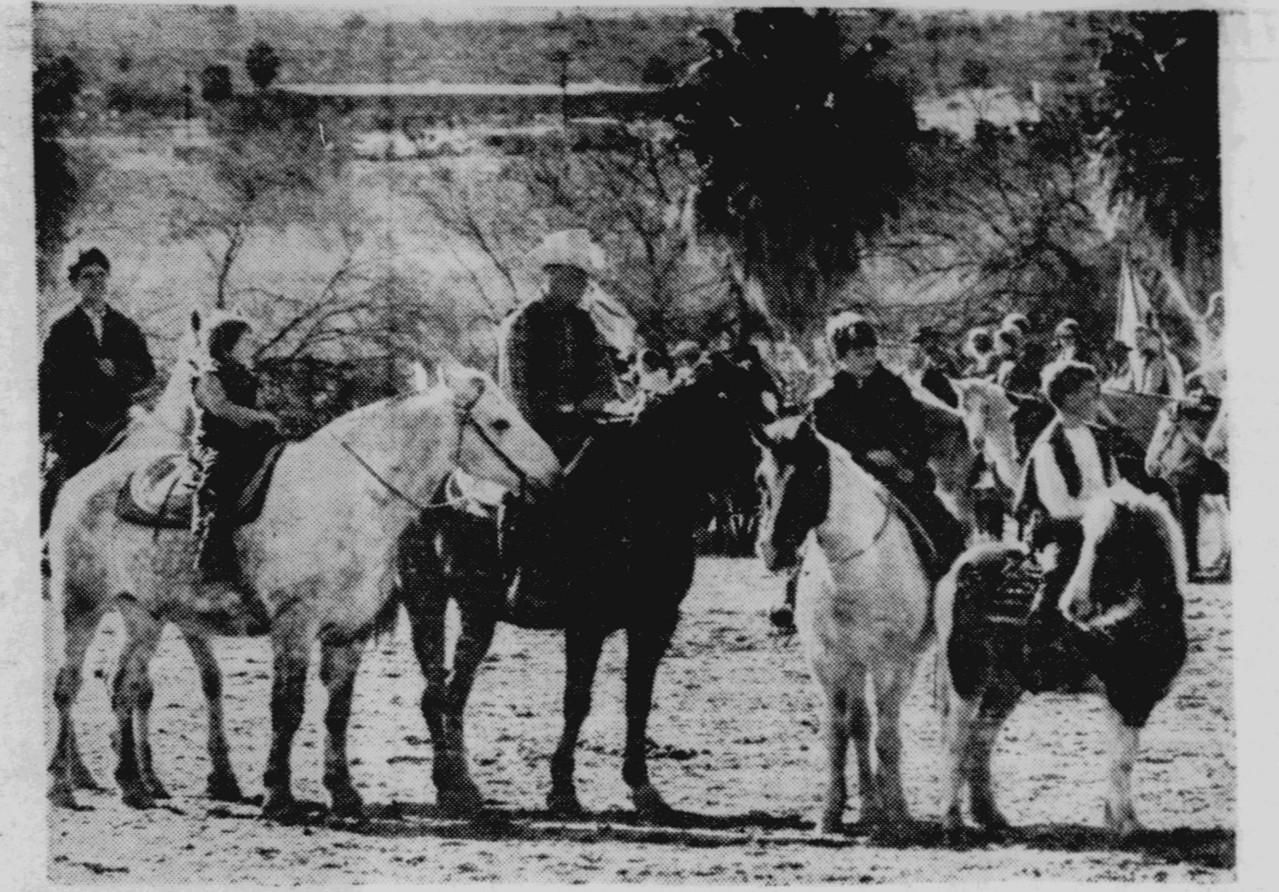
The town is also pushing the development of a dam and recreation area on a nearby river, provided that there are controls to insure its use by responsible vacationers who will appreciate its facilities and help to maintain its desirability as a recreation spot. In the near future, too, Wickenburg plans to build a convention center/community building for the use and enjoyment of both visitors and local organizations.

Granted, a working dream as big as Wickenburg's for its near-3,000 population is more expensive than simply hoping and planning, so a new 1 per cent sales tax, the first in the history of the town, was proposed and passed and put into effect on Jan. 1, 1969. And so confident is the town in its own future that private concerns are building three major subdivisions of exclusive size and in keeping with the high caliber of homes ready established in Wickenburg.

TRAILER PARKS abound, but here again, don't be fooled. You'd better call them mobile home parks, pardner, or practice your fast draw! Sometimes it's hard to see the trailer for the landscaping around it.

Not to be forgotten, the guest ranch/resorts that gave Wickenburg its reputation as "dude ranch capital of the world" so many years ago are still hale and hearty, contemplating future growth and expanded success. They've all encountered growing pains before, probably will again, but as an integral part of the proud community, they keep moving ahead with the town.

It takes a lot of hard work and a lifetime of practical dreams, but that's what got Wickenburg started in 1863, and what will keep it growing long after 1969!



KIDS THRIVE in the healthy outdoor atmosphere of Wickenburg, Ariz., with its refreshingly clean air, good weather, community spirit and unlimited choice of vigorous activities and outlets.

The Mardi Gras Is Under Way

Mardi Gras in New Orleans is much more than just a day of merriment for the city's populace and visitors; it is an entire social season with activities equivalent to the most elaborate affairs in any of the world's largest, most cosmopolitan cities.

Carnival began with the annual Harlequins Ball right after Christmas, and the season officially got under way on Twelfth Night, Jan 6. From that time through Mardi Gras night, which in 1969 will be Feb. 18, more than 75 tableau balls and three dozen parades were scheduled in the Crescent City.

During the 28 to 63 days of the carnival season (the date of Mardi Gras varies according to Easter), New Orleans is annually a city that forgets care. Carnival is a time of rededication for Orleanians to the beauty and romance traditions of their city.

AMONG FAMOUS guests who have enjoyed Mardi Gras in New Orleans are the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, for whom the Rex parade was organized in 1872, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who delighted onlookers by bowing to the mock royalty; Mrs. Harry Truman and her daughter, Margaret, and Lynda Bird Johnson.

In no other American city are the past and the present so nearly one as in New Orleans, the Creole city of French noblemen and Spanish grandees, of Andrew Jackson and Jean Lafitte, of the Bals de Roi and the Quadroon balls, and the dueling that reached its peak there.

Before the 1969 course is fully run the glorious meeting of Rex and Comus occurs on Mardi Gras night, a floodtide of balls and street parades will have engrossed the city. The clubs which organize the parades and balls are called "krewes," and most of them are made up of only men. However, women have recently formed their own krewes.

THE OLDEST krewes are still the most highly esteemed, and membership in them is so exclusive that the sons of members have not always been assured of admittance.

The krewes are characterized by secrecy, and the only king whose name is ever known to the public is that of Rex, king of carnival.

The kings are figureheads, and the real power of the krewes is invested in captains, who bear total responsibility for the success of the parades or balls. Their word is law, their names known only to the inner circles of krewe members.

THE CAPTAIN of Comus, oldest and most prestigious of all the krewes, is one of the most powerful men in New Orleans. His suggestions for king, queen and court, for invited guests and for call-outs to the dance are strictly followed.

The Mistick Krewe of Comus was originated in 1857 to bring some order to the chaotic festivities. Comus was well established by the 1870s when the other older krewes were born.

The imaginative parades during the last week or so of Mardi Gras are for the entertainment of all New Orleans. But the tableau balls are for only the haut monde-krewe members and guests.

GUEST INVITATIONS are not for dancing, only for watching. The dancing is ruled by a stricter tradition. The only men who may dance (the reverse is true for feminine krewes) are members who are costumed and masked. A few unmasked members and invited male guests, both in evening clothes so members may keep the secrecy of their membership, act as floor committeemen to summon the call-outs.

THE BELLES of the balls are the queens who preside and the maids who make up their courts. Most of the krewes choose from the debutantes of the carnival run concurrently. Because of the number of balls and queen's suppers, all in the space of about six weeks, a girl would rather be presented in New Orleans than anywhere else in the world.

During the season, the girls wear extravagant gowns, are showered with gifts, are feted luxuriously, are courted arduously, and forever remember the magic of the wonderful year when they were introduced to New Orleans society.

No girl becomes a queen or maid on her personal charm. The krewe captains select girls whose fathers have long and actively participated in their organizations.

UNQUESTIONABLY, the two most desirable crowns are those of Comus and Rex.

The queen of Rex is queen of carnival, but she must share her throne with a public king, while the queen of Comus rules beside an anonymous king. Rex's subjects are more numerous, but Comus' realm is more exclusive.

King's Cakes are the traditional refreshment items for social events during carnival season, and bakeries turn out tens of thousands of the cakes, oval, bread-like circlets decorated with the official carnival colors (purple for sincerity, gold for loyalty and green for love), and containing a bean for selection of a queen.

Long before the general public was participating in Mardi Gras activities, teen-age queens and kings were reigning only at neighborhood "King's Cake parties."

CHILDREN IN socially prominent families are groomed for carnival almost from birth.

This year's debutantes were first presented in December, and from then on, the pace has increased, and the ballrooms of the Municipal Auditorium, hotels and the new Rivergate Convention Center have been filled with dancers, maskers, spectators and the sounds of merriment, madness and music.

Spokesman From An Ancient Order

By DON KEOWN

WISDOM OF THE MYSTIC MASTERS by Joseph J. Weed; Parker, 208 pages, $5.95.

FACES PEOPLE WEAR by Charles di Salvo with Claire Cox Hawthorn, 222 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Book-sellers report a surge of interest among their customers in books on metaphysics., mysticism, the supernatural, exotic religions and philosophies, etc.

It is, apparently, all part of the current revulsion to the excessive materialism of our society.

The young people have found their own ways of expressing that revolt. But many of the older generations are crying "enough" too, and are seeking new alternatives. The great enthusiasm for eastern religions, or for mystics such as the late Edgar Cayce, are facets of this.

But one movement that is far from new, yet still claiming its adherents, is the Rosicrucian Order or AMORC (Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucia) which written records trace back to the 12th Century and which claims to go much further into ancient Egypt and its mystery schools.

Joseph J. Weed, capitalist and member of the order since 1932, currently its grand councilor for the North Atlantic states, has become one of the leading Rosicrucian spokesmen through his lectures and his books.

His newest book is "Wisdom of the Mystic Masters."

Weed expounds the basic Rosicrucian teachings including the fundamental tenet that all manifestations come from energy. He applies Rosicrucian principles to such subjects as healing, thought control, telepathy, psychic projection, and he discusses such precepts as karma, reincarnation, the law of cycles, prayer.

Not all Rosicrucians would accept everything that Weed enunciates, but he explains that it is a vital part of the movement's program that each member appraise and evaluate such teachings for himself.

The important thing, he says, is that AMORC and the body of beliefs that it has built up through the centuries can be used to score a breakthrough against the wall of self-deception and illusion that materialistic man has built around himself.

As with so many of these books, the jacket makes some extravagant and rather nonsensical claims as to the "awesome secrets" to be found inside the book. Weed, too, sometimes gets carried away.

But for those searching for another dimension in their lives, "Wisdom of the Mystic Masters," while it is unlikely to fulfill all its promises, may point out a direction. Once interested, the reader can go on to other Rosicrucian writing less popularized and less sensationalized. Like most things that have survived for ages, the Rosicrucian movement must have accumulated some real and great values and insights from the many famous and wise men who have been associated with it through the centuries.

"FACES PEOPLE Wear" by Charles di Salvo with help from Claire Cox is standard psychotherapy stuff, this time by an author who is also a minister and pastoral counselor.

The social unrest of today, Di Salvo argues, is an accumulation of a highly personalized problem within so many of us, an uncertainty as to our true identity and proper role in society.

He applies his theory to such specific problems as alcoholism, the generation gap, the aged, widowhood, delinquency, immaturity, homosexuality.

A pause to take stock of ourselves is often the first step toward the remedy or alleviation of any of these conditions, the minister-psychotherapist advises.

And he concludes his book: "Now may be the time for you to ask yourself seriously, 'Who am I? Am I aware of the real me behind the reflection I see in the mirror every morning? How much attention do I give to the inner person? In what ways do I express my identity? Do I cope with it or allow it to create problems and crises for me and those around me?"

Professional help may be needed to provide the answers, he says, but once reached, the solutions should point you toward a greater understanding and tolerance of yourself and others, and toward a more constructive life.

Di Salvo's book seems to lose some of its impact because it strays from his central point and wanders over the entire psychotherapy field generally.

MENLO PARK'S Lane Magazine and Book Co. has published new expanded editions of two of its softcover books popular with vacationers — "Sunset Western Campsite Directory" and "California National Parks" ($1.95 each).

The former, which has sold 306,000 copies in eight earlier versions, has been updated to include the latest information on 5,000 public and private campgrounds in the western U.S. and Canada.

The latter now contains data on the new Redwood National Park, as well as revised information on the established national parks, monuments and Point Reyes National Seashore.

Both books are profusely illustrated

THE ERUDITE Lord Acton, when he died in 1902, left behind a vast amount of writing in periodicals, but no single assemblage of his thinking. His executors hastened to correct that situation by collecting his scattered papers into four sizable volumes. And still they had by no means exhausted his writing.

Thus a fifth volume, "Essays on Church and State."

In paperback format ($2.95) from Apollo Editions, these are pieces written more than a century ago by Acton as a young Catholic scholar, stung by the slights of Protestant England and eager to prove the worth of the intellectualism of his church. The papers have been reprinted exactly as written, except for correction of typographical errors, and find the great mind that did, indeed, succeed eventually in overcoming the resistance to his religious background commenting upon a wide range of theological-secular relationships of his time. Most interesting to present-day American readers will be his piece on "The Political Causes of the American Revolution" and another on "The Political System of the Popes."

"RENOIR" IS the newest addition to McGraw-Hill's imaginative "Color Slide Program of the Great Masters" series. Inside the cover, along with 20 color slides of the greatest works of Pierre Auguste Renoir, the purchaser also gets a brief biography of the French master, further reproductions of his work, and an illuminating and stimulating discussion of his work by Middlebury College's art historian, Robert F. Reiff. It's a tremendous treat for the art buff and particularly the Renoir fan.

THE LITERARY Guild has chosen "Providence Island," romantic adventure novel by Calder Willingham, as its March selection.

The Men Who Published In Defiance Of Gestapo

THE BATTLE OF SILENCE by Vercors; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 286 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

To a Frenchman, "The Silence of the Sea" stands as a symbol of the historic Resistance movement of World War II. Since its publication in the early 1940s, more than a million copies of it have been sold. Its author was known only then as Vercors (Jean Bruller, the pre-war artist and engraver), who is now something of a literary giant.

Now 25 years later Vercors has set down for history details of the famed clandestine publishing house, "Editions de Minuit" (the Midnight Press), and of its first book, "The Silence of the Sea."

The small print of the book will probably scare away the meek. However, it is a profound account of France's courage during the bleak days of World War II.

Until the birth of the Midnight Press, the French spiritual Resistance had only one weapon — silence. From its inception, the underground publishing firm was a tool of defiance. Its founders, if ever identified, faced Nazi imprisonment, torture and execution. Vercors details how the press was able to print and distribute forbidden books —at the rate of one or more volumes a month — right under the nose of the Gestapo. And what is more amazing, a member of the group was never discovered.

From pre-war France to the struggles of the war and finally to the liberation of Paris, Vercors' account is spellbinding.

But more important, the account is the story of the continuing struggle for expression of freedom of thought and expression.

TAKE A PAIR OF PRIVATE EYES by J. T. McIntosh; Doubleday, 191 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Novels mixing crime and humor can be awful duds. But when the funny stuff comes off well, as it does here, then you have yourself an evening of delicious entertainment.

J. T. McIntosh introduces you to Ambrose and Dominique Frayne, a swinging young mod couple in London who specialize in the recovery of stolen property, and therefore find themselves frequently involved in contests of wit with the city's underworld.

McIntosh keeps his story, based on a television play by Peter O'Donnell, moving at a rapid pace, as he provides a continuous stream of ribtickling dilemmas from which the quickwitted Ambrose and his French-born bride must extricate themselves.

One finishes the book hopeful that Ambrose and Dominique will become regulars on Doubleday's Crime Club label.

Banking With Romance

WELLS FARGO by Noel M. Loomis; Clarkson N. Potter, 326 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The history of a company can often be a dull affair — but not when it is such a company as Wells Fargo, certainly the most romanticized banking house in the United States.

Noel M. Loomis, assistant professor of English at San Diego State College, tells the story in some detail of both Wells Fargo's stagecoach operations and its banking, following them through the intricate splits, mergers and associations that have produced a host of arguments over just what Wells Fargo operated and what it didn't.

He has drawn heavily on Wells Fargo's own history room for information. Three hundred illustrations —ranging from drawings of Indian attacks to portraits of the bank's present executives — adorn the pages.

The book is attractive. It is well researched. But better writers than Noel M. Loomis have told the story of Wells Fargo long before this.

Although this volume bears no visible evidence of being a "house job," Loomis virtually fawns over everything done by Henry Wells and David G. Fargo and the men who succeeded them. With such a good story to tell, this isn't necessary.

The White Man's Closed Shop

THE LAND OF AFTERNOON by Lewis Sowden; McGraw-Hill, 256 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

"South Africa . . . where humanism is weakness, justice is adjusted . . . and civilization is a white man's closed shop." This is South African journalist Lewis Sowden's appraisal of his homeland.

British-born Sowden describes the tightening of the black man's suppression, apartheid, from the comparatively easy-going paternalism of 50 years ago to the ruthless racism of today.

Most of the blame for apartheid is pinned on the Boers, the Dutch-descended farmers who settled in South Africa more than a century ago.

"Apartheid is the Boer's wild desire to unscramble the egg," Sowden writes.

The Boers hope to lead their nation back to the halcyon days of the "Land of Afternoon" by getting blacks and coloureds out of their sight. Any means will do. This "apart-hood" has largely succeeded because the million British people there have been mostly apathetic.

Sowden maintains that "the dominant aspect of South African politics is British acquiescence to Boer intransigence."

The book traces the rise of apartheid from the time of the political demise of gifted statesman Jan Smuts, a reasonable Boer, in 1947.

Daniel Malan and Afrikaners of the Nationalist Party feared an eventual takeover by blacks, immigrants and non-Boers in general. Beginning in the late 1940s they began to legislate the following repressive laws that comprise apartheid:

The Population Register required coloureds to carry identity cards attesting to their status in limbo;

The Group Areas Act "cleansed" white towns of all non-white enclaves. Today in South Africa it is the blacks who are the suburban dwellers and commuters;

The Separate Amenities Act of 1953 (note the sugar-coated labels) excluded non-whites from public premises and transportation;

The Bantu Education Act placed the education (or lack of it) in the hands of the federal government to thwart local white sympathizers; and

The industrial Conciliation Act of 1956 reserved skilled jobs for whites only.

These repressive measures resulted in non-violent opposition by some blacks and a few liberal whites. Mass arrests were made in 1956 by the government on grounds of treason.

Soon violence erupted. Five thousand blacks demonstrating against the harsh Pass Laws that severely restricted their movements became unruly. A handful of frightened untrained policemen opened fire with Sten guns and slew 68 blacks, wounding 178 more. This was the Sharpeville Massacre.

Nothing as overtly brutal takes place again, but Sowden writes of the Union of South Africa now as really five nations: Boer, British, Black, Coloured and Indian. Each group is separated by social, legal, and physical barriers.

The author's sympathies for the blacks and coloureds led to government repression of his play "Kimberly Train," then the withholding of his passport for five years. Sowden left South Africa several years ago to reside in Jerusalem.

"Land of Afternoon" gives an interesting account of the author's childhood days and ways of life before the rise of apartheid. But he never really has control of his material; there is much that is discursive and too little about the 1950s, the time of apartheid.

Sowden, the journalist, did not get enough help from Sowden, the editor.

Man — What Can He Eat, And Why Is He So Limited?

FOOD, FACTS, FOIBLES AND FABLES by Dr. A. T. W. Simeons; Funk and Wagnalls, 150 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Dr. Simeons, a physician, traces the evolution of our feeding habits in this small book subtitled "The Origins of Human Nutrition," beginning with our far distant herbivorous ancestors through the carnivorous eaters that followed to the omnivorous feeders of today.

Man, he says, has developed the ability to digest anything.

Along the way, the doctor has some interesting observations on specific topics such as the obesity problem:

"It has rightly been pointed out that obesity would be a less serious problem if a man would revert to eating frequent snacks instead of a few heavy meals . . ."

And: "There are two other factors responsible in some measure for the source of obesity. . . . The first is the rapid increase in the consumption of cooked — particularly boiled — food as against raw food. The human intestine digests and assimilates cooked and refined food . . . far more rapidly than their raw and natural equivalents. The result is that shortly after a meal our system is quickly flooded with more nutriment than it can make use of at the time. The surplus goes into abnormal fat deposits. . . .

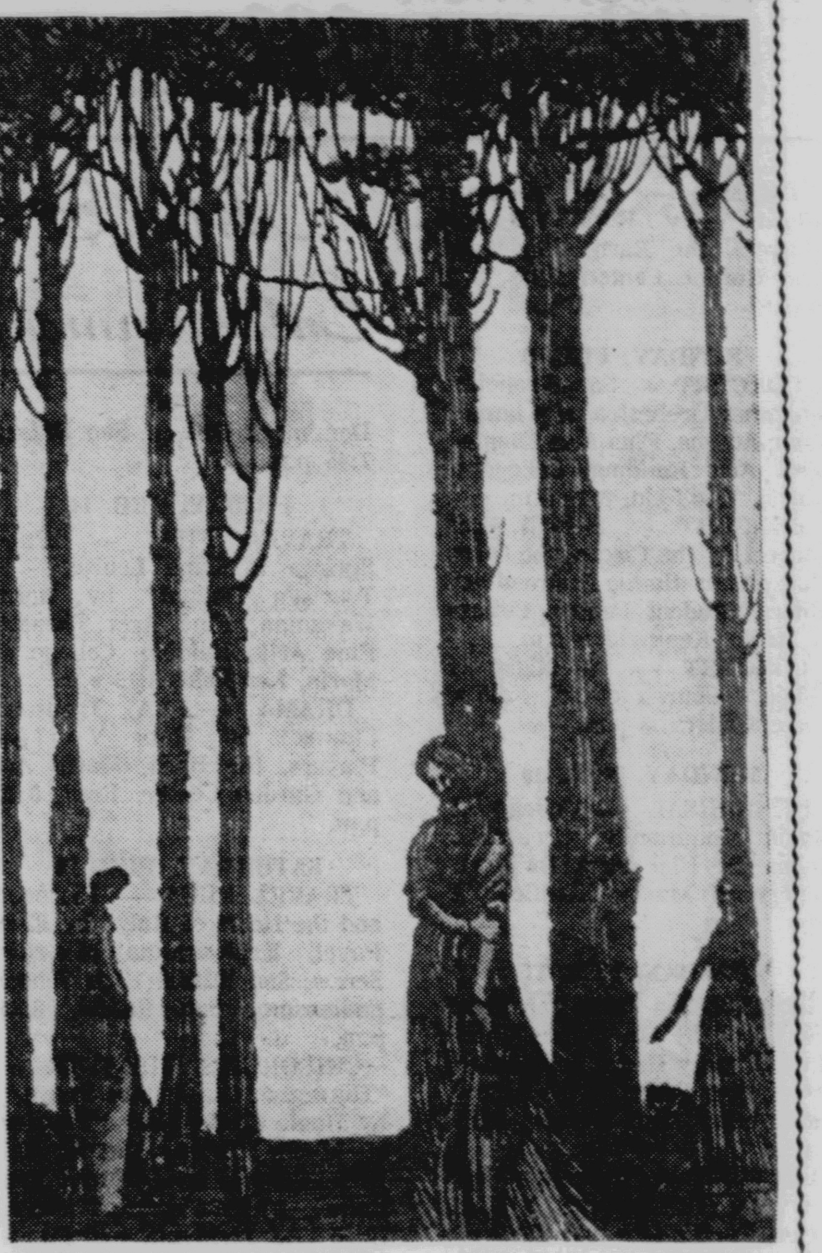
"The second factor . . . is a generic one. From Neolithic times to our day there has been a sexual selection favoring an inherited tendency toward overweight. In the marriage market a plump girl has almost universally had a better chance than a skinny one. . . ."

Dr. Simeons also has some pointed remarks on other subjects. For instance on digestion: the stomach, he says, operates in a fashion similar to the automatic washing machine.

"In most cases, saying that it can digest some things and not others is like contending that an automatic laundry machine will wash perfectly bedsheets, tablecloths and shirts, but not socks. The nature of the food eaten cannot influence the process of digestion to anything like the extent to which the brain's fears, fads and fancies can. Banal indigestion is rarely caused by what is eaten, but rather by the eater's emotional attitude to what he has eaten or the emotional tension under which he ate."

Wrong thinking is more often the cause of our complaints than wrong feeding, he contends.

The doctor's observations are often opinionated and challenging, making for an interesting book that is off the beaten track in the field of nutrition. It is good history of how man became the feeder that he is today. Whether it is sound commentary upon those habits will be a point of controversy, with even the nutritionists split.



TEN PAINTINGS by Bill Greer, reproduced in color, are included as illustrations for "Judge Tenderly of Me," a collection of Emily Dickenson poems selected by the late Winfield Townley Scott and published by Hallmark Editions.

Setting The Record Straight About A Figure Of Folklore

DEAR OLD KIT by Harvey Lewis Carter; University of Oklahoma Press, 238 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Kit Carson is in somewhat the same position as Davy Crockett and Dan'l Boone: He is as much a figure of folklore as of history, and it is hard to separate fact from fiction.

Harvey Lewis Carter, professor of American history at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, assays to do the job. He does it quite thoroughly in "Dear Old Kit."

The book consists of three parts: Carter's foreword, which points out the fallacies that have crept into historical accounts dealing with Carson; Carson's own memoirs, with copious marginal notes, and a "reappraisal" of the famed frontiersman by Carter.

The result is a substantial contribution to western history. Christopher Carson emerges as a more human, less romanticized figure, but all in all a larger one.

However, in setting the record straight on Carson, the writer inadvertently clouds it a bit himself by leaving out known episodes of Kit's life. For instance, there is no mention of Kit's first wife, Owl Woman. When he wrote his memoirs, Kit had long since re-married, and did not refer to the squaw who was his first wife. But it is unfortunate that so scholarly a work as Carter's omits her entirely.

WHIPPLE'S CASTLE by Thomas Williams; Random House, 536 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"Whipple's Castle" might be described as another Peyton Place-type novel, but produced by a vastly superior writer.

Williams concentrates upon a single community — the New Hampshire town of Leah, about which he has written before. There is a certain soap operish tinge to the involvements and the travails of his leading characters, the Whipples, who reside there in their mansion. And the story is, of course, well supplied with sex scenes.

Yet Williams overcomes the reader's aversion with his writing skill and with the intensity of his feeling for his characters. Obviously, his relationship to the Whipples and their problems was no superficial one. And since they have such deep meaning for their creator, they come to be of real concern to the reader as well.

The novel is set in the 1940s, a time remembered well by most of us. And yet Williams succeeds in reminding us of a great deal about the period that has been forgotten, accidentally or intentionally.

Marin Blood Donors Play Vital Role In New Heart Surgery

At 8 o'clock on a recent Friday evening, Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society received an emergency order from Palo Alto Stanford Hospital for 13 pints of Group O, Rh positive blood.

The fresh blood was needed within six hours for heart transplant surgery on a 54-year-old housewife.

Irwin Blood Bank relayed the request to its Marin Blood Center where recruiters phoned 13 local donors to provide the blood. These donors included three housewives, four business men, a librarian, optician, student, airline ticket agent, machinist and an operating engineer.

THE SEVEN men and six women began arriving at the blood center at 9 p.m.

By midnight, the blood had been delivered to the headquarters blood bank in San Francisco. There it was processed in the laboratory and at 1 a.m. was rushed to Palo Alto Stanford Hospital in time for the surgery.

Although this was the first time Marin County blood donors have been called upon to play a behind-the-scenes role in transplant surgery, helping to provide blood vital to regular heart surgery has become a routine responsibility at the seven-year-old Marin Blood Center.

OPEN HEART surgery, unheard of a dozen years ago, is now being performed at a rate of 16 operations a week in seven hospitals served by Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Each operation requires an average of 16 units or pints of blood of the type matching that of the patient. The blood must be received from the donor within 48 hours before the surgery.

Depending on the procedure of the individual hospital, up to 10 of these units are drawn by the blood bank into plastic bags containing a special anti-coagulant solution (heparin) for use in priming the heart-lung machine during the operation. The remainder of the needed blood is drawn into plastic bags containing another anti-coagulant solution (ACD) and is used to provide post-operative transfusions for the patient.

In the past 10 years, the blood bank has provided more than 70,000 pints of blood for more than 5,000 patients undergoing open heart surgery in hospitals it serves.

EXCEPT IN unusual cases (such as the heart transplant described earlier) the blood used for the heart-lung machine is drawn at the headquarters blood bank in San Francisco. However, donors at the Marin Blood Center are playing an increasingly important role in filling orders for the blood used for transfusions for heart surgery patients.

The center, at 506 Fourth Street, San Rafael, is open to donors Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. On Tuesdays and Thursdays it is open to provide blood bank information and to recruit donors by telephone for the next day's needs.

When Marin donors are needed to assist in filling orders for heart surgery, the center is notified by the headquarters blood bank at least a day in advance.

RECENTLY, WHEN blood banks all over the country were experiencing a serious seasonal shortage of blood, the Marin Blood Center was able to provide four hard-to-get units of fresh Group AB, Rh negative blood for a heart patient.

AB negative blood occurs in only one person out of 167, or 0.6 per cent of the population. There are only 17 known donors with this type of blood currently listed in the Marin Blood Center's files — many others having AB Negative. Other hard-to-get negative blood types (A, B, and O Negative) are urgently sought by the center.

THE FARALLONES – MEMORIES

Close to Point Reyes,
Haven for birds,
Flying day and night,
Petrel and Auklet;
Visited by Blackbirds,
Meadow Larks,
And most all birds
That seek the land;
Haven of California,
And the giant Stellar Seal,
Hunted by Killer Whales,
Occasionally challenging,
Days on into nights;
Still resounds the echo
And the memory;
Of Pacific Storms, fog,
    and winds;
Lights of distant San Francisco;
Red beacons on the bridge;
And amongst the rocks and crags,
In sea caves,
Echo of wind and Murre,
The human baby sounds
    of such birds.
The Duck Hawk;
Upon a high precipice
Challenging all that flies;
The Farallon Cormorant
    Leaving toward the dawn,
And break of day.
    Returning with the setting sun,
Make use of all the light of day,
    Life set in motion,
Never ceasing,
    Of bird and mammal
Wind and wave.

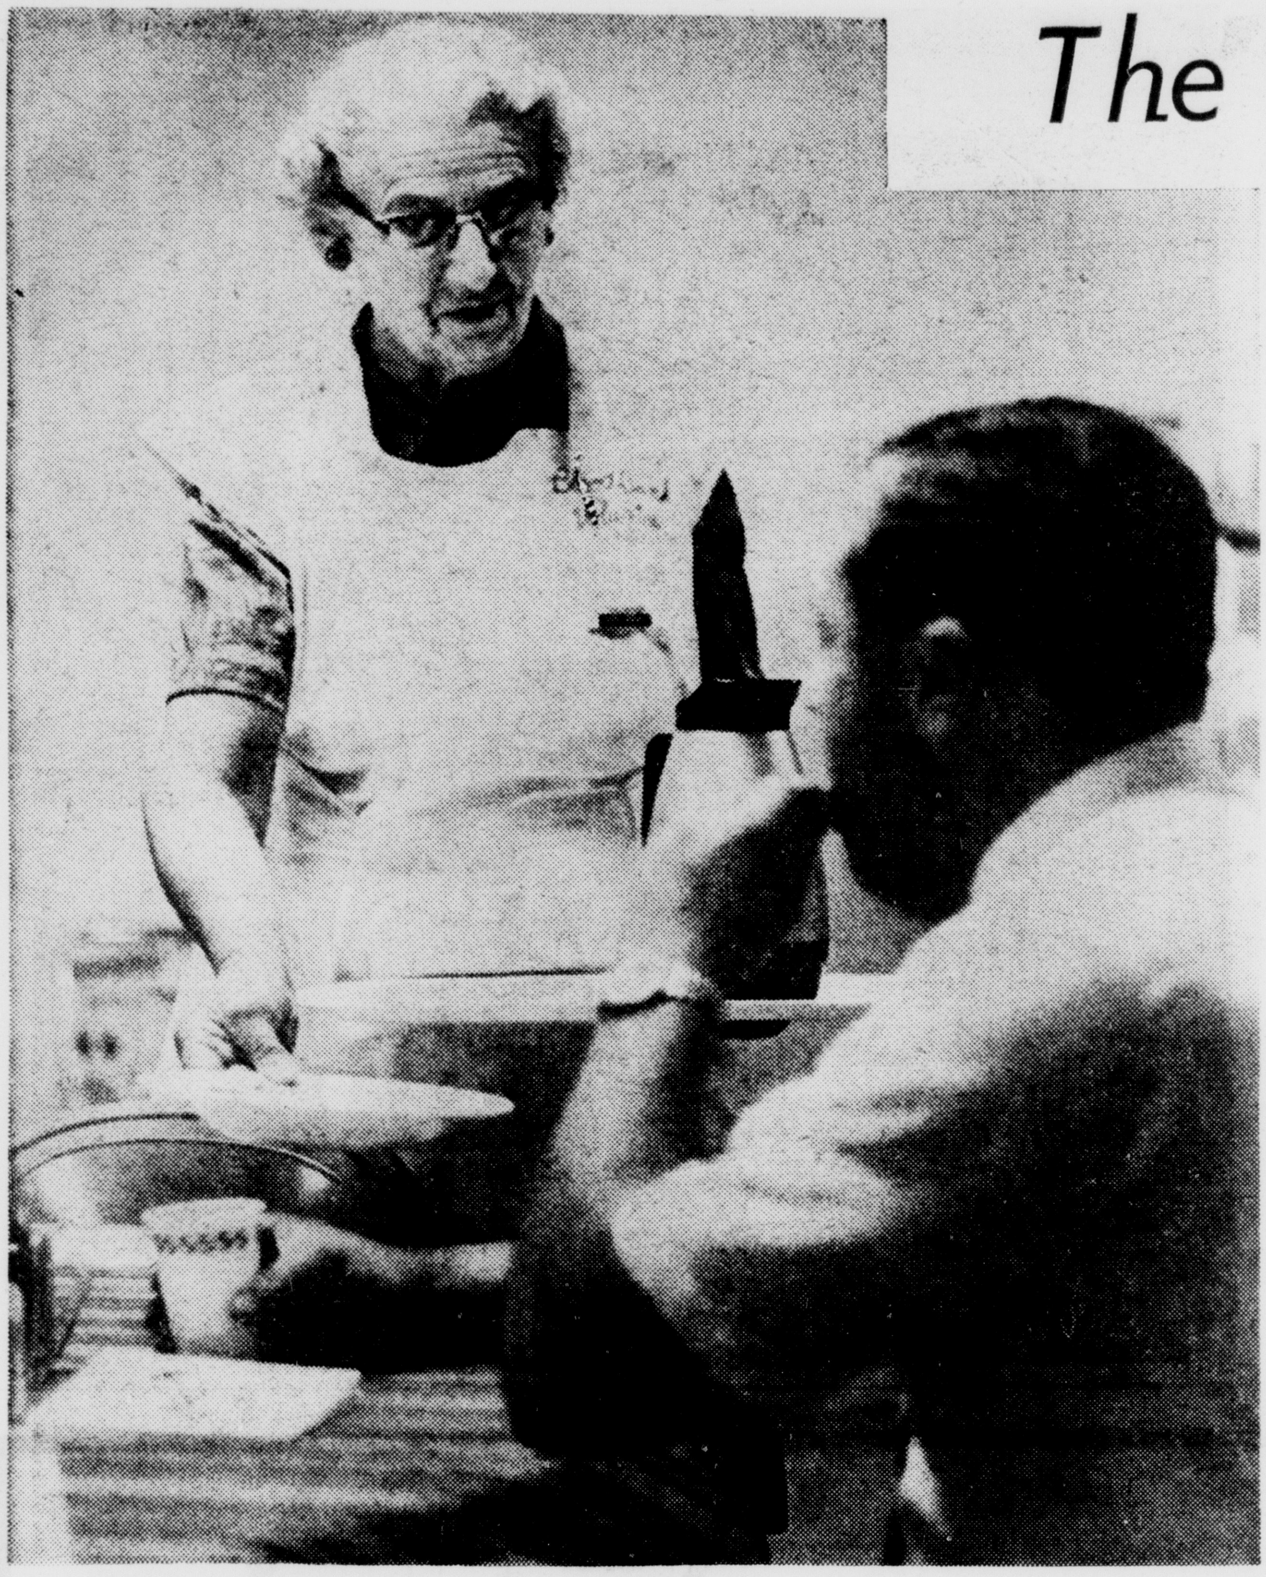
The Need For Blood



A DONOR AT the Marin Blood Center is served the customary refreshments by volunteer Mrs. Chester Monti after making his contribution to the vital program.

The Marin Blood Center began operations as an auxiliary of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society in May of 1961. It is sponsored by the Marin Medical Society and has the active support of many civic groups. Since its inception, it has collected 35,718 net units of blood.

DURING 1969, Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will need 100,000 units of blood to meet the requirements of 59 hospitals in eight counties —six of these hospitals in Marin. Although Marin County residents often receive blood as patients in San Francisco hospitals and elsewhere, as well as those in Marin, this year the blood bank will consign to Marin hospitals alone some 6,950 units of blood in the various groups and Rh types.

To keep pace with the growing local demand for blood, Marin residents, who donated 5,974 net units during 1968, will be expected to increase this total by nearly 1,000 units during 1969.

The past few years have seen a steady growth in the use of the components of whole blood for transfusion therapy.

In the past, the great majority of transfusions involved a unit of whole blood given by one donor and used by one patient. Now it is becoming more usual to fractionate a unit of blood into its component parts and to use these components to treat not just one but several patients.

THIS IS accomplished by drawing the blood into a special plastic bag with one or more satellite compartments. By spinning the bag in a centrifuge, the particular components — such as red cells or platelets — may be separated from the liquid portion of the blood and collected in the satellite compartments. The remaining liquid portion may be used to produce further components, such as fresh frozen plasma or cryoprecipitate, or be returned to the red blood cells to produce "platelet poor" blood or "leukocyte poor" blood.

The various components are used for patients with specific problems such as anemia, burns, hemorrhaging and various blood disorders.

Time is usually a vital factor in the preparation of components — most of which must be processed almost immediately, and some of which must be transfused within very few hours after the blood is received from the donor.

RECENTLY, A 34-year-old housewife receiving massive transfusions at a San Francisco hospital quickly drained supplies of the relatively uncommon Group O, Rh negative blood (one person in 15 has it).

Sixteen donors with blood of this type were recruited by the Marin Blood Center. Each unit of the blood was processed in the blood bank's laboratory to provide a unit of packed red cells needed the same day by the patient. The remaining plasma was used for other components.

Many recent cases can be cited in which patients hospitalized in Marin have created extraordinary demands for blood and blood components.

AMONG THESE patients (all hospitalized at Marin General Hospital) were a post-operative cancer patient who used 50 units of platelet concentrates in a nine-day period, a hemophiliac (bleeder) who used 48 units of cryoprecipitates in less than a month, and a victim of Hodgkins Disease who used 32 units of whole blood and platelet concentrates in a 10-day period.

Voluntary blood donors perform a dual service.

First, their gifts of blood are essential day after day in meeting both the regular and the special transfusion needs of the sick and injured. Second, every blood donation made is an investment in future protection for the donor, his family and neighbors.

When a donor gives a pint of blood, he receives a "credit" from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. At any time within a year from the date of donation, he may request the release of the credit for his own use or for any one else who may need blood. Or he may credit his blood donation to one of the many Blood Donor Club accounts maintained with the blood bank for the mutual protection of members of business, social, fraternal, church and community organizations.

Marin Blood Center is open Monday from noon to 6 p.m., Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER

"THE BEATLES" — Apple SWBO 101:

The new double-disc package of the Beatles has a completely white exterior with no artwork. Inside are loose individual color photos of the Beatles and a large collage of snapshots backed by the complete lyrics of the tunes.

This album has no over-all theme — just a rich stream of wonderful tracks that capture the ear in rapid succession as the stylus tracks through the unbanded sides of the discs. The general tenor seems to be a return to less psychedelic days; even to the 1920s or 30s in "Savoy Truffle."

While some tunes try to coat strong feelings of protest with satire — "The Continuing Story of Bungalow Bill," "Piggies" — most are good-natured and designed just for enjoyment again and again. My votes for cream-of-the-cream go to "Julia," "Blackbird," and a toe-tapping tale of gunplay in the Black Hills, "Rocky Raccoon." The humor of "Sexy Sadie" and "Back in the USSR" is great, especially the take-off on the Beach Boys in the latter.

While this album may not quite equal the superb "Sgt. Pepper," it undoubtedly will have a high position in the compleat opera Beatle — and I can't imagine even a part-time Beatles fan being without it.

"MUSIC FROM BIG PINK" — Capitol SKAO 2955:

This rock LP also is high on the charts.

The group was sort of discovered by Bob Dylan. They have a peculiar sort of country flavor, along Appalachian folk music lines. The big hit from this disc is "The Weight," and it proves an almost unforgettable tune. Three Dylan tunes are included, with "I Shall Be Released" a real beauty, on this compelling rock release.

"CHILDREN OF THE FUTURE" — The Steve Miller Band — Capitol SKAO 2920:

The first album by this dynamic young San Francisco group has much to offer. The production values, sometimes making interesting use of sound effects from the Bay such as gulls, are an important part of the album's impact on the listener.

"You've Got the Power" is a strong-hitting blues. "Baby's Calling Me Home" is a fairly "pop-sounding" tune with catchy harpsichord riff, and "Steppin' Stone" a raucous electronic rock number.

The group seems stronger in the instrumental department than the vocal.

This album is a good example of the superior San Francisco sound in rock right now.

"ALBUM 1700" — Peter, Paul and Mary — Warner Bros. WS 1700:

This is the first PP & M album I have reviewed. Not that I didn't think their work was always of the highest professional level — it just didn't really affect me until hearing two tracks in this one: "I Dig Rock and Roll Music" and "The Great Mandella." The latter is a deeply moving experience if you really listen to the lyrics.

A stronger rock beat than in former albums is present here. The three voices blend beautifully, and the arrangements are a model of good taste.

The other 10 tunes are very listenable also.

"THE MASON WILLIAMS PHONOGRAPH RECORD" — Warner Bros. WS 1729:

As anyone who saw the "toad-sucking" recitation by Mason Williams on the Smothers Brothers TV show knows, this man is a nut. A very versatile nut, too.

He sings, plays the guitar beautifully, whistles, composes music ranging from his hit "Classical Gas," to Texas blues-guitarish "Long Time Blues," and writes books, lyrics, and gags for television.

Both six and 12-string guitars are heard on some tunes, and the large studio orchestra provides a colorful setting for Williams' creations while avoiding over-arrangement.

The Dada-esque "Prince's Panties" and the haunting theme "Sunflower" are other highlights in the LP.

Williams' second record, now being released, should find many repeat purchasers.

The Daedalians Find A Home At Hamilton

Military Flying Fraternity Welcomed To Air Base

To the uninitiated, the Order of Daedalians sounds very much like a college literary society or some kind of a secret, mystical organization.

There is, however, nothing secret or mystic about the Daedalians. And the membership of that unusual fraternal organization is much more at home at one of Uncle Sam's big air bases than on one of today's college campuses.

In fact, Hamilton Air Force Base is home or headquarters to one of its proudest units.

The Order of Daedalians was organized in 1934 by a small group of World War I aviators, the men who fought the first great battles in the skies.

THEIR PURPOSES: To preserve the extraordinary esprit de corps that had existed among them, and to impress upon a sometimes reluctant nation the importance of air power as a means of defense.

They were men dedicated to the thesis that the United States, for its own protection, must maintain a military air supremacy among the world powers.

Originally, membership was restricted to those commissioned officers of the U. S. army, navy and marine corps who had qualified as military aviators prior to Nov. 11, 1918, and to their male progeny.

BUT AS THE years began to thin their ranks, the Daedalians amended their bylaws to permit successive generations of military aviators to become eligible for membership in the name of deceased founder members, or in the name of deceased pilots who could have qualified as founder members.

Today the order maintains three categories of membership: founder member, hereditary member and named member.

The relaxed rules by no means open up the membership to all those who have worn military pilot wings. The honor is bestowed only upon those who are currently serving on active duty or are officially retired from active duty with the U. S. armed forces, and then only upon personal invitation and the recommendations of at least three Daedalians in good standing.

ON RARE occasions the order will waive its requirements and bestow membership upon some one who has made an outstanding contribution to aviation. The Daedalians do not solicit applications for membership.

The name "Daedalians" is derived from Greek mythology.

According to legend, Daedalus and his son Icarus were imprisoned on the island of Crete by the powerful King Minos. Unable to escape by land or sea, Daedalus reasoned that the king could not control the realm of the birds, and that therefore, he and Icarus should fly to freedom.

After fashioning wings of bird feathers and wax, Daedalus tutored his son in the mysteries of flight, cautioning him especially not to fly too low and too near the sea lest the spray sodden his feathers, nor too close to the sun lest the sun's heat melt the wax.

BUT WHEN father and son finally made their flight, Icarus, in his exuberance, disobeyed his parent's instructions and flew higher and higher. The sun did melt the wax, the wings disintegrated and Icarus plunged into what is now known as the Icarian Sea.

Daedalus, heartbroken, flew on to Greece to live out his years pondering the tragic fate of his son.

While the story is myth, the World War I pilots nevertheless decided to honor Daedalus as

IT WAS THE last flight for World War I flying hero Clinton Jones Jr. of Marin, fourth from the right, when he gathered with fellow members of the Order of Daedalians at Travis Air Force Base after their return from attending the organization's national convention at Kelly Air Force Base in Texas. Jones died a short time later in 1965.

It's Camellia Time At Nurseries

To choose the camellia that meets your standards of beauty perfectly, you have to visit the nursery while these shrubs are in bloom.

Now is that time.

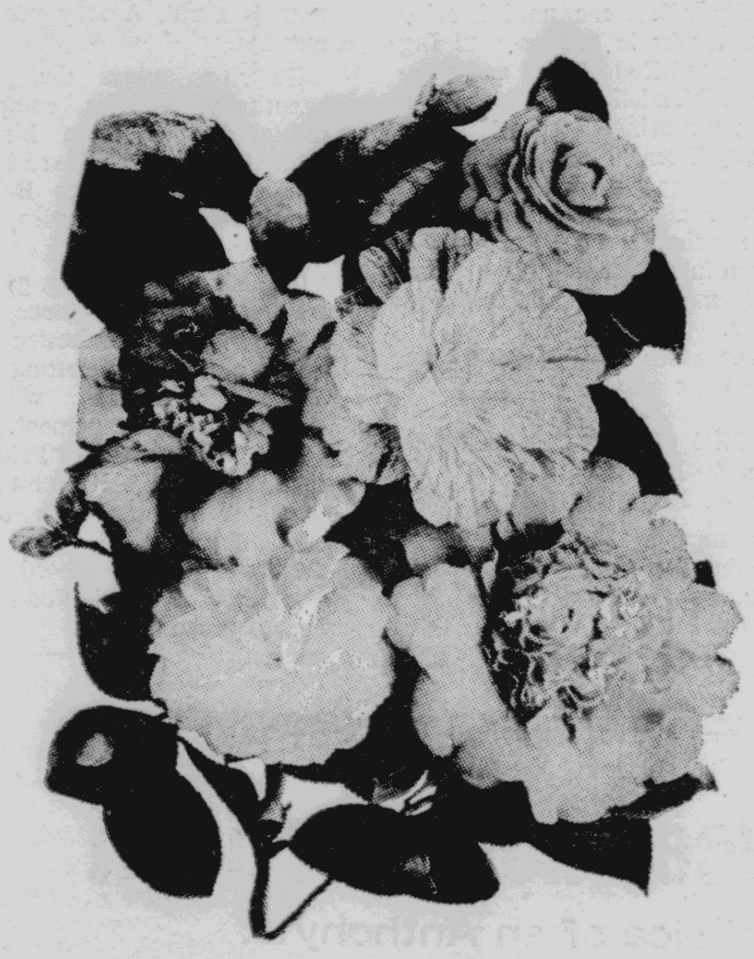
In the showyards of Marin nurseries, the Japonica camellias in particular are in full flower. But you will also find a number of the Sasanquas also still in bloom.

The third principal classification, the Reticulatas, will not bloom until a bit later.

BUT SO VARIED are the Japonicas and the Sasanquas that you should have little difficulty finding your ideal camellia.

For instance, among the Japonicas you will come upon such stunning specimens as the Covina, orange-red rose form blooms; the Daikagura, peony-shaped flowers of a bright rose-pink splotched with white, and the Kumasaka, semi-double blooms in a showy rose-pink.

Growing habits of the shrubs themselves are just as varied.



THE DAIKAGURA, an early bloomer, for instance, has a slow, pendulous growth habit that makes it especially suited to tub culture or use as a foundation plant. Covina, a mid-season flowerer, is a compact grower that is highly regarded for hedges and for borders.

The later-blooming Kumasaka grows more vigorously and taller, with foliage that is ideal for background planting.

Like the more popular Japonicas, the Sasanquas, too, are a versatile lot.

THERE ARE TWO prime requisites in selection a location for your new camellias — shade, and good drainage. A wet winter such as this one drives home the point that the camellia should not be placed where water stands.

Otherwise, the cultural requirements of the camellia are miniscule.

Research At The Nurseries

Industries of all kinds have found it pays to carry out the continuing research programs necessary for the development of new products for their consumers.

The nursery business is no exception.

It conducts research and experimentations unceasingly, aimed at producing new, more beautiful, sturdier plants for the enjoyment of the gardener.

Take the development of new varieties of roses, for example.

A modern nursery's research department may make as many as 10,000 crosses in a single year to develop new seedlings. From these crosses possibly 2,000 seedlings will develop. From these, perhaps only one-tenth of 1 per cent, or two new varieties, might show sufficient merit for commercial production.

Rose hybridizing is highly scientific today: Geneticists have to know chromosone counts and dominant genes.

The work of cross-pollination is all done by hand.

Parent plants are selected because of their special merits shown. A variety having unusual fragrance, for example, may be crossed with a variety having exceptional color — in the hope that a seedling might be produced that would have the advantages of both parents.

Occasionally a "sport" occurs in the fields that has merit, but this occurs so seldom that the nursery industry cannot depend upon it. Instead it must continue an ever increasing program of research.

The same careful attention to selection of parent plants and the cross-pollinizing to produce new seedlings goes on in a constant search for new varieties of fruits as well as shrubs and flowers.

The new variety is very carefully isolated to prevent natural cross-pollination. Budwood for the production of additional plants is taken from the original plant, and used to bud the new variety into the rootstock specifically grown for that purpose. From the original parent plant only a limited amount of budwood can be taken, so in the second year of production a new variety relatively few additional plants are available.

Again there is the taking of budwood from the second year's production to bud still more plants and by another year another small increase in the number of plants has occurred.

Before the new variety is made available for commercial purposes, it must be tested in all sections of the country. A variety that proves satisfactory in one section may be a complete failure in other areas.

This can mean several years of additional research work before a variety is ready for introduction to the gardening public.

Bulbs For A Summer Spectacular Of Bloom

Spring-blooming bulbs outnumber summer-blooming bulbs by far.

But when it comes to a contest in color, the bulbs that flower in the summer are an easy winner over their spring-blooming cousins.

The summer list includes such spectacular performers as the gladiolus, the cannas, tuberous begonias, dahlias, hybrid lilies and the fragrant tuberoses.

In Marin, right now is the time to plant a number of these bulbs for summer bloom.

EXCEPTIONS ARE the dahlias which shouldn't be set out before mid-March, and begonia tubers. The latter can be sprouted now and planted after the danger of frost has passed.

And while the agapanthas or Blue Lily of the Nile, can be grown from the bulbs, most gardeners prefer to start with the young plants that are just as cheap. Nurserymen offer them in containers.

The gladiolus and the dahlias are the most publicized of the summer-blooming bulb flowers, and as a result such showy plants as the cannas are sometines overlooked. But these can be the standouts of a summer border, if given a chance.

TROPICAL IN appearance, the cannas grow taller than most flowers. Growers can choose from a multiple of shades including pinks, white, yellow, reds, bronze and orange.

Another often overlooked summer-blooming bulb flower is the tigridia or Mexican Shell Flower, which produces tri-corner blooms, spreckled and solid, in a wide range of brilliant colors. Those blooms last only a day. But each bulb produces such a succession of blossoms through the summer that the daily dying-back is never noticed.

The tigridia, one of the bulbs that can be planted this month, should be massed closely for best effect.

WAIT UNTIL SPRING TO REPAIR FROST DAMAGE

The California Association of Nurserymen has repeated its warning to gardeners not to rush into pruning the injured parts of frost-damaged trees, shrubs and plants.

Such pruning should wait until spring after new growth has started.

If cutting back is done now on the frost-bitten plantings, the nurserymen advise, then unseasonably warm winter temperatures could cause even more extensive damage to the tender new growth.

For California as a whole, the association says, it has been a bad winter for cold weather damage.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Set out rhododendrons now for a big show later on. If you want color in the spring, seek plants already showing buds.

✓ If you want an accent tree for the garden, consider the olive with its handsome gray foliage.

✓ Flowering quinces are in bloom now in the nurseries, so that you can pick one with the color that best suits your taste.

✓ Plant grapes now while they are dormant. Also: currants, boysenberries, youngberries, raspberries and blackberries. Not all varieties are suited to our climate, so consult your nurseryman on this matter.

✓ Divide established clumps of Shasta daisy and perennial phlox.

✓ Plant new perennials from the nursery.

✓ The bareroot planting season for roses and many shrubs and trees is still with us, but won't be much longer.

✓ Dormant spraying time is also running out. Don't delay much longer.

ORDER OF DAEDALIANS

Golden Gate Flight Now Has A Home

the originator of man's quest to fly by adopting his name.

TODAY, THE Order of Daedalians numbers more than 4,000 active members in 22 chapters that have been designated as "flights."

Golden Gate Flight No. 5 was established for members residing in the San Francisco Bay Area and in nearby communities, and now has a roster of approximately 400 men, about half of whom reside in Northern California. Marin County has contributed 25 Daedalians to Flight No. 5. Many of the other members are overseas in active military service.

Until fairly recently, Flight No. 5 also represented the Order of Daedalians in most of the western states including Alaska and Hawaii. With the encouragement and support of Flight No. 5, however, new units were formed for the Los Angeles area (Flight No. 7), the San Diego area (Flight No. 13) and Alaska (Polar Flight No. 10 in Anchorage and Farthest North Flight No. 21 at Fairbanks).

SAIGON FLIGHT No. 14 is headquartered in Saigon. And movements are under way to form Cascade Flight No.22 in Seattle and Aloha Flight No. 23 in Hawaii.

It is Golden Gate Flight No. 5 that recently found a home at Hamilton Air Force Base. Until then, the unit lacked a permanent base of operations using the Presidio of San Francisco postal address as its "headquarters."

Col. Charles L. Praul of Flight No. 5, former base commander at Hamilton, was instrumental in making available to the Northern California Daedalians space in the Officers' Club at the North Marin installation. The facilities there will serve as a combination office and historical display room where will repose Flight 5's flags, trophies and a photographic history of military aviation.

IN THEIR EFFORT to assure the continuation of American preeminence in the air and space, the Daedalians encourage and counsel young men to become armed forces aviators.

The Daedalian Foundation, supported by the financial contributions from the members, annually presents awards to outstanding military commands and units to instill a competitive spirit and a striving for excellence in the flying services.

Perhaps most coveted is the Daedalian Flying Safety Trophy that goes to the command achieving the best record for flight safety each year. Other Daedalian awards are for excellence in the maintenance of aircraft and weapon systems, and for superior technical supply and personnel management systems.

AWARDS ARE made, too, to distinguished graduates of the four military academies including scholarship grants of $2,500 for advanced studies in the aeronautical and astronautical sciences.

An outstanding pilot graduate at each of the respective services' advanced flying schools is given a special achievement award.

To recognize excellence in civil aviation, the Order of Daedalians annually presents a trophy to an airline flight crew that has shown extraordinary skill, knowledge and judgment in the air under emergency flying conditions .

The organization of Golden Gate Flight No. 5, as well as the other flights, is along quasi-military lines. There is an executive staff elected annually in December. The presiding officer bears the title of flight captain and is the chief administrator, assisted by a vice captain, a flight adjutant, a flight treasurer and a flight provost marshal.

LT. COL. DON Disbrow, U. S. Air Force Retired, a veteran pilot of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, is the current flight captain. He is a Vacaville resident.

Lt. Col. William Gatchet of Hamilton Base is the vice captain, Col. Robin C. Cannon of Novato the flight adjutant, Lt. Col. Samuel S. Richards of Oakland the flight treasurer and Col. Charles O. Garrels of Brentwood the flight provost marshal.

Col. Charles T. Stoffer of Greenbrae, a pioneer flyer of renown, is the flight historian.

Six standing committees are appointed for specific functions, and their chairmen along with

"Who Stained The Neck Of My Dress?"

At least once a year I answer this complaint which is asked much more frequently. Usually, the "stain" is noticed when a garment if first removed from storage. The "stain" wasn't there when the dress was put away, but now it is.

The "stain" is actually a color removal caused by a cold wave solution. Somehow in a beauty shop or at home, a hair set lotion has come in contact with the garment. The oxidizing agent in the lotion works very slowly, often taking three or four months in storage. Sometimes the color loss isn't noticed until after the garment has been drycleaned. Once the color has been removed, it cannot be restored. Take care, we repeat, to wear a "don't care" garment when having your hair set or doing it yourself.

Closing The Pores That Are In The Wood

The term "wood filler" is often misinterpreted.

Many persons associate it with such terms as plastic wood, water putty and similar materials intended to plug cracks, holes or other gaps in finished or unfinished pieces of wood.

When, however, you are told to use a wood filler as the first step in finishing wood, the words recover their true meaning — a product designed to close the pores of certain kinds of wood.

NATURALLY, THESE woods are those which have large open pores, such as oak, mahogany, walnut, chestnut, elm, butternut, hickory, ash, rosewood and satinwood. They require a wood filler because most persons prefer them to have smooth surfaces, although some see them as more beautiful when the pores are left as they are.

Most wood fillers come in semi-paste form. It is important to read the label on the container to determine the type of thinner to be used.

The filler is brushed on the wood, first with the grain, then against the grain. It quickly takes on a dull appearance, which is the signal to begin rubbing the covered area, a process known professionally as "flattening."

THE RUBBING should be done with a piece of clean burlap in a modified circular motion. The movement with the grain forces the filler into the pores of the wood.

When the rubbing is completed, the excess should be wiped off very lightly with a clean, lintless cloth in the direction of the grain. If this wipe-off is neglected, the surface of the wood will become tacky. On the other hand, if it is done with too much pressure, some of the filler may be lifted from the pores.

Although there are various views on how long the filler should be permitted to set before going ahead with the finishing operation, we have found that it is best to wait two or three days.

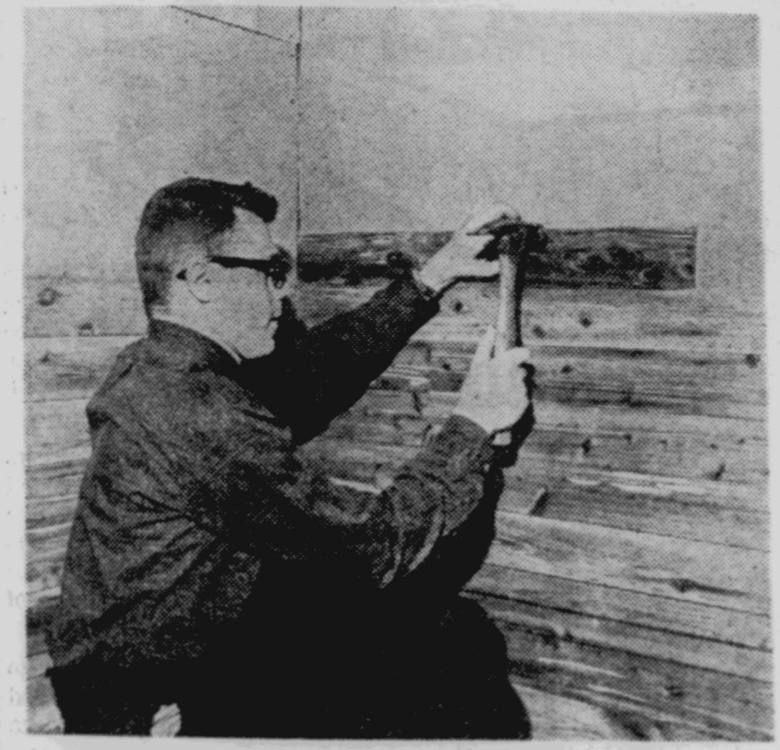
THE SURFACE should then be sanded very lightly, wiping off all sanding dust. A coat of sealer is then applied. It can be a light coat of shellac or almost any other sealer, with one exception; if the final coat is to be lacquer, use only a sealer formulated for use under lacquer.

A beginner in the use of wood filler will often make the mistake of covering too large an area at one time. The filler may then begin to harden on one part of the work before the rubbing is started, preventing the worker from obtaining the desired smooth surface.

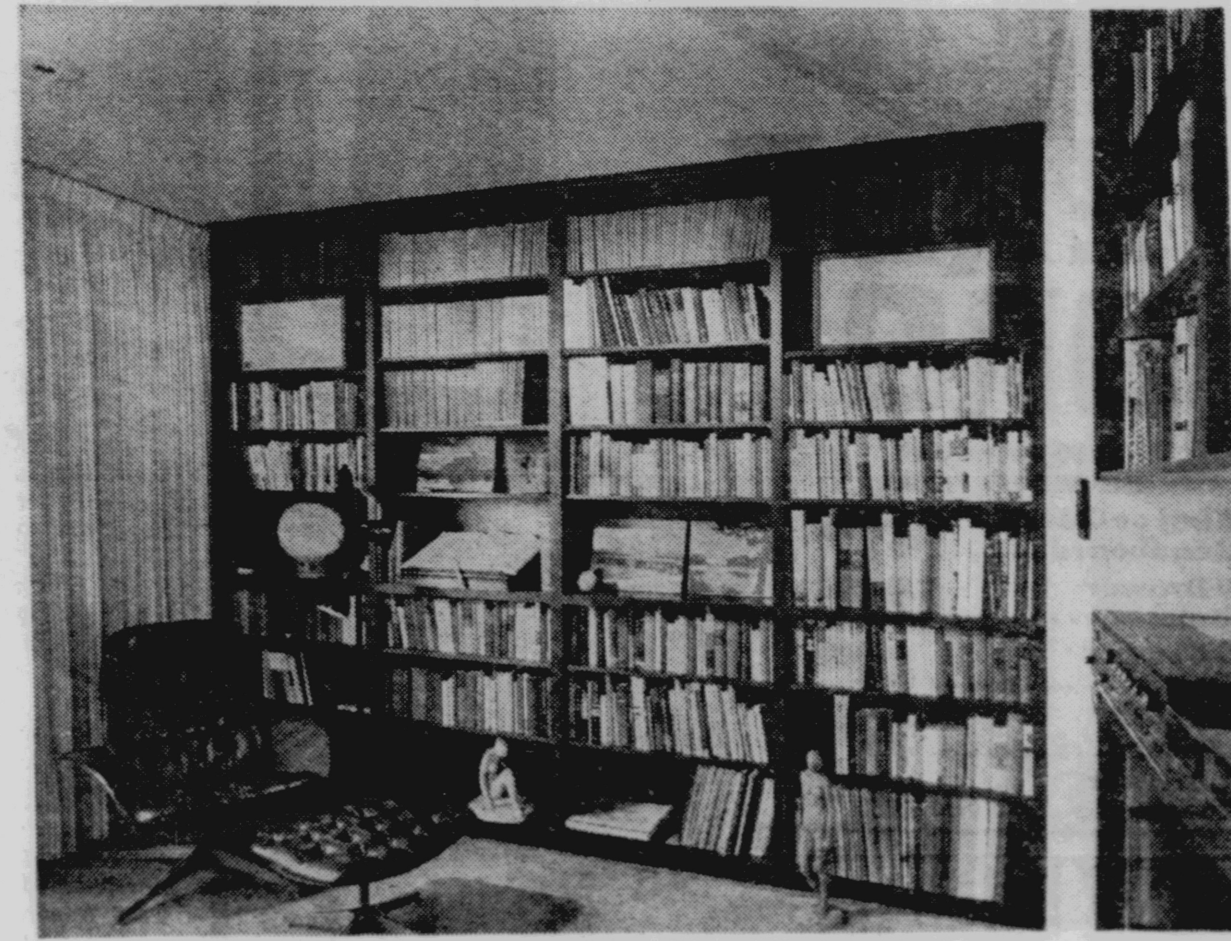
There is no reason for panic should this occur. The filler can be quickly resoftened by wiping it with a cloth soaked in the recommended thinner.

One other point the novice should know before tackling the job of wood filling: If, after applying the filler and completing the rubbing, he discovers, on close examination, that some of the pores do not appear to be filled, he should repeat the entire operation before putting on the sealer.

AN INDOOR PROJECT FOR THE WEEKEND



CONSIDERING the kind of weather we have experienced this winter, it would not be surprising if you have just about run out of weekend projects for inside the home. Consider, however, if you have not already done so, the possibility of lining an existing closet or some unused space such as an attic corner with aromatic red cedar to provide a moth-proof storage area for out-of-season clothing. It is not a difficult job, for cedar boards can be nailed directly over open framework. The lining comes in easy-to-handle pieces, each tongue-and-grooved along the edges and ends to simplify fitting. To line a closet, nail the pieces horizontally and beginning at the bottom and in a corner. Joints need not coincide with studs. But the lining should be nailed to the studs, so it is advisable that all studs be marked before starting. Remember to remove all hardware from the wall, ceiling and inside of the door before starting to apply the cedar. The first piece is placed with the grooved edge down and the grooved end in the corner. This leaves the tongue end and edge on the outside. Use 4d finishing nails and drive them through the face of each piece into the studs. Nails should be approximately three-quarters of an inch down from the top edge of the strip, with a second nail driven into each stud about three quarters of an inch from the floor. The second and all additional rows of lining are installed in the same manner except that only one nail is needed at each 16-inch interval. Be sure to tap each piece lightly down on top of the piece below so that the tongue and groove edges fit perfectly. When cutting end pieces, it is not necessary to be precise if quarter-round molding is to be used. Line the ceiling, floor and inside of the door as well as the wall to be assured of protection against moths. No finish of any kind should be applied, since this only seals in the aroma and minimizes the effectiveness of the wood. The only maintenance required is an occasional dusting.



DOUGLAS FIR one-by-12-inch boards have been used at one end of a large living room to convert two wasted walls into a useful and attractive library corner. Base cabinets at far right house music equipment and store tapes and stereo albums. Built-ins are painted black to accent a scheme of subtle neutrals.

A Library In The Living Room

Nothing decorates or warms a room as quickly as a few shelves of books — and that's one reason why many inveterate readers prefer locating their library in the living room.

Of course, readers don't consider books a part of the decor; they're simply a part of living, and a necessary ingredient to the livability of any area.

Starting from scratch in a new home, the business of designing and building the living room bookcases involves considerable market research, discussion, measuring and head-scratching. Should shelving team with the fireplace to form a single focal point, or stand elsewhere?

A GOOD IDEA that works even in a smallish space is to wrap the bookcases around one end of the room. With the addition of lounge chairs and reading lamps, the library corner then creates a room within a room.

This is cozy space that works by itself, but it also warms the formal area of the living room. Carefully chosen fabrics and colors for the lounge chairs will make even man-size models entirely compatible with the rest of the living room's furnishings.

For the bookcases themselves, few guidelines are needed. Always the best use of space is to build them wall-to-wall and floor-to-ceiling. If a heat outlet or cold air return is present, simply enclose it in the toe base.

ALL SHELVING, of course, should be adjustable. Generally the shelves themselves need be only the standard one-by-12 inch boards; they will handle everything from big art books to the unabridged dictionary. Actual dimensions of a one-by-12 are three-quarters by 11½ inches.

Good lumber species to use include Douglas fir, western hemlock, ponderosa pine and western larch. Clear, vertical grain boards offer greatest strength and best appearance.

Simplicity is the key to design. When solid lumber is used, no additional shelf edging is needed. However, the structural uprights separating sections of shelving can be edged with a flat one-by-two for accent.

Finishing is purely a matter of taste. In a room furnished with subtle, no-color neutrals, the accent of black paint can be both appropriate and dramatic. Otherwise, a touch of stain topped with several coats of tough, stain-finish plastic varnish is apt to be the most practical and pleasing.

the executive staff make up the flight's board of directors.

Golden Gate Flight 5's roster is replete with illustrious names from military and civilian aviation history.

INCLUDED ARE Col. John A. MacCready, the first pilot to fly non-stop across the American continent in 1922 and a pioneer in high altitude flight; Gen. Otto P. Weyland, a distinguished Air Force commander, and Maj. Gen. Carroll W. McColpin of American Eagle Squadron fame.

Of special interest to Marinites is the name of the late Clinton Jones, a Marin County native who was a leading flying ace of World War I.

Captain Jones, born and reared in Ross, was credited with downing eight enemy aircraft plus three unconfirmed victories in aerial combat over France in 1918. Serving with the 22nd Aero Squadron, American Expeditionary Force, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross for gallantry in action.

RECENTLY THE World War I hero's son, Clinton Jones III, presented a 1918 photographic portrait of his father to Golden Gate Flight 5. It will be permanently displayed at the new headquarters at Hamilton Base.

The Daedalians generally are a hardy lot, and the founding members, 70-odd years and older, looking back on military careers that reach back half a century and more, hold their own with their younger compatriots.

"They know how to enjoy themselves," says Colonel Disbrow, "and it takes a major catastrophe to keep them away from our meetings and activities."

HE POINTS to Col. Edward V. Pettis of San Jose, a youthful 81 who not only promises that he will still be around at 90, but will still be attending the national conventions of the Daedalians as well.

"Ed means it," adds the Flight 5 captain, "and no one of us doubt him. I'll bet he keeps his word."

The Daedalian founder members do not dwell in the past. Their interest is as up to date as today's space explorations and exploits. But coaxed by their younger fraternal brothers, they'll sometimes tell stories of what it was like to fly back in 1918.

ONE SUCH is Maj. Stuart E. Elliott of San Rafael. He recalls clearly the exact date — July 1, 1918 — that he was transfered from a pilots' pool to the 13th Aero Squadron of the Second Pursuit Group, a newly organized squadron commanded by Lafayette Escardrille veteran Capt. Charles J. Biddle, for active duty.

"We were equipped with 21 of the latest model Spad XIIIs," he relates. "They were powered with 220 horsepower-geared Hispano Suiza motors with a range of two hours and 20 minutes flying time. They carried two Marlin machine guns synchronized to fire through the propeller, and two 12-kilo bombs attached to a rack beneath the cockpit. Their top speed was 136

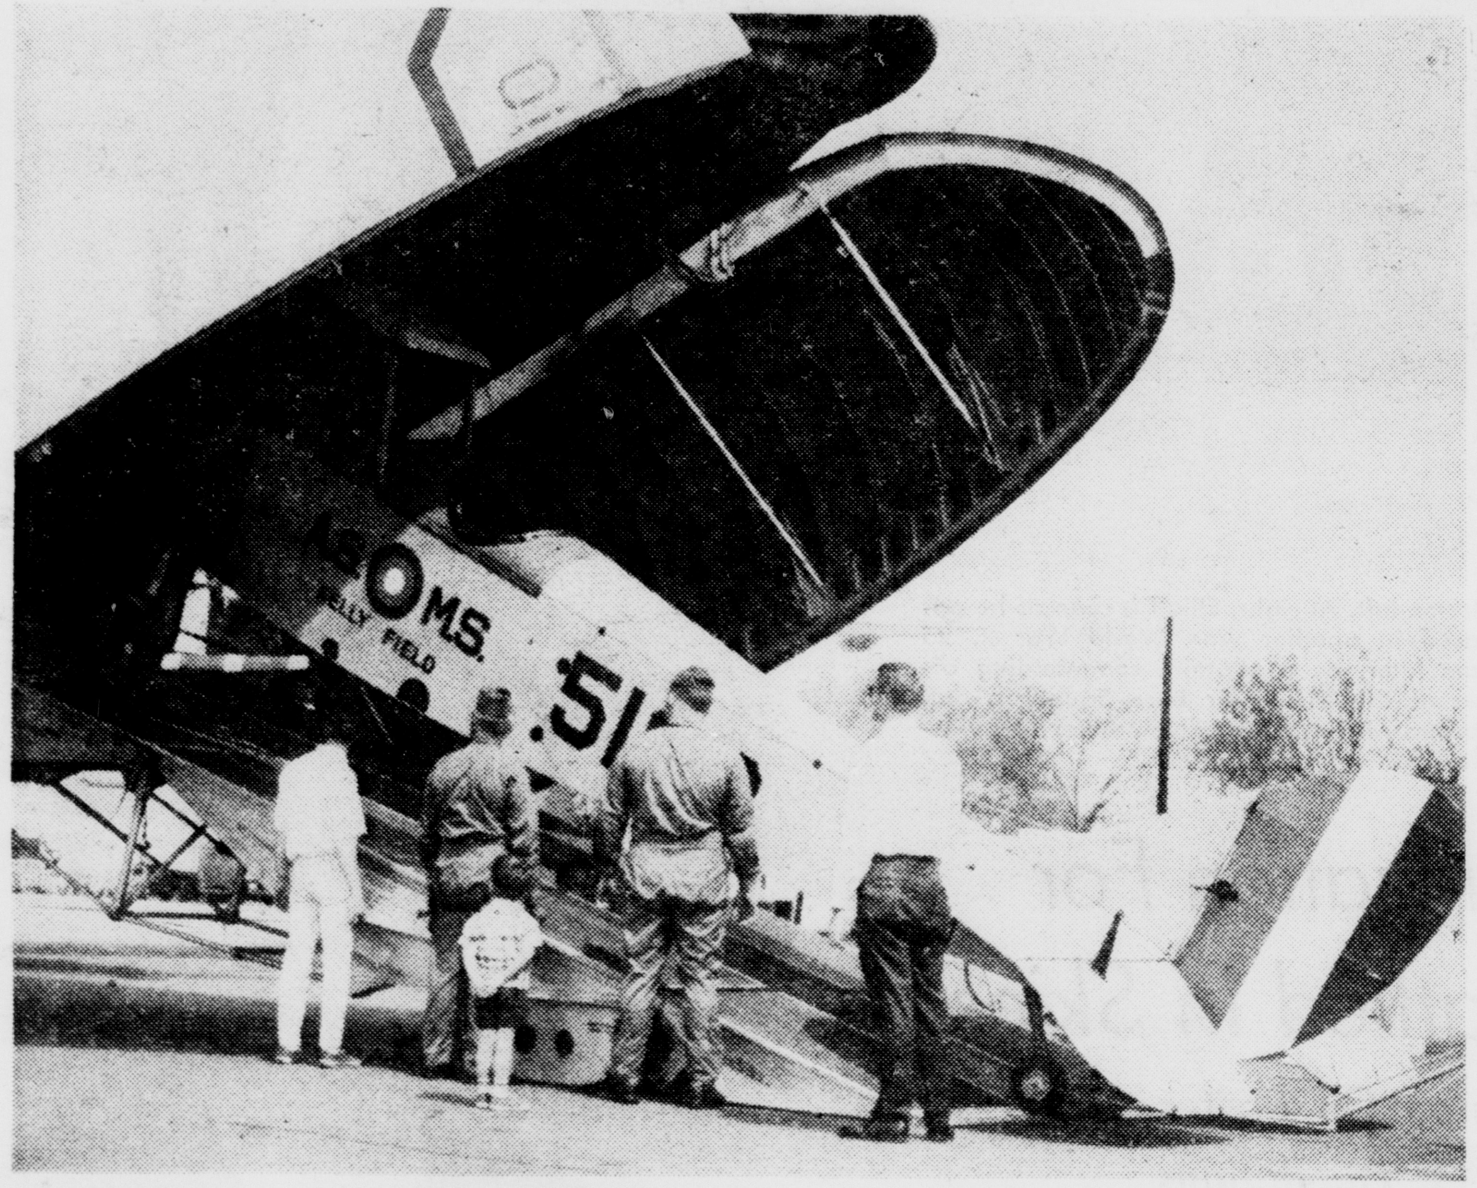
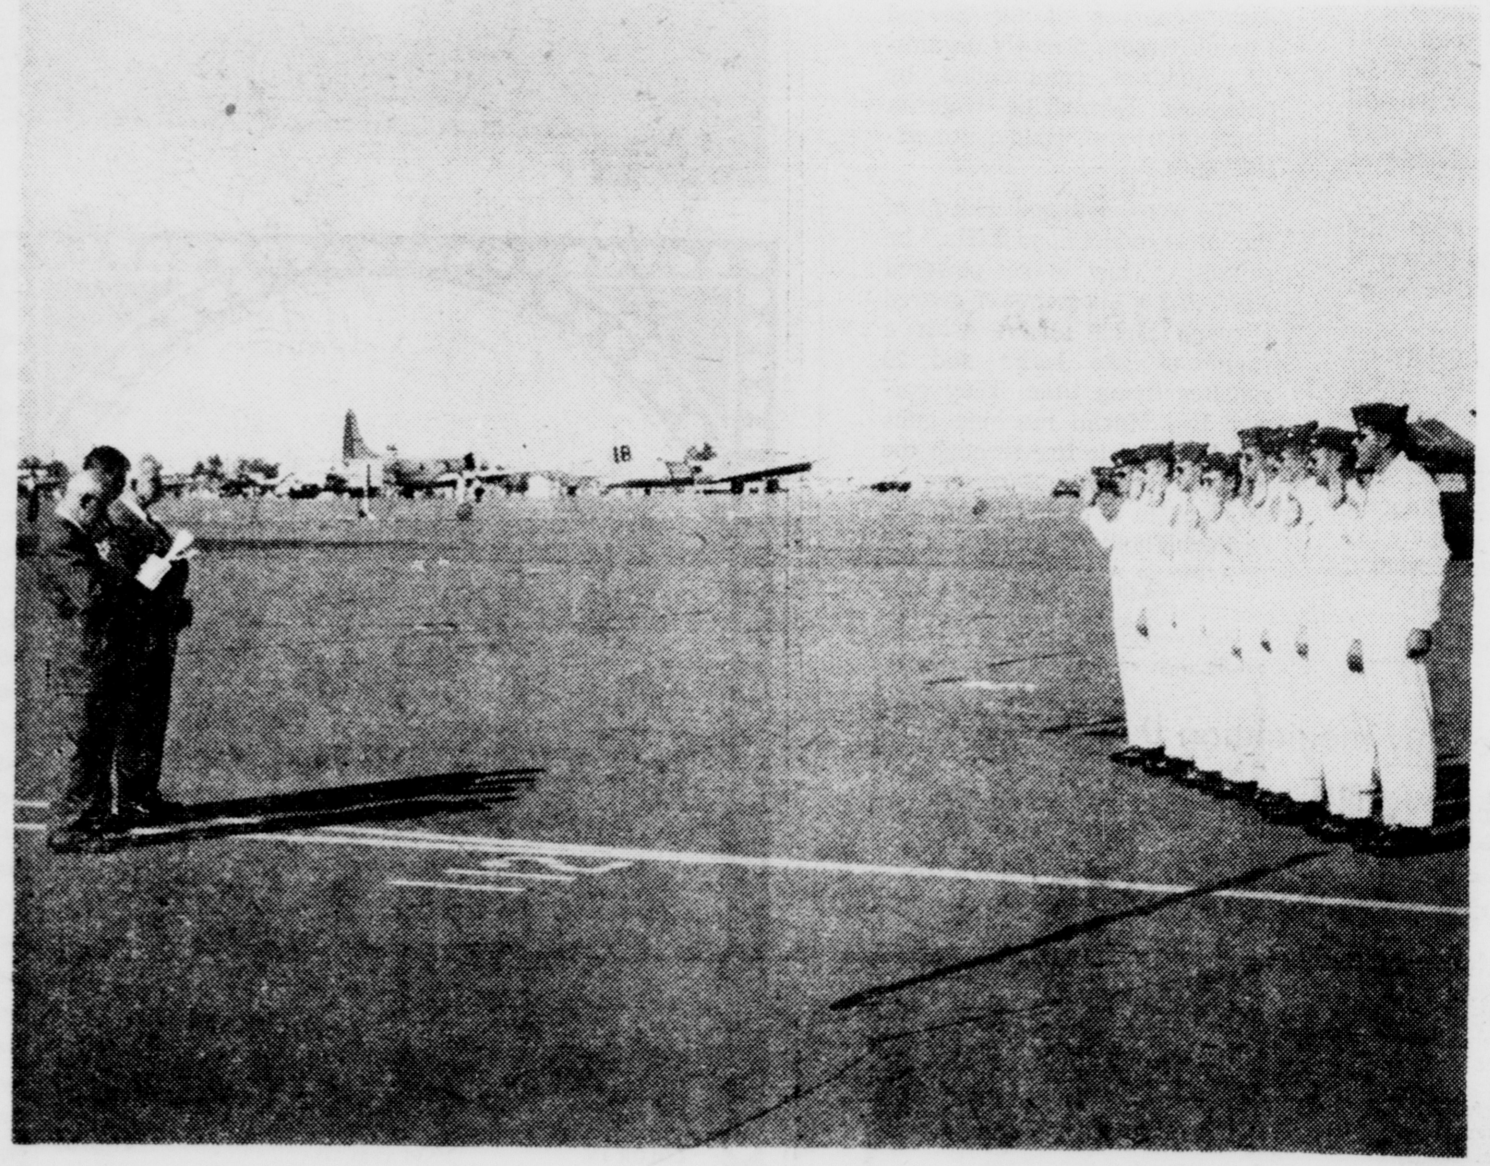
The Order Of Daedalians Supports U.S. Military Aviation

Organization Of Armed Forces Fliers Insists We Must Maintain Our Aerial Superiority



A DISMANTLED Jenny of World War I vintage was unloaded at Sacramento to play a part in an Order of Daedalians function. More than a few of the members of the military aviation fraternity had once flown the Jennies. This vintage aircraft had been "airlifted" by C-124 to Sacramento from the widely known Harrah's collection at Reno.



THE INTERNATIONALLY-KNOWN Thunderbirds, the Air Force's precision and stunt flying team, were indicted into the Order of Daedalians at Hamilton Air Force Base. Conducting the initiation ritual that made the Thunderbirds Golden Gate Flight No. 5 members was Col. Livingston Irving of Oakland. The Daedalians infrequently waive their rigid membership requirement rules to take in men who have made especially noteworthy contributions to aviation.

miles an hour.

"Our squadron was organized into three flights that patrolled a 40-mile front on the Toul area extending to St. Mihiel on the west. I flew with the first flight and was the No. 2 wingman to the leader who was none other than Princeton's immortal Hobey Baker, who also came from the Lafayette Escadrille. We alternated the flights at 6,000, 12,000 and 18,000 feet levels.

"OPPOSING US on the German side were an assortment of older Phalzes and Albatrosses, several photo reconaissance Rumplers and a squadron of modern Fokkers. We had bagged a few of the older planes and now action was lagging until one day near St. Mihiel six of us observed six Fokkers flying in the same direction, all at 18,000 feet.

"Both flights began a climbing match, seeking the advantage of the higher altitude prior to attack. The air was thin and cold and the Spads flew wobbly as we reached 21,000 feet and well above the also struggling Fokkers. We dove and chased them 15 miles inside the enemy lines and almost to the ground where we had to give up our quarry due to heavy ground fire.

"The results were indeterminate, but that engagement must have created a record height for World War I fighters. Oxygen and parachutes had not been developed and the open cockpits lacked heat or comfort provisions."

THE START of the St. Mihiel offensive, Major Elliott recalls, marked an end to the lull in the aerial excitement as well.

"It was hot mustard then," he says, "right up until the Armistice."

The famed Richtofen Circus was transferred to an area relatively close to Elliott's squadron.

"Although the baron was by then dead, his brother, Ernst Udet, Herman Goering and other top German aces made the going very rough for us. In the first two days of the drive they downed six of our pilots."

Shortly thereafter, Elliott says, his unit was transferred to another hot spot, Belrain in the Argonne, "and the action remained quite heavy."

HARKENING BACK to a lighter side of those thrill-filled days of more than half a century ago, Elliott says: "In my 18 months on the Allied front I never saw a flier with one of those long scarves streaming back from his collar.

"A muffler in any event was well-tucked beneath a garment so that it could not become entangled in control wires."

And he adds with a smile: "Naturally, while flying over the lines, I never spotted Errol Flynn — nor Snoopy."

Thus do these pioneers of military aviation exchange humor-tinged recollections at their periodic get-togethers. But always the emphasis remains upon the present — how to help keep Uncle Sam's aerial arm strong and ready for all eventualities.

FLIGHT 5'S executive staff is currently planning 1969 activities that may include joint meetings with other flights in Honolulu and Anchorage.

In October of 1968 Flights 5, 7 and 13 assembled in San Diego for such a joint gathering. Some 200 members and their wives participated in three days of activities ranging from business meetings to formal and informal dinners and cocktail parties to visits to military installations and other sightseeing attractions of the area.

Indicative of the wide range of interests of the Daedalians was their attendance while in San Diego at an in-depth lecture and film about oceanography provided by the Scripps Institute.

EACH SPRING the order holds a national convention at which Flight 5 is always well represented. The traditional site for that meeting has been Kelly Air Force Base at San Antonio, Tex. But when the San Antonio Exposition caused a shortage of accommodations in 1968, the convention was shifted to Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio.

Approximately 800 members flew in for a busy three-day program and for the renewal of cherished friendships.

Gen. Frank P. Lahm of Flight No. 9, hosts for the 1968 event, has urged that the 1969 convention also be held at Wright-Patterson. But other flights are also interested and it seems likely that the 1969 gathering will be at Ent Air Force Base in Colorado under auspices of Falcon Flight No. 11. San Diego Flight No. 13 hopes to be the 1970 host.

Observes Colonel Disbrow: "With a little campaigning on the part of Marin County, San Rafael and Novato chambers of commerce, there is no reason why the 1971 Daedalian convention might not be held at Hamilton Air Force Base, especially in view of the new convention accommodations going up in Marin."

BUT WHETHER the big national gathering is brought here or not, more and more Marinites in the future are going to recognize the Order of Daedalians for what it is. No longer will it be mistaken for a college literary or debating society.

"Now that we have a permanent home base at Hamilton," says Colonel Disbrow, "Northern Californians can expect to hear a great deal more about the Daedalians and Flight 5.

"Aviators have a way of making their presence known!"

AMONG THE celebrities from aviation belonging to Golden Gate Flight No. 5, Order of Daedalians, is Col. John A. Macready, whose most famous feat occurred in 1923 when with another lieutenant, Oakley Kelly, he made the first nonstop transcontinental flight, New York to San Diego, in 26 hours, 50 minutes. Colonel Macready, now residing in Mariposa, regards his pioneering flights in high altitudes as a more significant contribution to aviation. At left he is seen in full regalia for a 1920 flight to 40,000 feet, the first entry by man into outer space where he encountered temperatures 82 degrees below zero and atmospheric pressure that fell from 14.7 pounds to one pound. Above, Macready is shown after landing from his historic altitude record flight with dignitaries that included Orville Wright, at right, the father of aviation and an official observer of his exploit.

ROWING, NOT aviation, was the subject of the moment when these three ex-aviators and ex-oarsmen got together at a Daedalian social function. Left to right they are Jim Cavagnaro of Sonoma County, famous rowing coach Carrol (Ky) Ebright of Berkeley, and Edson (Jack) Berlin of Marin.

The Prettiest Spot In India

The Travel Pages

Lazy lagoons, palm-fringed beaches, groves of mangoes, pineapples and coconut make Goa, India's tiny state, one of the most pleasant and prettiest places on earth.

For those who enjoy historical attractions in addition to natural beauty, little Goa, only 80 minutes by air from Bombay, offers these, too, as well as cozy hotels with all the amenities.

The sights in Goa are surprising — more European than Indian. This is because the Portuguese ruled there for 450 years, and left their imprint on the people in such fields as religion and architecture as seen in the numerous churches and convents. There is also a sprinkling of Hindu temples, and the 600,000 inhabitants of Goa live in harmony while practicing either Christianity or Hinduism.

GOA HAS AN abundance of deep rivers, so one of the most delightful ways of getting from place to place is by boat. At the tourist office in the heart of Panjim, the capital, you can make arrangements for a boat to transport you to Old Goa, once the handsome 16th and 17th Century capital, and now just a shell of its former glory days.

After you diesmbark from your boat at Old Goa, you will pass through the Viceregal Arch. Centuries ago, this privilege was reserved for the entrance of each new viceroy who marched through the arch with great ceremony as a symbolic entrance to the city, before taking office.

Old Goa is easy to explore on foot. As you stroll in the town square, now just a field of wildflowers, it may chill you to know that inquisitions were conducted there in former days. On the hillside near Old Goa, you can find bits of painted patterned bricks that used to adorn some of the churches that are now in a state of decay.

THERE IS NO fixed itinerary needed for strolling through Old Goa to see the remaining houses of worship. But, you should make sure to see:

Bom Jesus Basilica — The largest in Old Goa, it took 10 years to build and is in the Jesuit style of architecture. In the richly decorative interior, there is a lavishly adorned casket containing the body of St. Francis of Xavier. The casket was a gift from a former Duke of Tuscany, and the bronze panels on it depict scenes from Francis' life. The entire chapel is marble, inlaid with semi-precious stones and decorated with paintings of the saint's life.

A small museum, adjoining this chapel, has some sacred objects that are worth seeing.

The Chapel of St. Catherine is a gem of a church in the Renaissance style, one of the earliest and smallest in Old Goa.

St. Francis of Assisi Church and Convent is a lovely example of Portuguese religious art; the spacious church has a simple facade with an interior embellished by a rich stucco ceiling and a great many carvings. There is a museum adjacent with old portraits of former governors and other historical and religious paintings.

St. Cajetan is where carvings, twisted columns — the best of the flamboyant baroque — can be seen within, while the outside is an elegant neo-classic design with twin towers and a dome. There is a gracefully arched window with panes of seashells in delicate pastel hues. The tombs of former Portuguese rulers are in the crypt.

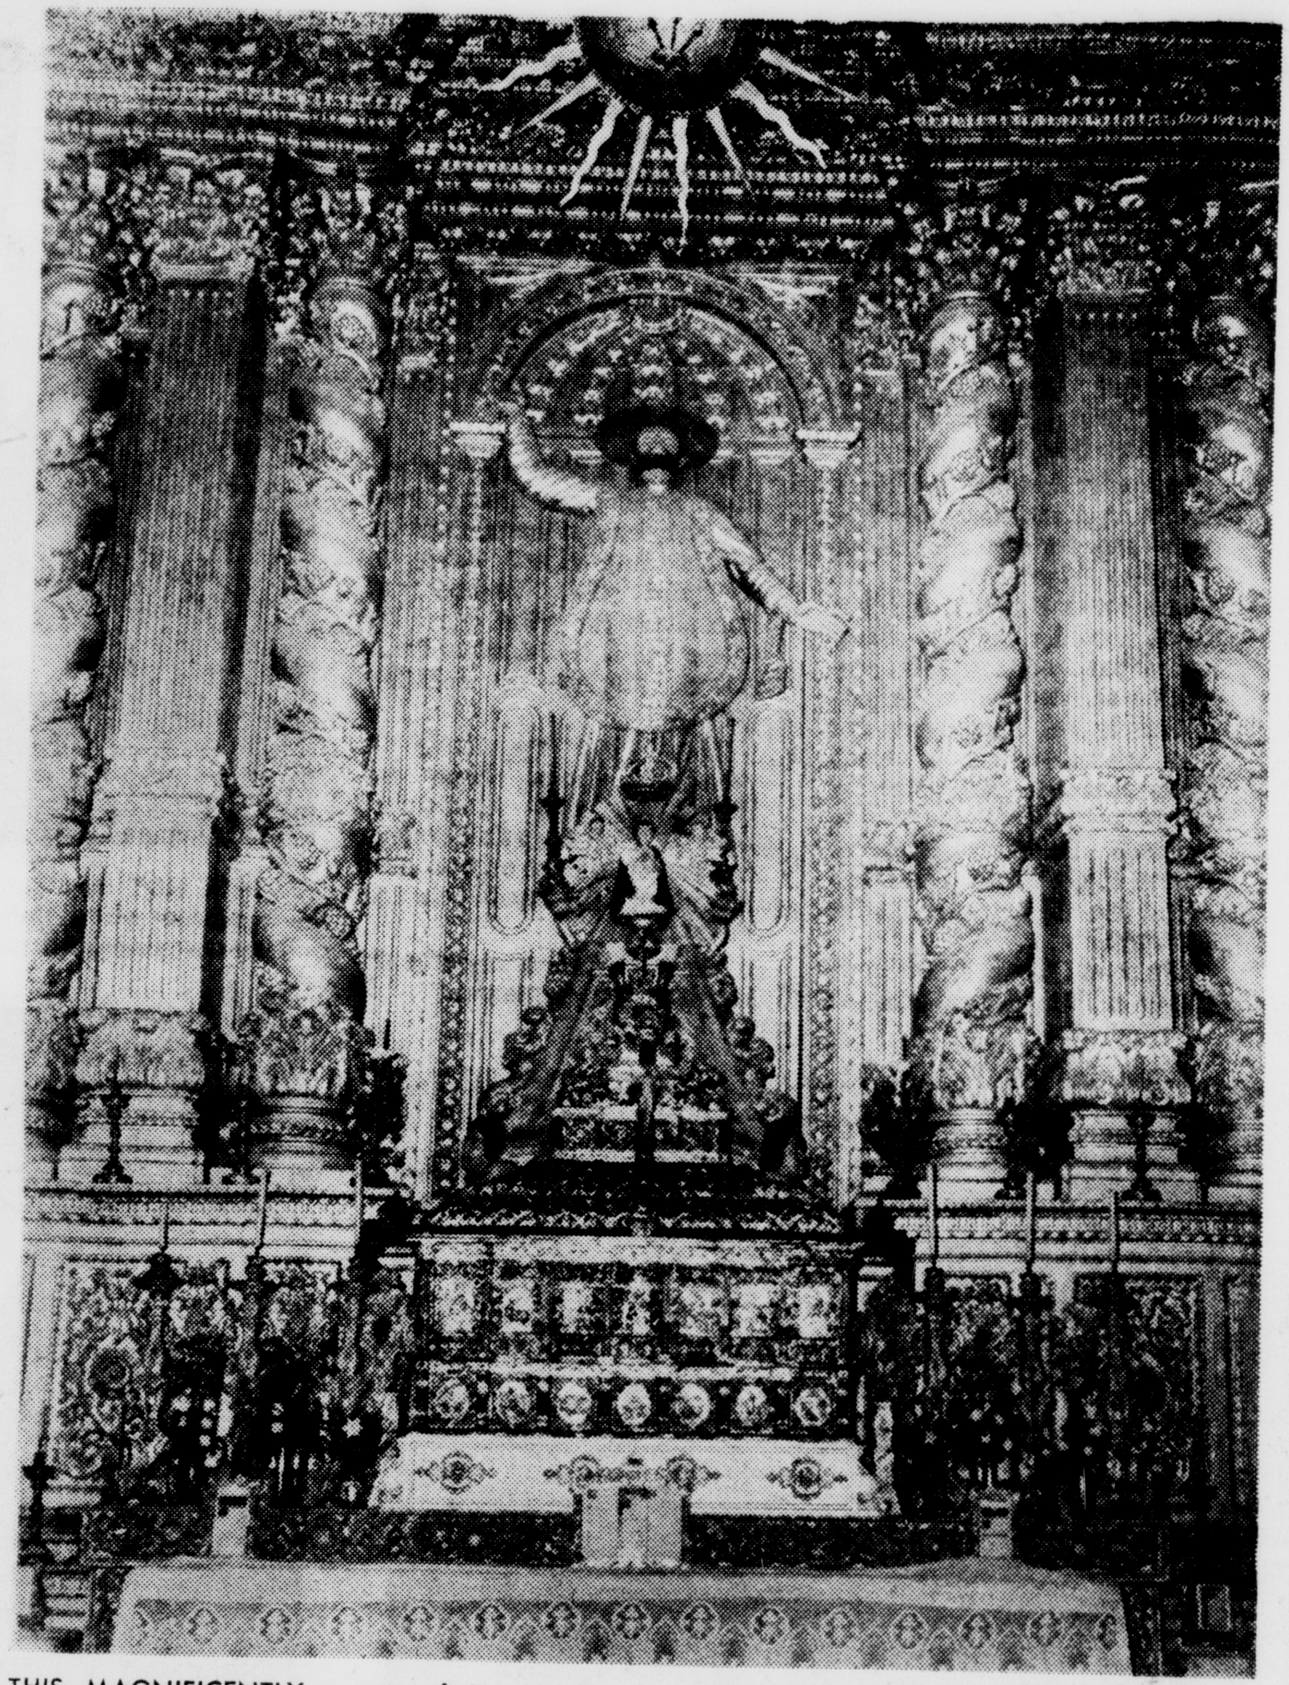
Se Cathedral is huge, white, with barrel vaulted ceilings and such trappings as Corinthian columns, richly carved scenes of the life of Christ and the Virgin, and captivating altar pieces. In a corner is a cross upon which a vision of Christ was supposed to have appeared in 1919.

AFTER YOUR cathedral viewing, you can walk up the hill of Monte Santo to see further remnants of the days of the Portuguese. Chief among these is the convent of the Church of Santa Monica which once held more than 100 nuns, but slowly diminished until the last nun died in 1885. A cross believed to be miraculous, can be seen in the pristine convent church.

As to other Goa points of interest, inland, near the town of Ponga, is the tastefully designed Mangesh Temple, a Hindu place of worship with a cool white marble interior.

With his sightseeing duties fulfilled, the smart tourist makes a beeline for one of Goa's idyllic beaches. There are many along the coastline, but two of the most popular are at Colva and Calangute beaches where there are long stretches of sand and cool coconut groves for shade.

But even these beaches are not Coney Island popular. Goa has not been "discovered," as yet. But it should be — by you.



THIS MAGNIFICENTLY ornate shrine to St. Francis Xavier is to be seen in India's state of Goa on the Arabian Sea. The saint's body is entombed in the richly adorned casket in Bom Jesus Basilica in Old Goa.

TWO DIANA RIGGS

From Emma Peel To Bard's Helena

Diana Rigg has no "best side" as far as facial features are concerned, but she has two very different personality profiles — one, classical; the other, modern, provocative, lively and, in mod British, "very gear," as exemplified by her recent television portrayal of Emma Peel in "The Avengers."

The classical actress, of a stature that makes it difficult to believe that she could be the same judo-expert detective who romped through the Emma Peel portrayal, has had wide experience with the famed Royal Shakespeare Company. It is this Diana Rigg who plays Helena in the company's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to be telecast Sunday at 9 p.m. in color on Channels 5 and 10.

MISS RIGG joined the Royal Shakespeare Company (then the Shakespeare Memorial Theater Company) at Stratford-On-Avon in 1959. One of her greatest triumphs was in her present role of Helena in the 1962 production of the Shakespearean comedy.

As a member of the company, she was seen in the New York stage production of "King Lear." American television viewers also saw her in "The Comedy of Errors," produced in England by the BBC.

Miss Rigg is neither an op-art symbol nor a grande dame of the classical theater. Her clothes tastes run to simplicity, and she has the directness of her Yorkshire upbringing, the majesty and independence of Britannia and the Statue of Liberty rolled into one, and witty sense of humor.

DIANA RIGG is Diana Rigg. The fact that she has resolutely stuck to this most untheatrical of names is an indication of her independence.

The chestnut-haired actress was born in Doncaster, Yorkshire, England, but spent part of her early life in India where her father was with the Indian government service. She and her parents then returned to Yorkshire to settle in Leeds where her father became works manager of an engineering firm.

The odds were against her becoming an actress. She thanks a school teacher, Sylvia Greenwood, for launching her on her thespian career. Miss Rigg went to a Quaker school where the headmaster strongly disapproved of anything theatrical. Mrs. Greenwood, a teacher at the school, disagreed with him, however, and her persistence eventually led to her forming a drama department — though the headmaster never did recognize it officially.

"MRS. GREENWOOD was a brilliant dramatic coach with a great capacity for engendering enthusiasm for the stage among her pupils," recalls Miss Rigg. "I owe everything to her."

Following study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, Miss Rigg succeeded in getting work in repertory, but not without difficulty. For example her height, five feet eight inches, was against her at first. Eventually it became an asset by enhancing her four-month career as a fashion model which, in turn, helped her to acquire her flair for wearing clothes.

After repertory work at Chesterfield and York, Miss Rigg went on to the Shakespeare Memorial Theater Company as a walk-on player. Her biggest break came when at two-days notice she took over the lead in "The Devils" with such success that she was signed to a five-year contract. For the next five years, she worked almost exclusively in the classics — in Shakespeare and in such productions as "Ondine," "Becket" and "The Physicists."

HER GREATEST acclaim came for her protrayal of Cordelia opposite Paul Scofield's "King Lear." She cast aside the traditional heroine portrayal to turn Cordelia into a resolute young Amazon.

Miss Rigg toured Europe and America and played before the British royal family in a special command performance of "The Comedy of Errors" at Windsor Castle. She showed every indication of devoting herself to the classical theater until she decided to seek wider fame in television and films. Nevertheless, she has returned to the Royal Shakespeare Company for further productions.

When talking about her apparently contradictory career, the actress points out that the term "classical actress" is often misconstrued. It doesn't necessarily mean heavy drama. Some of Shakespeare's greatest plays were comedies. These provide scope for the talents of a comedienne, and much of Miss Rigg's Shakespearean work has been in comedy.

Helena is one of the Bard's most enchanting heroines.

The all-Sheakespearean cast of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was directed by Peter Hall. Michael Birkett was producer of the special.

IAN RICHARDSON as Oberon, left, works his magic on Michael Jayston as Demetrius and Diana Rigg as Helena, in this scene from the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of the comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Shakespearean play will be telecast Sunday at 9 p.m. as a two-and-a-quarter-hour special on Channels 5 and 10.

The Arizona Town That Refused To Lie Down And Die

What happens to a town threatened with oblivion by the march of progress; a town founded in the best traditions of the Old West by miners and pioneers, and instrumental in the history of a frontier state?

A town, like a family, is only as strong as the people who comprise it, and Wickenburg, Ariz., has kept the determination of its forefathers intact. While many cities fight for survival against freeways bulldozing through the center of town, Wickenburg's nemesis is just the reverse.

Located in central Arizona on the major east-west highways to California, the town is shortly to be bypassed by a new route 40 miles to the south — an eventuality that could liquidate several businesses immediately and eventually rob the town of its livlihood — tourism.

FACED WITH this, other communities have given up after a brief fight, leaving the town to those who moved in to take advantage of the depressed real estate and those few who chose to remain. Wickenburg, however, is unique in that almost every resident is thereby choice rather than necessity. Its businesses were established by people who came as visitors, liked the town for its climate, geography and atmosphere, and stayed on. Then they looked around to see what "their" town needed to keep it growing, and proceeded to fill that need.

Now these same citizens have taken a longer look and decided that the community deserves to survive.

Now that tourists will no longer be delivered to the door in such great numbers, how will the town go out and bring them in — and make them want to stay? How does it convince residents that the community is worth saving and revitalizing in the face of possible disaster?

FIRST IT rallies and reorganizes its chamber of commerce: throws out the "nothing-can-be-done" attitude; silences the "it's-been tried" contingent; refuses to accept the "can't-afford-it" view; and comes up with a group and spirit that say, "Let's go!". And Wickenburg has taken off with the bit in its teeth, but with the firm hand of the Roundup Club (the chamber of commerce) on the reins to guide it.

Spurred by local interest and the exhilaration of its possibilities, the Maricopa County Historical Society chose Wickenburg as the spot for the Maricopa County Museum — a fitting tribute to its past and a show of confidence in its future.

The Desert Caballeros, a riding group of men from 27 states, contributed its fine collection of western artifacts, and local talent and devotion had made the museum a point of town pride.

THE TOWN council was encouraged to build a municipal park with a shooting range, and a new arena for the thrills and spills of rodeo and gymkhana entertainment befitting the Old West tradition.

Local business men joined with a winter resident in the same field to establish a radio station. Listed as the smallest in the world, it tells the Wickenburg story to some 40,000 persons each day on the highways and in neighboring towns.

The community has organized an industrial development group, with money in the bank waiting to go to a business that would fit into the life of Wickenburg without heavy industry and its resultant air pollution and problems, but with the promise of employment for the town's young people. Moreover, for immediate growth, this same group has gotten an industrial air park off the drawing boards and fast abuilding on the outskirts, with the first commercial fly-in slated for May, 1969.

CONSTRUCTION is also about to begin on an $85,000 public library, financed by residents and designed by one of Arizona's leading architects.

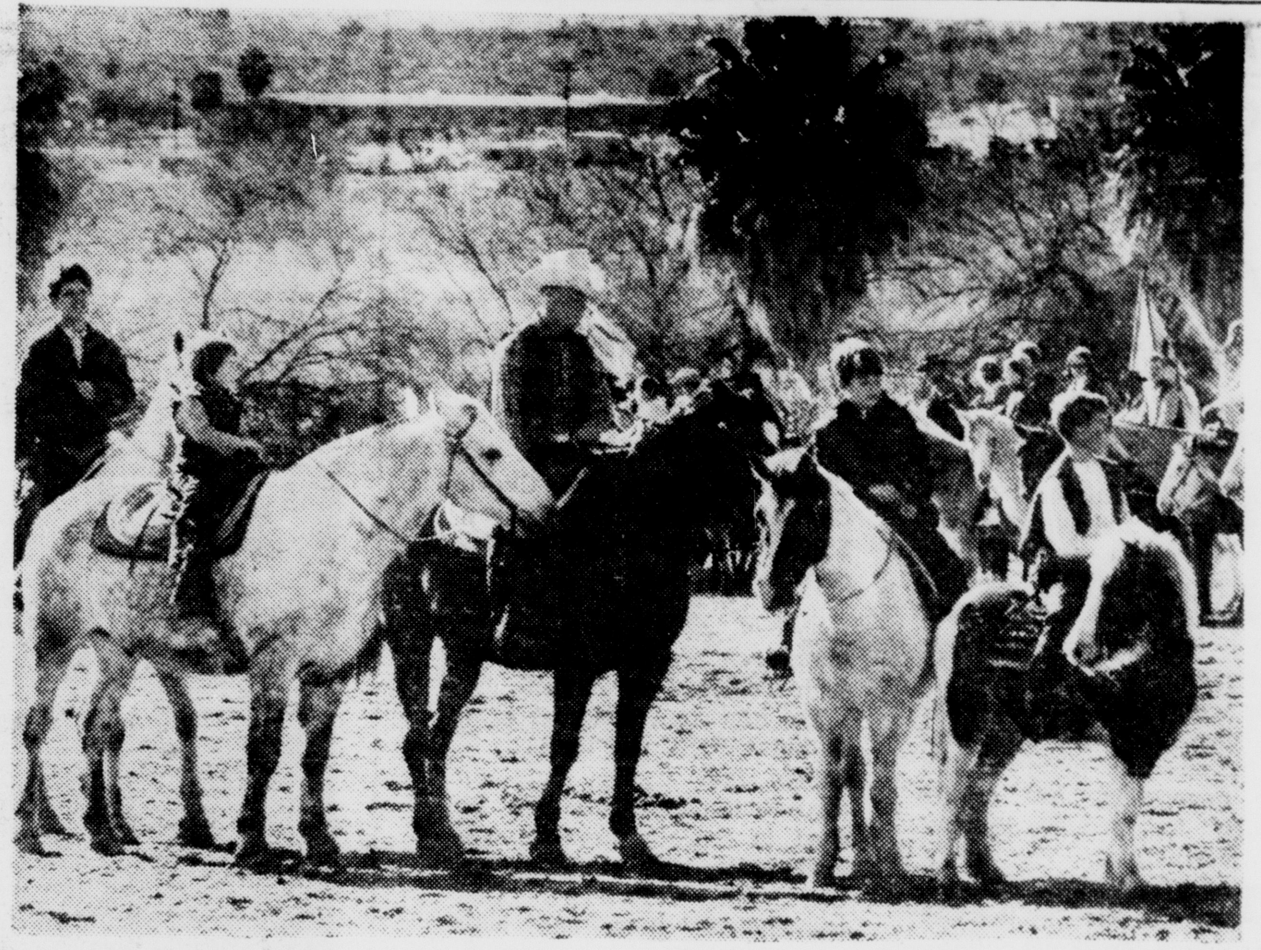
The town is also pushing the development of a dam and recreation area on a nearby river, provided that there are controls to insure its use by responsible vacationers who will appreciate its facilities and help to maintain its desirability as a recreation spot. In the near future, too, Wickenburg plans to build a convention center/community building for the use and enjoyment of both visitors and local organizations.

Granted, a working dream as big as Wickenburg's for its near-3,000 population is more expensive than simply hoping and planning, so a new 1 per cent sales tax, the first in the history of the town, was proposed and passed and put into effect on Jan. 1, 1969. And so confident is the town in its own future that private concerns are building three major subdivisions of exclusive size and in keeping with the high caliber of homes ready established in Wickenburg.

TRAILER PARKS abound, but here again, don't be fooled. You'd better call them mobile home parks, pardner, or practice your fast draw! Sometimes it's hard to see the trailer for the landscaping around it.

Not to be forgotten, the guest ranch/resorts that gave Wickenburg its reputation as "dude ranch capital of the world" so many years ago are still hale and hearty, contemplating future growth and expanded success. They've all encountered growing pains before, probably will again, but as an integral part of the proud community, they keep moving ahead with the town.

It takes a lot of hard work and a lifetime of practical dreams, but that's what got Wickenburg started in 1863, and what will keep it growing long after 1969!



KIDS THRIVE in the healthy outdoor atmosphere of Wickenburg, Ariz., with its refreshingly clean air, good weather, community spirit and unlimited choice of vigorous activities and outlets.

The Mardi Gras Is Under Way

Mardi Gras in New Orleans is much more than just a day of merriment for the city's populace and visitors; it is an entire social season with activities equivalent to the most elaborate affairs in any of the world's largest, most cosmopolitan cities.

Carnival began with the annual Harlequins Ball right after Christmas, and the season officially got under way on Twelfth Night, Jan 6. From that time through Mardi Gras night, which in 1969 will be Feb. 18, more than 75 tableau balls and three dozen parades were scheduled in the Crescent City.

During the 28 to 63 days of the carnival season (the date of Mardi Gras varies according to Easter), New Orleans is annually a city that forgets care. Carnival is a time of rededication for Orleanians to the beauty and romance traditions of their city.

AMONG FAMOUS guests who have enjoyed Mardi Gras in New Orleans are the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, for whom the Rex parade was organized in 1872, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who delighted onlookers by bowing to the mock royalty; Mrs. Harry Truman and her daughter, Margaret, and Lynda Bird Johnson.

In no other American city are the past and the present so nearly one as in New Orleans, the Creole city of French noblemen and Spanish grandees, of Andrew Jackson and Jean Lafitte, of the Bals de Roi and the Quadroon balls, and the dueling that reached its peak there.

Before the 1969 course is fully run the glorious meeting of Rex and Comus occurs on Mardi Gras night, a floodtide of balls and street parades will have engrossed the city. The clubs which organize the parades and balls are called "krewes," and most of them are made up of only men. However, women have recently formed their own krewes.

THE OLDEST krewes are still the most highly esteemed, and membership in them is so exclusive that the sons of members have not always been assured of admittance.

The krewes are characterized by secrecy, and the only king whose name is ever known to the public is that of Rex, king of carnival.

The kings are figureheads, and the real power of the krewes is invested in captains, who bear total responsibility for the success of the parades or balls. Their word is law, their names known only to the inner circles of krewe members.

THE CAPTAIN of Comus, oldest and most prestigious of all the krewes, is one of the most powerful men in New Orleans. His suggestions for king, queen and court, for invited guests and for call-outs to the dance are strictly followed.

The Mistick Krewe of Comus was originated in 1857 to bring some order to the chaotic festivities. Comus was well established by the 1870s when the other older krewes were born.

The imaginative parades during the last week or so of Mardi Gras are for the entertainment of all New Orleans. But the tableau balls are for only the haut monde-krewe members and guests.

GUEST INVITATIONS are not for dancing, only for watching. The dancing is ruled by a stricter tradition. The only men who may dance (the reverse is true for feminine krewes) are members who are costumed and masked. A few unmasked members and invited male guests, both in evening clothes so members may keep the secrecy of their membership, act as floor committeemen to summon the call-outs.

THE BELLES of the balls are the queens who preside and the maids who make up their courts. Most of the krewes choose from the debutantes of the carnival run concurrently.

Because of the number of balls and queen's suppers, all in the space of about six weeks, a girl would rather be presented in New Orleans than anywhere else in the world.

During the season, the girls wear extravagant gowns, are showered with gifts, are feted luxuriously, are courted arduously, and forever remember the magic of the wonderful year when they were introduced to New Orleans society.

No girl becomes a queen or maid on her personal charm. The krewe captains select girls whose fathers have long and actively participated in their organizations.

UNQUESTIONABLY, the two most desirable crowns are those of Comus and Rex.

The queen of Rex is queen of carnival, but she must share her throne with a public king, while the queen of Comus rules beside an anonymous king. Rex's subjects are more numerous, but Comus' realm is more exclusive.

King's Cakes are the traditional refreshment items for social events during carnival season, and bakeries turn out tens of thousands of the cakes, oval, bread-like circlets decorated with the official carnival colors (purple for sincerity, gold for loyalty and green for love), and containing a bean for selection of a queen.

Long before the general public was participating in Mardi Gras activities, teen-age queens and kings were reigning only at neighborhood "King's Cake parties."

CHILDREN IN socially prominent families are groomed for carnival almost from birth.

This year's debutantes were first presented in December, and from then on, the pace has increased, and the ballrooms of the Municipal Auditorium, hotels and the new Rivergate Convention Center have been filled with dancers, maskers, spectators and the sounds of merriment, madness and music.

Spokesman From An Ancient Order

By DON KEOWN

WISDOM OF THE MYSTIC MASTERS by Joseph J. Weed; Parker, 208 pages, $5.95.

FACES PEOPLE WEAR by Charles di Salvo with Claire Cox Hawthorn, 222 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Book-sellers report a surge of interest among their customers in books on metaphysics, mysticism, the supernatural, exotic religions and philosophies, etc.

It is, apparently, all part of the current revulsion to the excessive materialism of our society.

The young people have found their own ways of expressing that revolt. But many of the older generations are crying "enough" too, and are seeking new alternatives. The great enthusiasm for eastern religions, or for mystics such as the late Edgar Cayce, are facets of this.

But one movement that is far from new, yet still claiming its adherents, is the Rosicrucian Order or AMORC (Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucia) which written records trace back to the 12th Century and which claims to go much further into ancient Egypt and its mystery schools.

Joseph J. Weed, capitalist and member of the order since 1932, currently its grand councilor for the North Atlantic states, has become one of the leading Rosicrucian spokesmen through his lectures and his books.

His newest book is "Wisdom of the Mystic Masters."

Weed expounds the basic Rosicrucian teachings including the fundamental tenet that all manifestations come from energy. He applies Rosicrucian principles to such subjects as healing, thought control, telepathy, psychic projection, and he discusses such precepts as karma, reincarnation, the law of cycles, prayer.

Not all Rosicrucians would accept everything that Weed enunciates, but he explains that it is a vital part of the movement's program that each member appraise and evaluate such teachings for himself.

The important thing, he says, is that AMORC and the body of beliefs that it has built up through the centuries can be used to score a breakthrough against the wall of self-deception and illusion that materialistic man has built around himself.

As with so many of these books, the jacket makes some extravagant and rather nonsensical claims as to the "awesome secrets" to be found inside the book. Weed, too, sometimes gets carried away.

But for those searching for another dimension in their lives, "Wisdom of the Mystic Masters," while it is unlikely to fulfill all its promises, may point out a direction. Once interested, the reader can go on to other Rosicrucian writing less popularized and less sensationalized. Like most things that have survived for ages, the Rosicrucian movement must have accumulated some real and great values and insights from the many famous and wise men who have been associated with it through the centuries.

"FACES PEOPLE Wear" by Charles di Salvo with help from Claire Cox is standard psychotherapy stuff, this time by an author who is also a minister and pastoral counselor.

The social unrest of today, Di Salvo argues, is an accumulation of a highly personalized problem within so many of us, an uncertainty as to our true identity and proper role in society.

He applies his theory to such specific problems as alcoholism, the generation gap, the aged, widowhood, delinquency, immaturity, homosexuality.

A pause to take stock of ourselves is often the first step toward the remedy or alleviation of any of these conditions, the minister-psychotherapist advises.

And he concludes his book: "Now may be the time for you to ask yourself seriously, 'Who am I? Am I aware of the real me behind the reflection I see in the mirror every morning? How much attention do I give to the inner person? In what ways do I express my identity? Do I cope with it or allow it to create problems and crises for me and those around me?"

Professional help may be needed to provide the answers, he says, but once reached, the solutions should point you toward a greater understanding and tolerance of yourself and others, and toward a more constructive life.

Di Salvo's book seems to lose some of its impact because it strays from his central point and wanders over the entire psychotherapy field generally.

MENLO PARK'S Lane Magazine and Book Co. has published new expanded editions of two of its softcover books popular with vacationers — "Sunset Western Campsite Directory" and "California National Parks" ($1.95 each).

The former, which has sold 306,000 copies in eight earlier versions, has been updated to include the latest information on 5,000 public and private campgrounds in the western U.S. and Canada.

The latter now contains data on the new Redwood National Park, as well as revised information on the established national parks, monuments and Point Reyes National Seashore.

Both books are profusely illustrated

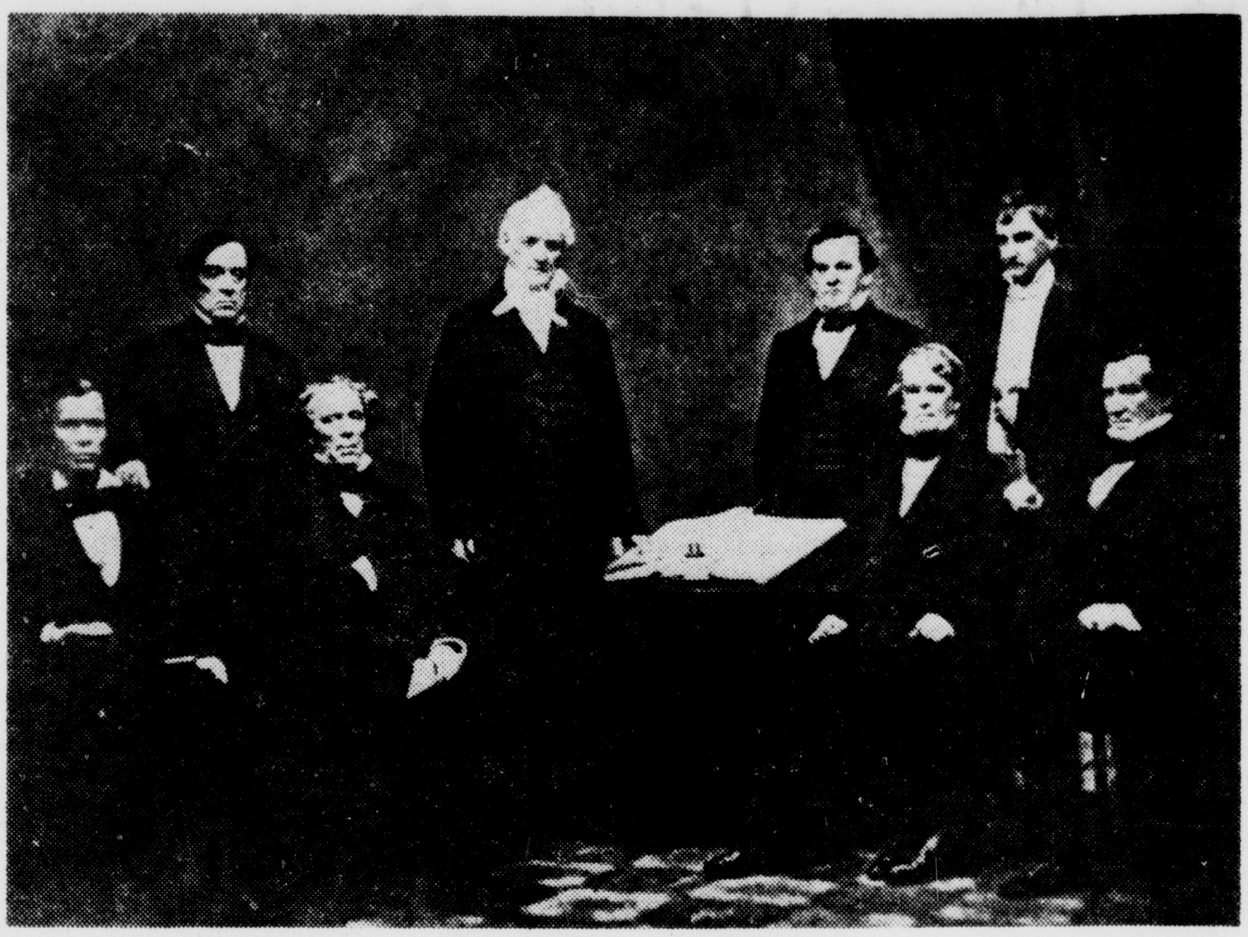
THE ERUDITE Lord Acton, when he died in 1902, left behind a vast amount of writing in periodicals, but no single assemblage of his thinking. His executors hastened to correct that situation by collecting his scattered papers into four sizable volumes. And still they had by no means exhausted his writing.

Thus a fifth volume, "Essays on Church and State."

In paperback format ($2.95) from Apollo Editions, these are pieces written more than a century ago by Acton as a young Catholic scholar, stung by the slights of Protestant England and eager to prove the worth of the intellectualism of his church. The papers have been reprinted exactly as written, except for correction of typographical errors, and find the great mind that did, indeed, succeed eventually in overcoming the resistance to his religious background commenting upon a wide range of theological-secular relationships of his time. Most interesting to present-day American readers will be his piece on "The Political Causes of the American Revolution" and another on "The Political System of the Popes."

"RENOIR" IS the newest addition to McGraw-Hill's imaginative "Color Slide Program of the Great Masters" series. Inside the cover, along with 20 color slides of the greatest works of Pierre Auguste Renoir, the purchaser also gets a brief biography of the French master, further reproductions of his work, and an illuminating and stimulating discussion of his work by Middlebury College's art historian, Robert F. Reiff. It's a tremendous treat for the art buff and particularly the Renoir fan.

THE LITERARY Guild has chosen "Providence Island," romantic adventure novel by Calder Willingham, as its March selection.



THE FIRST GROUP photograph of a United States President's cabinet was taken in 1857 by Matthew Brady, and showed President James Buchanan's advisers. The historic photo is reproduced in "The Glorious Burden," a pictorial history of presidential elections by Stefan Lorant, published by Harper & Row.

The Men Who Published In Defiance Of Gestapo

THE BATTLE OF SILENCE by Vercors; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 286 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

To a Frenchman, "The Silence of the Sea" stands as a symbol of the historic Resistance movement of World War II. Since its publication in the early 1940s, more than a million copies of it have been sold. Its author was known only then as Vercors (Jean Bruller, the pre-war artist and engraver), who is now something of a literary giant.

Now 25 years later Vercors has set down for history details of the famed clandestine publishing house, "Editions de Minuit" (the Midnight Press), and of its first book, "The Silence of the Sea."

The small print of the book will probably scare away the meek. However, it is a profound account of France s courage during the bleak days of World War II.

Until the birth of the Midnight Press, the French spiritual Resistance had only one weapon — silence. From its inception, the underground publishing firm was a tool of defiance. Its founders, if ever identified, faced Nazi imprisonment, torture and execution. Vercors details how the press was able to print and distribute forbidden books —at the rate of one or more volumes a month — right under the nose of the Gestapo. And what is more amazing, a member of the group was never discovered.

From pre-war France to the struggles of the war and finally to the liberation of Paris, Vercors' account is spellbinding.

But more important, the account is the story of the continuing struggle for expression of freedom of thought and expression.

Sleuths & Suspense

TAKE A PAIR OF PRIVATE EYES by J. T. McIntosh; Doubleday, 191 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Novels mixing crime and humor can be awful duds. But when the funny stuff comes off well, as it does here, then you have yourself an evening of delicious entertainment.

J. T. McIntosh introduces you to Ambrose and Dominique Frayne, a swinging young mod couple in London who specialize in the recovery of stolen property, and therefore find themselves frequently involved in contests of wit with the city's underworld.

McIntosh keeps his story, based on a television play by Peter O'Donnell, moving at a rapid pace, as he provides a continuous stream of ribtickling dilemmas from which the quickwitted Ambrose and his French-born bride must extricate themselves.

One finishes the book hopeful that Ambrose and Dominique will become regulars on Doubleday's Crime Club label.

Banking With Romance

WELLS FARGO by Noel M. Loomis; Clarkson N. Potter, 326 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The history of a company can often be a dull affair — but not when it is such a company as Wells Fargo, certainly the most romanticized banking house in the United States.

Noel M. Loomis, assistant professor of English at San Diego State College, tells the story in some detail of both Wells Fargo's stagecoach operations and its banking, following them through the intricate splits, mergers and associations that have produced a host of arguments over just what Wells Fargo operated and what it didn't.

He has drawn heavily on Wells Fargo's own history room for information. Three hundred illustrations —ranging from drawings of Indian attacks to portraits of the bank's present executives — adorn the pages.

The book is attractive. It is well researched. But better writers than Noel M. Loomis have told the story of Wells Fargo long before this.

Although this volume bears no visible evidence of being a "house job," Loomis virtually fawns over everything done by Henry Wells and David G. Fargo and the men who succeeded them. With such a good story to tell, this isn't necessary.

The White Man's Closed Shop

THE LAND OF AFTERNOON by Lewis Sowden; McGraw-Hill, 256 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

"South Africa . . . where humanism is weakness, justice is adjusted . . . and civilization is a white man's closed shop." This is South African journalist Lewis Sowden's appraisal of his homeland.

British-born Sowden describes the tightening of the black man's suppression, apartheid, from the comparatively easy-going paternalism of 50 years ago to the ruthless racism of today.

Most of the blame for apartheid is pinned on the Boers, the Dutch-descended farmers who settled in South Africa more than a century ago.

"Apartheid is the Boer's wild desire to unscramble the egg," Sowden writes.

The Boers hope to lead their nation back to the halcyon days of the "Land of Afternoon" by getting blacks and coloureds out of their sight. Any means will do. This "apart-hood" has largely succeeded because the million British people there have been mostly apathetic.

Sowden maintains that "the dominant aspect of South African politics is British acquiescence to Boer intransigence."

The book traces the rise of apartheid from the time of the political demise of gifted statesman Jan Smuts, a reasonable Boer, in 1947.

Daniel Malan and Afrikaners of the Nationalist Party feared an eventual takeover by blacks, immigrants and non-Boers in general. Beginning in the late 1940s they began to legislate the following repressive laws that comprise apartheid:

The Population Register required coloureds to carry identity cards attesting to their status in limbo;

The Group Areas Act "cleansed" white towns of all non-white enclaves. Today in South Africa it is the blacks who are the suburban dwellers and commuters;

The Separate Amenities Act of 1953 (note the sugar-coated labels) excluded non-whites from public premises and transportation;

The Bantu Education Act placed the education (or lack of it) in the hands of the federal government to thwart local white sympathizers; and

The industrial Conciliation Act of 1956 reserved skilled jobs for whites only.

These repressive measures resulted in non-violent opposition by some blacks and a few liberal whites. Mass arrests were made in 1956 by the government on grounds of treason.

Soon violence erupted. Five thousand blacks demonstrating against the harsh Pass Laws that severely restricted their movements became unruly. A handful of frightened untrained policemen opened fire with Sten guns and slew 68 blacks, wounding 178 more. This was the Sharpeville Massacre.

Nothing as overtly brutal takes place again, but Sowden writes of the Union of South Africa now as really five nations: Boer, British, Black, Coloured and Indian. Each group is separated by social, legal, and physical barriers.

The author's sympathies for the blacks and coloureds led to government repression of his play "Kimberly Train," then the withholding of his passport for five years. Sowden left South Africa several years ago to reside in Jerusalem.

"Land of Afternoon" gives an interesting account of the author's childhood days and ways of life before the rise of apartheid. But he never really has control of his material; there is much that is discursive and too little about the 1950s, the time of apartheid.

Sowden, the journalist, did not get enough help from Sowden, the editor.

Man — What Can He Eat, And Why Is He So Limited?

FOOD, FACTS, FOIBLES AND FABLES by Dr. A. T. W. Simeons; Funk and Wagnalls, 150 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Dr. Simeons, a physician, traces the evolution of our feeding habits in this small book subtitled "The Origins of Human Nutrition," beginning with our far distant herbivorous ancestors through the carnivorous eaters that followed to the omnivorous feeders of today.

Man, he says, has developed the ability to digest anything.

Along the way, the doctor has some interesting observations on specific topics such as the obesity problem:

"It has rightly been pointed out that obesity would be a less serious problem if a man would revert to eating frequent snacks instead of a few heavy meals . . ."

And: "There are two other factors responsible in some measure for the source of obesity. . . . The first is the rapid increase in the consumption of cooked — particularly boiled — food as against raw food. The human intestine digests and assimilates cooked and refined food . . . far more rapidly than their raw and natural equivalents. The result is that shortly after a meal our system is quickly flooded with more nutriment than it can make use of at the time. The surplus goes into abnormal fat deposits. . . .

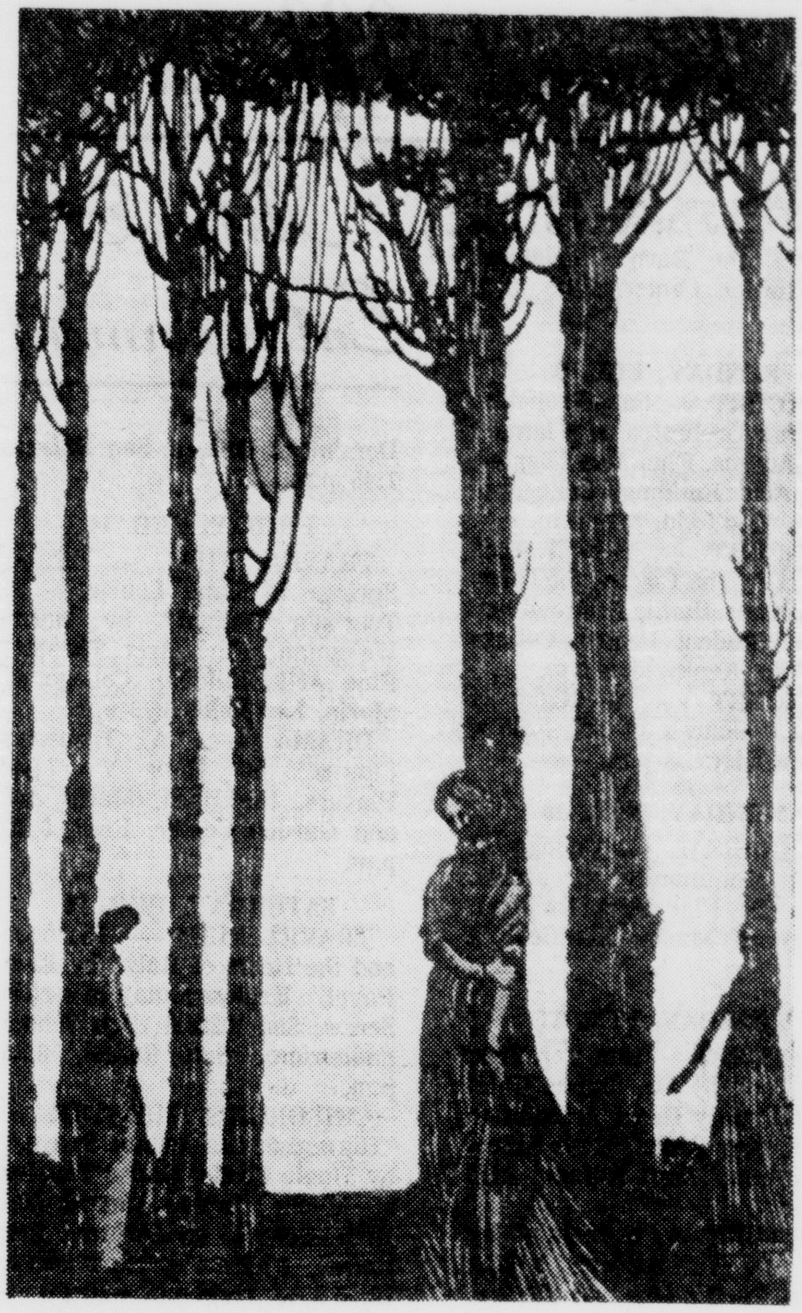
"The second factor . . . is a generic one. From Neolithic times to our day there has been a sexual selection favoring an inherited tendency toward overweight. In the marriage market a plump girl has almost universally had a better chance than a skinny one. . . ."

Dr. Simeons also has some pointed remarks on other subjects. For instance on digestion: the stomach, he says, operates in a fashion similar to the automatic washing machine.

"In most cases, saying that it can digest some things and not others is like contending that an automatic laundry machine will wash perfectly bedsheets, tablecloths and shirts, but not socks. The nature of the food eaten cannot influence the process of digestion to anything like the extent to which the brain's fears, fads and fancies can. Banal indigestion is rarely caused by what is eaten, but rather by the eater's emotional attitude to what he has eaten or the emotional tension under which he ate."

Wrong thinking is more often the cause of our complaints than wrong feeding, he contends.

The doctor's observations are often opinionated and challenging, making for an interesting book that is off the beaten track in the field of nutrition. It is good history of how man became the feeder that he is today. Whether it is sound commentary upon those habits will be a point of controversy, with even the nutritionists split.



TEN PAINTINGS by Bill Greer, reproduced in color, are included as illustrations for "Judge Tenderly of Me," a collection of Emily Dickenson poems selected by the late Winfield Townley Scott and published by Hallmark Editions.

Setting The Record Straight About A Figure Of Folklore

DEAR OLD KIT by Harvey Lewis Carter; University of Oklahoma Press, 238 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Kit Carson is in somewhat the same position as Davy Crockett and Dan'l Boone: He is as much a figure of folklore as of history, and it is hard to separate fact from fiction.

Harvey Lewis Carter, professor of American history at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, assays to do the job. He does it quite thoroughly in "Dear Old Kit."

The book consists of three parts: Carter's foreword, which points out the fallacies that have crept into historical accounts dealing with Carson; Carson's own memoirs, with copious marginal notes, and a "reappraisal" of the famed frontiersman by Carter.

The result is a substantial contribution to western history. Christopher Carson emerges as a more human, less romanticized figure, but all in all a larger one.

However, in setting the record straight on Carson, the writer inadvertently clouds it a bit himself by leaving out known episodes of Kit's life. For instance, there is no mention of Kit's first wife, Owl Woman. When he wrote his memoirs, Kit had long since re-married, and did not refer to the squaw who was his first wife. But it is unfortunate that so scholarly a work as Carter's omits her entirely.

Superior Soaper

WHIPPLE'S CASTLE by Thomas Williams; Random House, 536 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"Whipple's Castle" might be described as another Peyton Place-type novel, but produced by a vastly superior writer.

Williams concentrates upon a single community — the New Hampshire town of Leah, about which he has written before. There is a certain soap operish tinge to the involvements and the travails of his leading characters, the Whipples, who reside there in their mansion. And the story is, of course, well supplied with sex scenes.

Yet Williams overcomes the reader's aversion with his writing skill and with the intensity of his feeling for his characters. Obviously, his relationship to the Whipples and their problems was no superficial one. And since they have such deep meaning for their creator, they come to be of real concern to the reader as well.

The novel is set in the 1940s, a time remembered well by most of us. And yet Williams succeeds in reminding us of a great deal about the period that has been forgotten, accidentally or intentionally.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO, William Torrance of San Anselmo exhibited the work of Ann Blanford of Sausalito as the first one-man show at his new San Anselmo gallery. This week another showing of paintings by the same artist, now 82 and still painting, including the scene of the Spanish lighthouse at Point Loma, opened at the Torrance Gallery, 128 Greenfield Avenue, and will continue through February.

THE FARALLONES – MEMORIES

Close to Point Reyes,
Haven for birds,
Flying day and night,
Petrel and Auklet;
Visited by Blackbirds,
Meadow Larks,
And most all birds
That seek the land;
Haven of California,
And the giant Stellar Seal,
Hunted by Killer Whales,
Occasionally challenging,
Days on into nights;
Still resounds the echo
And the memory;
Of Pacific Storms, fog,
    and winds;
Lights of distant San Francisco;
Red beacons on the bridge;
And amongst the rocks and crags,
In sea caves,
Echo of wind and Murre,
The human baby sounds
    of such birds.
The Duck Hawk;
Upon a high precipice
Challenging all that flies;
The Farallon Cormorant
    Leaving toward the dawn,
And break of day.
    Returning with the setting sun,
Make use of all the light of day,
    Life set in motion,
Never ceasing,
    Of bird and mammal
Wind and wave.

POINT REYES
C. B. GEARHART

SUN-GOD

Golden candle disappear
At horizon's rim;
Passive darkness portends
Night's unmirror'd silence.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER

"THE BEATLES" — Apple SWBO 101:

The new double-disc package of the Beatles has a completely white exterior with no artwork. Inside are loose individual color photos of the Beatles and a large collage of snapshots backed by the complete lyrics of the tunes.

This album has no over-all theme — just a rich stream of wonderful tracks that capture the ear in rapid succession as the stylus tracks through the unbanded sides of the discs. The general tenor seems to be a return to less psychedelic days; even to the 1920s or 30s in "Savoy Truffle."

While some tunes try to coat strong feelings of protest with satire — "The Continuing Story of Bungalow Bill," "Piggies" — most are good-natured and designed just for enjoyment again and again. My votes for cream-of-the-cream go to "Julia," "Blackbird," and a toe-tapping tale of gunplay in the Black Hills, "Rocky Raccoon." The humor of "Sexy Sadie" and "Back in the USSR" is great, especially the take-off on the Beach Boys in the latter.

While this album may not quite equal the superb "Sgt. Pepper," it undoubtedly will have a high position in the compleat opera Beatle — and I can't imagine even a part-time Beatles fan being without it.

"MUSIC FROM BIG PINK" — Capitol SKAO 2955:

This rock LP also is high on the charts.

The group was sort of discovered by Bob Dylan. They have a peculiar sort of country flavor, along Appalachian folk music lines. The big hit from this disc is "The Weight," and it proves an almost unforgettable tune. Three Dylan tunes are included, with "I Shall Be Released" a real beauty, on this compelling rock release.

"CHILDREN OF THE FUTURE" — The Steve Miller Band — Capitol SKAO 2920:

The first album by this dynamic young San Francisco group has much to offer. The production values, sometimes making interesting use of sound effects from the Bay such as gulls, are an important part of the album's impact on the listener.

"You've Got the Power" is a strong-hitting blues. "Baby's Calling Me Home" is a fairly "pop-sounding" tune with catchy harpsichord riff, and "Steppin' Stone" a raucous electronic rock number.

The group seems stronger in the instrumental department than the vocal.

This album is a good example of the superior San Francisco sound in rock right now.

"ALBUM 1700" — Peter, Paul and Mary — Warner Bros. WS 1700:

This is the first PP & M album I have reviewed. Not that I didn't think their work was always of the highest professional level — it just didn't really affect me until hearing two tracks in this one: "I Dig Rock and Roll Music" and "The Great Mandella." The latter is a deeply moving experience if you really listen to the lyrics.

A stronger rock beat than in former albums is present here. The three voices blend beautifully, and the arrangements are a model of good taste.

The other 10 tunes are very listenable also.

"THE MASON WILLIAMS PHONOGRAPH RECORD" — Warner Bros. WS 1729:

As anyone who saw the "toad-sucking" recitation by Mason Williams on the Smothers Brothers TV show knows, this man is a nut. A very versatile nut, too.

He sings, plays the guitar beautifully, whistles, composes music ranging from his hit "Classical Gas," to Texas blues-guitarish "Long Time Blues," and writes books, lyrics, and gags for television.

Both six and 12-string guitars are heard on some tunes, and the large studio orchestra provides a colorful setting for Williams' creations while avoiding over-arrangement.

The Dada-esque "Prince's Panties" and the haunting theme "Sunflower" are other highlights in the LP.

Williams' second record, now being released, should find many repeat purchasers.

It's Camellia Time At Nurseries

To choose the camellia that meets your standards of beauty perfectly, you have to visit the nursery while these shrubs are in bloom.

Now is that time.

In the showyards of Marin nurseries, the Japonica camellias in particular are in full flower. But you will also find a number of the Sasanquas also still in bloom.

The third principal classification, the Reticulatas, will not bloom until a bit later.

BUT SO VARIED are the Japonicas and the Sasanquas that you should have little difficulty finding your ideal camellia.

For instance, among the Japonicas you will come upon such stunning specimens as the Covina, orange-red rose form blooms; the Daikagura, peony-shaped flowers of a bright rose-pink splotched with white, and the Kumasaka, semi-double blooms in a showy rose-pink.

Growing habits of the shrubs themselves are just as varied.

THE DAIKAGURA, an early bloomer, for instance, has a slow, pendulous growth habit that makes it especially suited to tub culture or use as a foundation plant. Covina, a mid-season flowerer, is a compact grower that is highly regarded for hedges and for borders.

Garden Page

The later-blooming Kumasaka grows more vigorously and taller, with foliage that is ideal for background planting.

Like the more popular Japonicas, the Sasanquas, too, are a versatile lot.

THERE ARE TWO prime requisites in selection a location for your new camellias — shade, and good drainage. A wet winter such as this one drives home the point that the camellia should not be placed where water stands.

Otherwise, the cultural requirements of the camellia are miniscule.

Bulbs For A Summer Spectacular Of Bloom

Spring-blooming bulbs outnumber summer-blooming bulbs by far.

But when it comes to a contest in color, the bulbs that flower in the summer are an easy winner over their spring-blooming cousins.

The summer list includes such spectacular performers as the gladiolus, the cannas, tuberous begonias, dahlias, hybrid lilies and the fragrant tuberoses.

In Marin, right now is the time to plant a number of these bulbs for summer bloom.

EXCEPTIONS ARE the dahlias which shouldn't be set out before mid-March, and begonia tubers. The latter can be sprouted now and planted after the danger of frost has passed.

And while the agapanthas or Blue Lily of the Nile, can be grown from the bulbs, most gardeners prefer to start with the young plants that are just as cheap. Nurserymen offer them in containers.

The gladiolus and the dahlias are the most publicized of the summer-blooming bulb flowers, and as a result such showy plants as the cannas are sometines overlooked. But these can be the standouts of a summer border, if given a chance.

TROPICAL IN appearance, the cannas grow taller than most flowers. Growers can choose from a multiple of shades including pinks, white, yellow, reds, bronze and orange.

Another often overlooked summer-blooming bulb flower is the tigridia or Mexican Shell Flower, which produces tri-corner blooms, spreckled and solid, in a wide range of brilliant colors. Those blooms last only a day. But each bulb produces such a succession of blossoms through the summer that the daily dying-back is never noticed.

The tigridia, one of the bulbs that can be planted this month, should be massed closely for best effect.

WAIT UNTIL SPRING TO REPAIR FROST DAMAGE

The California Association of Nurserymen has repeated its warning to gardeners not to rush into pruning the injured parts of frost-damaged trees, shrubs and plants.

Such pruning should wait until spring after new growth has started.

If cutting back is done now on the frost-bitten plantings, the nurserymen advise, then unseasonably warm winter temperatures could cause even more extensive damage to the tender new growth.

For California as a whole, the association says, it has been a bad winter for cold weather damage.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Set out rhododendrons now for a big show later on. If you want color in the spring, seek plants already showing buds.

✓ If you want an accent tree for the garden, consider the olive with its handsome gray foliage.

✓ Flowering quinces are in bloom now in the nurseries, so that you can pick one with the color that best suits your taste.

✓ Plant grapes now while they are dormant. Also: currants, boysenberries, youngberries, raspberries and blackberries. Not all varieties are suited to our climate, so consult your nurseryman on this matter.

✓ Divide established clumps of Shasta daisy and perennial phlox.

✓ Plant new perennials from the nursery.

✓ The bareroot planting season for roses and many shrubs and trees is still with us, but won't be much longer.

✓ Dormant spraying time is also running out. Don't delay much longer.

Research At The Nurseries

Industries of all kinds have found it pays to carry out the continuing research programs necessary for the development of new products for their consumers.

The nursery business is no exception.

It conducts research and experimentations unceasingly, aimed at producing new, more beautiful, sturdier plants for the enjoyment of the gardener.

Take the development of new varieties of roses, for example.

A modern nursery's research department may make as many as 10,000 crosses in a single year to develop new seedlings. From these crosses possibly 2,000 seedlings will develop. From these, perhaps only one-tenth of 1 per cent, or two new varieties, might show sufficient merit for commercial production.

Rose hybridizing is highly scientific today: Geneticists have to know chromosone counts and dominant genes.

The work of cross-pollination is all done by hand.

Parent plants are selected because of their special merits shown. A variety having unusual fragrance, for example, may be crossed with a variety having exceptional color — in the hope that a seedling might be produced that would have the advantages of both parents.

Occasionally a "sport" occurs in the fields that has merit, but this occurs so seldom that the nursery industry cannot depend upon it. Instead it must continue an ever increasing program of research.

The same careful attention to selection of parent plants and the cross-pollinizing to produce new seedlings goes on in a constant search for new varieties of fruits as well as shrubs and flowers.

The new variety is very carefully isolated to prevent natural cross-pollination. Budwood for the production of additional plants is taken from the original plant, and used to bud the new variety into the rootstock specifically grown for that purpose. From the original parent plant only a limited amount of budwood can be taken, so in the second year of production a new variety relatively few additional plants are available.

Again there is the taking of budwood from the second year's production to bud still more plants and by another year another small increase in the number of plants has occurred.

Before the new variety is made available for commercial purposes, it must be tested in all sections of the country. A variety that proves satisfactory in one section may be a complete failure in other areas.

This can mean several years of additional research work before a variety is ready for introduction to the gardening public.

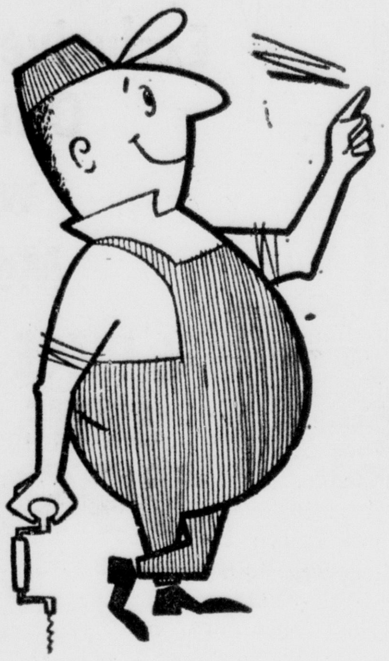
Closing The Pores That Are In The Wood

The term "wood filler" is often misinterpreted.

Many persons associate it with such terms as plastic wood, water putty and similar materials intended to plug cracks, holes or other gaps in finished or unfinished pieces of wood.

When, however, you are told to use a wood filler as the first step in finishing wood, the words recover their true meaning — a product designed to close the pores of certain kinds of wood.

NATURALLY, THESE woods are those which have large open pores, such as oak, mahogany, walnut, chestnut, elm, butternut, hickory, ash, rosewood and satinwood. They require a wood filler because most persons prefer them to have smooth surfaces, although some see them as more beautiful when the pores are left as they are.



Most wood fillers come in semi-paste form. It is important to read the label on the container to determine the type of thinner to be used.

The filler is brushed on the wood, first with the grain, then against the grain. It quickly takes on a dull appearance, which is the signal to begin rubbing the covered area, a process known professionally as "flattening."

THE RUBBING should be done with a piece of clean burlap in a modified circular motion. The movement with the grain forces the filler into the pores of the wood.

When the rubbing is completed, the excess should be wiped off very lightly with a clean, lintless cloth in the direction of the grain. If this wipe-off is neglected, the surface of the wood will become tacky. On the other hand, if it is done with too much pressure, some of the filler may be lifted from the pores.

Although there are various views on how long the filler should be permitted to set before going ahead with the finishing operation, we have found that it is best to wait two or three days.

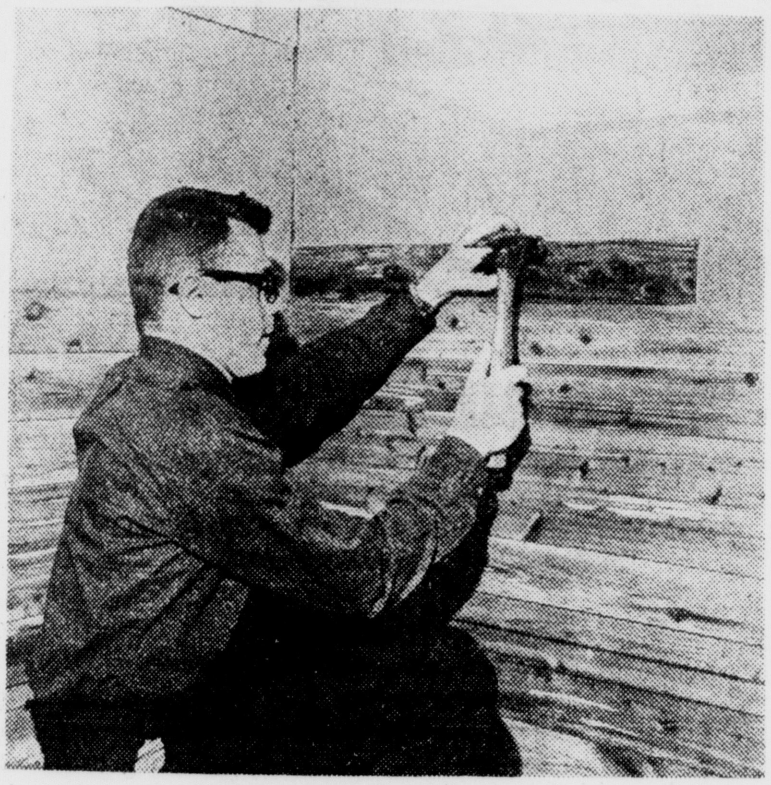
THE SURFACE should then be sanded very lightly, wiping off all sanding dust. A coat of sealer is then applied. It can be a light coat of shellac or almost any other sealer, with one exception; if the final coat is to be lacquer, use only a sealer formulated for use under lacquer.

A beginner in the use of wood filler will often make the mistake of covering too large an area at one time. The filler may then begin to harden on one part of the work before the rubbing is started, preventing the worker from obtaining the desired smooth surface.

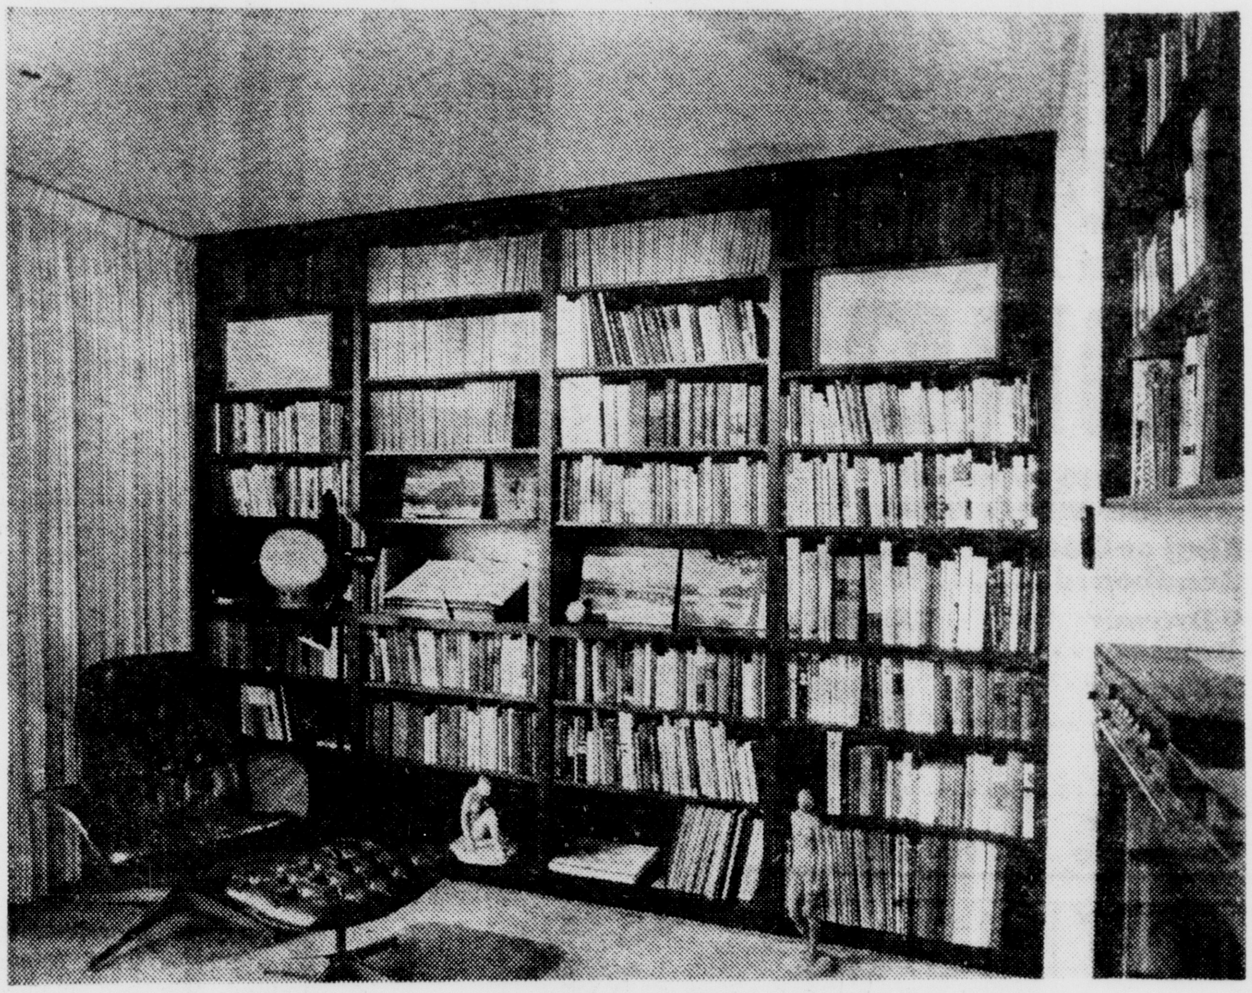
There is no reason for panic should this occur. The filler can be quickly resoftened by wiping it with a cloth soaked in the recommended thinner.

One other point the novice should know before tackling the job of wood filling: If, after applying the filler and completing the rubbing, he discovers, on close examination, that some of the pores do not appear to be filled, he should repeat the entire operation before putting on the sealer.

AN INDOOR PROJECT FOR THE WEEKEND



CONSIDERING the kind of weather we have experienced this winter, it would not be surprising if you have just about run out of weekend projects for inside the home. Consider, however, if you have not already done so, the possibility of lining an existing closet or some unused space such as an attic corner with aromatic red cedar to provide a moth-proof storage area for out-of-season clothing. It is not a difficult job, for cedar boards can be nailed directly over open framework. The lining comes in easy-to-handle pieces, each tongue-and-grooved along the edges and ends to simplify fitting. To line a closet, nail the pieces horizontally and beginning at the bottom and in a corner. Joints need not coincide with studs. But the lining should be nailed to the studs, so it is advisable that all studs be marked before starting. Remember to remove all hardware from the wall, ceiling and inside of the door before starting to apply the cedar. The first piece is placed with the grooved edge down and the grooved end in the corner. This leaves the tongue end and edge on the outside. Use 4d finishing nails and drive them through the face of each piece into the studs. Nails should be approximately three-quarters of an inch down from the top edge of the strip, with a second nail driven into each stud about three quarters of an inch from the floor. The second and all additional rows of lining are installed in the same manner except that only one nail is needed at each 16-inch interval. Be sure to tap each piece lightly down on top of the piece below so that the tongue and groove edges fit perfectly. When cutting end pieces, it is not necessary to be precise if quarter-round molding is to be used. Line the ceiling, floor and inside of the door as well as the wall to be assured of protection against moths. No finish of any kind should be applied, since this only seals in the aroma and minimizes the effectiveness of the wood. The only maintenance required is an occasional dusting.



DOUGLAS FIR one-by-12-inch boards have been used at one end of a large living room to convert two wasted walls into a useful and attractive library corner. Base cabinets at far right house music equipment and store tapes and stereo albums. Built-ins are painted black to accent a scheme of subtle neutrals.

A Library In The Living Room

Nothing decorates or warms a room as quickly as a few shelves of books — and that's one reason why many inveterate readers prefer locating their library in the living room.

Of course, readers don't consider books a part of the decor; they're simply a part of living, and a necessary ingredient to the livability of any area.

Starting from scratch in a new home, the business of designing and building the living room bookcases involves considerable market research, discussion, measuring and head-scratching. Should shelving team with the fireplace to form a single focal point, or stand elsewhere?

A GOOD IDEA that works even in a smallish space is to wrap the bookcases around one end of the room. With the addition of lounge chairs and reading lamps, the library corner then creates a room within a room.

This is cozy space that works by itself, but it also warms the formal area of the living room. Carefully chosen fabrics and colors for the lounge chairs will make even man-size models entirely compatible with the rest of the living room's furnishings.

For the bookcases themselves, few guidelines are needed. Always the best use of space is to build them wall-to-wall and floor-to-ceiling. If a heat outlet or cold air return is present, simply enclose it in the toe base.

ALL SHELVING, of course, should be adjustable. Generally the shelves themselves need be only the standard one-by-12 inch boards; they will handle everything from big art books to the unabridged dictionary. Actual dimensions of a one-by-12 are three-quarters by 11½ inches.

Good lumber species to use include Douglas fir, western hemlock, ponderosa pine and western larch. Clear, vertical grain boards offer greatest strength and best appearance.

Simplicity is the key to design. When solid lumber is used, no additional shelf edging is needed. However, the structural uprights separating sections of shelving can be edged with a flat one-by-two for accent.

Finishing is purely a matter of taste. In a room furnished with subtle, no-color neutrals, the accent of black paint can be both appropriate and dramatic. Otherwise, a touch of stain topped with several coats of tough, stain-finish plastic varnish is apt to be the most practical and pleasing.

ADVERTISED IN LIFE

ONLY LUMACOTE the "Climatized Coating" WILL GIVE YOUR HOME LASTING PROTECTION AND BEAUTY NEVER BEFORE OFFERED

Guaranteed
15 Years
AGAINST CHIPPING
FLAKING AND PEELING

LUMACOTE

the "Climatized Coating"

Applied with special heavy duty equipment under 450 lbs. of pressure per square inch to a thickness approximately 20 times that of ordinary paint, that coating actually fuses itself to the wall surface and becomes a permanent part of the wall assuring longer lasting beauty, protection and insulation.

SAVE MONEY YEAR AFTER YEAR

One high pressure application bonds directly onto any surface without mess or odor . . . insulates, waterproofs, eliminates repainting and increases your property values.

COVER ALL SURFACES TO SEAL CRACKS, HOLES AND ALL OTHER DEFECTS.

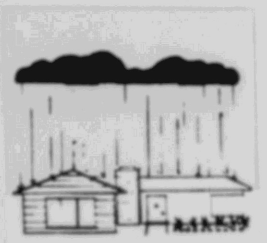
COLORS

Carefully selected by leading decorators, each color is outstanding in its ability to enhance the appearance of any building, in addition to its weathering resistant qualities. The "Climatized" Coating may be applied over any existing color or finish . . . it wil not fade or discolor and is easily washed.

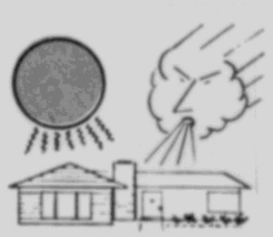
NO MONEY DOWN

terms to fit your budget



WATERPROOFS

Provides a "raincoat" for your building . . . stops constant absorption of moisture. The "Climatized" Coating will not oxidize; its waterproofing ability fully meets U.S. Government Specification SS-W-00110 (SA-FSS).

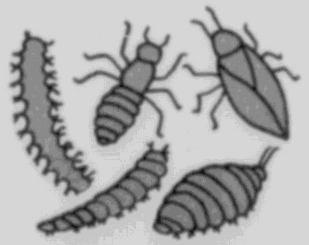


INSULATES

SAVE MONEY ON FUEL BILLS! You get better insulation than with many conventional insulating materials . . . your house will be warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

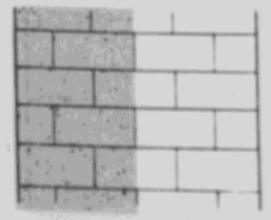
BEAUTIFIES and PROTECTS

Surface imperfections are covered by a beautiful, unblemished finish that is guaranteed to resist deterioration. Eliminate year in and year out need for costly repainting and maintenance.



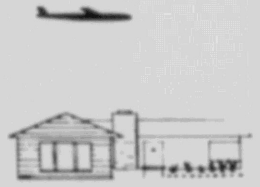
FIGHTS BUGS and FUNGUS

Formulated with TERMIKILL (an especially prepared additive), the "Climatized" Coating is designed to eliminate fungus, dry-rot, mildew, milspores, termite life and other noxious growth. Meets and exceeds U.S. Government Specification TT-P-29B.



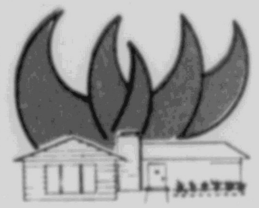
WILL NOT CHIP FLAKE or PEEL

Built-in toughness and flexibility make it possible for the "Climatized" Coating to retain its "brand-new" look for years and years . . . you'll be glad you chose this fully tested and guaranteed product!



REDUCES NOISE

Nature's most effective sound barrier is trapped, still air . . . in the "Climatized" Coating there are millions of air bubbles doing the job of absorbing sound waves from traffic, overhead aircraft, neighbors, etc.



FIRE RETARDANT

Extensive laboratory testing, plus years of experience in the field, show the "Climatized" Coating to be absolutely unable to support combustion. In many cases this ability to endure heat and flames has saved the building.

INCREASES VALUE OF PROPERTY

Protection against deterioration means your property will be worth even more as the years go by . . . you'll be relieved of worry about maintenance, paint and repair bills . . . you'll be happier with a beautiful "brand-new" appearance that is guaranteed to last.

TWO DIANA RIGGS

From Emma Peel To Bard's Helena

IAN RICHARDSON as Oberon, left, works his magic on Michael Jayston as Demetrius and Diana Rigg as Helena, in this scene from the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of the comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Shakespearean play will be telecast Sunday at 9 p.m. as a two-and-a-quarter-hour special on Channels 5 and 10.

Diana Rigg has no "best side" as far as facial features are concerned, but she has two very different personality profiles — one, classical; the other, modern, provocative, lively and, in mod British, "very gear," as exemplified by her recent television portrayal of Emma Peel in "The Avengers."

The classical actress, of a stature that makes it difficult to believe that she could be the same judo-expert detective who romped through the Emma Peel portrayal, has had wide experience with the famed Royal Shakespeare Company. It is this Diana Rigg who plays Helena in the company's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to be telecast Sunday at 9 p.m. in color on Channels 5 and 10.

MISS RIGG joined the Royal Shakespeare Company (then the Shakespeare Memorial Theater Company) at Stratford-On-Avon in 1959. One of her greatest triumphs was in her present role of Helena in the 1962 production of the Shakespearean comedy.

As a member of the company, she was seen in the New York stage production of "King Lear." American television viewers also saw her in "The Comedy of Errors," produced in England by the BBC.

Miss Rigg is neither an op-art symbol nor a grande dame of the classical theater. Her clothes tastes run to simplicity, and she has the directness of her Yorkshire upbringing, the majesty and independence of Britannia and the Statue of Liberty rolled into one, and witty sense of humor.

DIANA RIGG is Diana Rigg. The fact that she has resolutely stuck to this most untheatrical of names is an indication of her independence.

The chestnut-haired actress was born in Doncaster, Yorkshire, England, but spent part of her early life in India where her father was with the Indian government service. She and her parents then returned to Yorkshire to settle in Leeds where her father became works manager of an engineering firm.

The odds were against her becoming an actress. She thanks a school teacher, Sylvia Greenwood, for launching her on her thespian career. Miss Rigg went to a Quaker school where the headmaster strongly disapproved of anything theatrical. Mrs. Greenwood, a teacher at the school, disagreed with him, however, and her persistence eventually led to her forming a drama department — though the headmaster never did recognize it officially.

"MRS. GREENWOOD was a brilliant dramatic coach with a great capacity for engendering enthusiasm for the stage among her pupils," recalls Miss Rigg. "I owe everything to her."

Following study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, Miss Rigg succeeded in getting work in repertory, but not without difficulty. For example her height, five feet eight inches, was against her at first. Eventually it became an asset by enhancing her four-month career as a fashion model which, in turn, helped her to acquire her flair for wearing clothes.

After repertory work at Chesterfield and York, Miss Rigg went on to the Shakespeare Memorial Theater Company as a walk-on player. Her biggest break came when at two-days notice she took over the lead in "The Devils" with such success that she was signed to a five-year contract. For the next five years, she worked almost exclusively in the classics — in Shakespeare and in such productions as "Ondine," "Becket" and "The Physicists."

HER GREATEST acclaim came for her protrayal of Cordelia opposite Paul Scofield's "King Lear." She cast aside the traditional heroine portrayal to turn Cordelia into a resolute young Amazon.

Miss Rigg toured Europe and America and played before the British royal family in a special command performance of "The Comedy of Errors" at Windsor Castle. She showed every indication of devoting herself to the classical theater until she decided to seek wider fame in television and films. Nevertheless, she has returned to the Royal Shakespeare Company for further productions.

When talking about her apparently contradictory career, the actress points out that the term "classical actress" is often misconstrued. It doesn't necessarily mean heavy drama. Some of Shakespeare's greatest plays were comedies. These provide scope for the talents of a comedienne, and much of Miss Rigg's Shakespearean work has been in comedy.

Helena is one of the Bard's most enchanting heroines.

The all-Sheakespearean cast of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was directed by Peter Hall. Michael Birkett was producer of the special.

IMPROVE YOUR OWN HEARING AID
NOW—for most Hearing Aid makes and models!

NEW LOW-COST ZENITH® ACOUSTIC MODIFIER*
with exclusive sound channel,
SHARPENS YOUR WORD-UNDERSTANDING

*PATENT NO. 3,126,977

If you can hear conversation, but miss many of the words, the trouble may be with the ear-mold you're using. Replace it with Zenith's new, inexpensive Acoustic Modifier. The sound-channel makes the big difference. You have to hear it to believe it! Words are clearer, more distinct, so you understand more of every conversation you hear. Zenith's Acoustic Modifier is custom made, comfortably fitted to your ear.

Replace your old ear-mold at

Ky Leaves Paris For Saigon Amidst Hints Of Shakeup

Subdued Official Won't Talk Of Parley Or Hanoi Demands

PARIS (AP) — Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky left Paris for South Vietnam today in what appeared to be a subdued or even somber mood.

Onlookers wondered whether Ky's demeanor before boarding a commercial jet for the homeward trip reflected discouragement with the course of the Vietnam peace talks here, political difficulties in Saigon or perhaps a combination of both.

Ky is ordinarily loquacious, affable and far from averse to answering questions. But in the VIP lounge, he replied to queries mostly with monosyllables and faint shrugs.

Was he encouraged or discouraged with the peace talks? He shrugged and replied: "We do our best."

HOME FOR TET

The announced purpose of Ky's homeward trip is to report to President Nguyen Van Thieu and to spend Tet, the lunar new year holiday that begins Feb. 17, with South Vietnamese troops.

There has been speculation in Paris and Saigon that his trip may be connected with impending post-Tet changes in the South Vietnamese government.

Thieu and Ky are elected officials whose offices would not be affected by a cabinet shakeup. But changes could be connected with internal difficulties at high level in Saigon, possibly reflecting renewed differences between Thieu and Ky. They have clashed in the past.

RED DEMAND

There is one line of speculation, promoted by European Communist sources, that a Saigon shakeup is coming that will be connected with the demand of North Vietnam and its Viet Cong National Liberation Front ally for a "peace cabinet."

This would involve the replacement of Premier Tran Van Huong, whom the Front singles out as one of the "Thieu-Ky-Huong clique." The departure of Huong might not satisfy Hanoi and the Front, but the rumors say it would a step in that direction.

PRIVATE TALKS

On hand to bid bon voyage to Ky and his wife were U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Philip Habib, ranking expert of the American delegation, and Ambassador Pham Dang Lam, Saigon's chief negotiator.

Ky was asked whether there have been any private talks with what he calls "the other side" of the conference. He replied that "there have been no private talks up to now."

Asked to comment on this, Lodge said: "You know I never comment on such things publicly."

There have been persistent rumors of such private talks.

Narcotics Arrests In Sharp Rise

More than ten times as many Marin adults were arrested on narcotics charges last year than in 1966, Novato Police Chief Robert Di Grazia reported yesterday.

Di Grazia, secretary of the Marin County Centralized Police Services Council, said the county had 48 arrests in 1966, but the number soared to 514 last year.

"This is due in a large degree to the operation of the county-wide drug abuse bureau," Di Grazia said. The bureau has intensified enforcement of

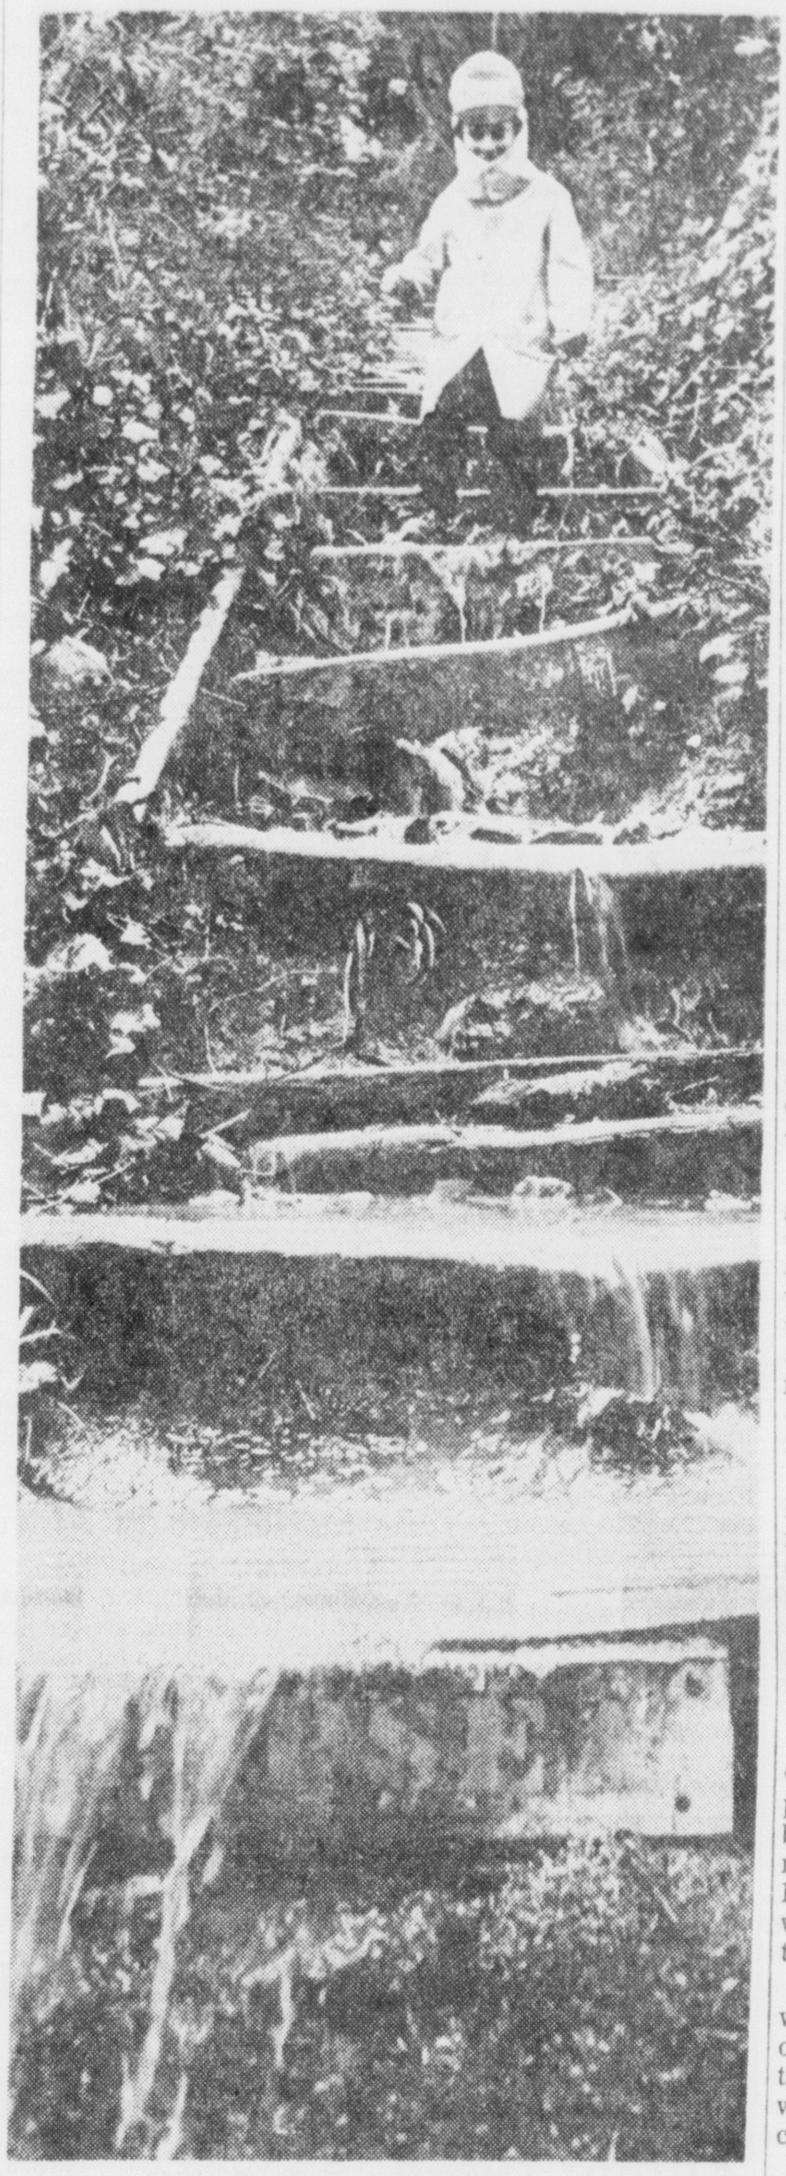
Nixon Cruises In Florida, Sets Space Scrutiny

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon took his exploration of policy and problems for his upcoming European trip onto a houseboat today and went for a cruise on Biscayne Bay.

The President decided on quick notice to take the boat ride late in the morning and left two key foreign policy advisers, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and White House Assistant Paul Kissinger, ashore.

The houseboat belongs to Nixon's old friend and confidant, C. G. (Bebe) Rebozo, who went along. The skies were mostly clear with temperatures in the mid-70s.

In an order released through the Florida White House, Nixon directed Space Advisor Lee DuBridge to examine the multi-billion-dollar space program and report on possible cost cuts. He asked DuBridge also for recommendations on setting up a committee to examine the outlook for the post-Man-on-the-Moon era with regard to scope and direction.



TRAIL OR WATERFALL?

Winter rains and a Marin Municipal Water District drainage pipe have combined to wash out the Dipsea Trail stairs between Edgewood and Hazel avenues, making it nearly impassable for David Squires, 7, of 109 Hazel Avenue, and his friend, who use the stairs to catch their school buses on Edgewood Avenue. Residents have complained to Mill Valley city officials, who sympathize but say they do not have the $15,000 necessary to fix the steps. (Independent-Journal photo)

Youth Ruled Innocent In Novatan's Shooting

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A 29-year-old San Francisco man, charged with the involuntary manslaughter of Sp/4 Harry James Smiley of Novato, was found innocent yesterday by Superior Court Judge Harry J. Neubarth.

The man, Floyd Richard, had waived a jury trial and submitted his case before Neubarth based on the police report of the Dec. 22 incident.

Smiley was killed when the gun of San Francisco police officer Norbert Gutierrez accidentally discharged during a fight between Gutierrez and Richard.

Officers testified earlier that they had stopped Smiley, Richard and a third man, Herbert J. Fraser, 26, of San Francisco, for questioning be-

Probation Officer Recruiting Plans Contradicted By Law?

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Marin County Administrator Alan Bruce's program for recruiting and hiring a new chief probation officer to replace Walter H. Busher is up against one rather major difficulty: the law provides it must be done another way.

Bruce announced yesterday how he plans to go about recruiting for the job, which will become vacant when Busher's resignation takes effect June 30 — or sooner, if Busher desires to leave before that date.

Bruce said the job will be open to both county employees and outsiders. He said recruiting may be nationwide, but "I think the emphasis should be in California." He said it would not be limited to Marin County.

Section 24001 of the California Government Code provides that, with certain exceptions, "a person is not eligible to a county or district office, unless at the time of his election or appointment he is . . . an elector of the county or district in which the duties of the office are to be exercised." The preceding section lists county offices covered by this requirement, and ends the list with "such other offices as are provided by law."

Section 575 of the Welfare and Institutions Code says: "There shall be in each county the offices of probation officer, assistant probation officer, and deputy probation officer. A probation

Oil Well Leak Stopped; Mass Cleanup To Begin

Southern Coast On Alert Still

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — An underwater oil-well finally was capped today by a massive dose of mud after it had coated more than 30 miles of beaches and harbors with gummy black slick and caused untold harm to wildlife.

Spokesmen for the federal government and Union Oil Co. of Calif. said the 21,000-gallons-a-day flow from the undersea well six miles offshore finally was controlled late last night and plugged with cement this morning. The slick for a time covered 800 square miles since it began to spread 12 days ago.

"It's under control and not leaking out," said Fritz Springman, spokesman for the well's operator. Unless the cement plug should somehow fail, he said, there should be no more leakage.

SOUTH WATCHFUL

To the south, Los Angeles and Orange County boat owners and public officials studied ways to block the slow southward progress of the oil but an Interior Department spokesman said it was unlikely the slick would get that far.

Log booms and chemicals were being used to contain the oil slick, which expands or contracts according to winds, waves and the success of the containment effort.

In Los Angeles, Gov. Ronald Reagan said that President Nixon had telephoned to say he would declare the oil leak a national disaster if it would help. Reagan did not indicate what he told Nixon.

CLEANUP PLANS

Paul De Falco Jr., regional director of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration, announced an immediate massive cleanup.

Fifty men will be assigned to each mile of contaminated beach, he said. He estimated it will take the crews about three days to properly clean sandy beaches. Union, he said, will provide the work force.

"Some of the beach is going to be impossible to clean," he said. "The only way to get the oil off

Shaw Jurors Journey, Hear Witness Tell Of Hypnosis

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The jury in Clay Shaw's conspiracy trial went to the French Quarter today to watch a prosecution witness try to pinpoint an apartment where he said he heard Clay Shaw and others discuss at a 1963 party how the President could be killed.

The trip to the French Quarter was made at the request of the defense, which held Charles I. Spiesel, 50, a New York City accountant, under cross-examination during much of the morning.

Spiesel testified again today about his $16 million damage suit against a psychiatrist and the City of New York, in which he claimed he was frequently hypnotized against his will and held under hypnotic illusion.

He said yesterday that in June 1963 he met David W. Ferrie in a French Quarter bar and was taken to a party where Ferrie introduced the host as Shaw. The conversation at the party turned to President John F. Kennedy, Spiesel said, with many of the men present saying the President ought to be killed.

At one point, he said, Shaw asked Ferrie—a former airline pilot—if an assassin could be rescued from dire consequences by being flown out of the country.

"Ferrie hemmed and hawed and said, 'yes,' " Spiesel said.

Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's charge against Shaw said he conspired with Lee Harvey Oswald, Ferrie and others to kill Kennedy. Ferrie and Oswald are dead.

Spiesel was one of a series of prosecution witnesses called in an attack on the defense contention, that Shaw never laid eyes on Oswald or Ferrie.

Defense attorney F. Irvin Dymond questioned him about a $16 million damage suit in which he claimed he was hypnotized, tortured mentally and forced to give up his practice as a tax accountant by New York City police.

Q. How many other people have hypnotized you?

A. Oh, it would be hard to say. . . . Oh, possibly 50 or 60.

Q. All of these without consent?

A. Without my consent.

Antiwar Airman Found Guilty, Sentence Due

BULLETIN

Airman Michael R. Locks was sentenced this afternoon to one year of hard labor, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, reduction in rank to airman basic and a bad conduct discharge by a seven-man court which deliberated nearly two hours.

Airman Michael R. Locks was convicted at a Hamilton Air Force Base court-martial yesterday for taking part in uniform in a San Francisco antiwar demonstration in October.

His sentence, which could be as much as four years in federal prison, was expected today.

The 25-year-old airman told the court after his conviction he would not do it again if he had the choice. He took the stand for the second time after the court's decision to open defense testimony aimed at lightening his sentence.

Speaking in a barely audible voice, Locks told the court, "I didn't think I was disgracing my uniform or I wouldn't have done it." He also said if he was assigned to training for Southeast Asia duty, he would not refuse to participate.

The seven-officer court took 22 minutes to find Locks guilty of two counts of wearing his uniform in the Oct. 12 demonstration and at a related television interview the night before.

The airman, who once volunteered for medical duty in Vietnam because he thought such service was "the only way I could support the military," showed no change in expression when he and his two military attorneys faced the court for the verdict. Locks' mother, in the audience, broke into tears when the verdict was announced. His father and sister remained expressionless.

During a recess after the verdict, Locks smiled and shrugged slightly to friends in the audience, then smoked nervously as his four civilian and military attorneys prepared his pre-sentence defense.

Two sergeants and a former sergeant from Locks' unit, the 349th Military Airlift Wing, testified that Locks was an outstanding military man and all three said they would still like to have him in their unit.

All three, who were Locks' former supervisors, said they did not think he should be sent to jail. M/Sgt. William J.

Reagan Hints Strongly He'll Ask Re-Election

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan is wondering if his two remaining years in office are sufficient to finish all he would like to accomplish.

He told a California Newspaper Publishers Association banquet last night that "this is not the right time" to announce his candidacy for reelection.

But he left the door more than slightly ajar.

"I'm just amateur enough not to leave a job half finished," Reagan said. "That leaves a lot to finish in the next two years."

His remarks came during a question and answer session with publishers, who with their wives numbered more than 900.

The governor continued his hard line against campus unrest, a theme he hammered upon earlier in the day in Los Angeles.

He said he declared a state of emergency at the University of California at Berkeley "to protect the rights of those who want to teach and those who want to learn."

Regarding campus unrest, the governor said: "I can tell you, so help me God, this is going to stop."

BACKS HAYAKAWA

He also said he supported action by Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, acting president of San Francisco State College, in offering striking teachers their jobs back.

Reagan noted that members of the striking American Federation of Teachers had been docked their pay and that as "first offenders" can be given their jobs back "on the basis they get back into the classroom and off the picket lines."

Earlier, in Los Angeles, Reagan said he was willing to extend the "state of extreme emergency" now in effect at Berkeley to all other state university and college campuses if so needed.

He called it the "only answer to revolutionaries . . . who want to change the social order by violence instead of the ballot box."

The governor also reaffirmed his support of capital punishment because "it is a deterrent."

"I don't know of anything I've given more thought to," he said. "I believe we have to have it until it's proven differently."

HITS BOYCOTT

Reagan attacked what he called the "distressing grape boycott" in support of a long grape pickers strike against growers in the Delano area and called for federal legislation.

"We need legislation to cover the area of collective bargaining," said Reagan, so that workers "are free from reprisal" and the rights of growers are protected.

Reagan, who has opposed state withholding tax, said he would not "have a closed mind" to a state tax reform package which included withholding tax.

"But, I can't foresee anything that will change my mind about reservations about it," he added.

The governor called for the publishers to assist him in a statewide campaign against illegal drug use, calling it "a deliberate assault on our youth."

He urged publishers to start a strong educational program on the dangers of narcotics addiction.

"I pledge you every support of the state government in the fight," Reagan added.

Reagan Loses Majority With Veneman Departure

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan is without a working majority of Republicans in both the Assembly and Senate today and faces the chance of losing the Assembly back to the Democrats.

Republican Assemblyman John G. Veneman of Modesto will leave soon to become President Nixon't undersecretary of health, education and welfare.

That leaves the GOP with a 40-39 edge in the 80-member Assembly, with 41 votes needed to pass most bills. A special election to fill the Veneman vacancy, to be called by Reagan, can't be held for at least six weeks.

With Reagan's campaign help, Republicans won a 41-39 majority in the Nov. 8 election and took over organization of the Assembly and its key committees when the 1969 session opened in January.

A Reagan administration spokesman said today he thought most of Reagan's Creative Society bills could get through the Assembly even if Democrats captured Veneman's seat. Former Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, earlier said he would not try to force a reorganization of the Assembly in the event of a 40-40 deadlock.

"I don't think it will make that much difference," said the official, who asked not to be quoted by name.

But he said there would be "a whole new ball game" should Democrats win a second potential Assembly seat.

Two Republican assemblymen, Newton Russell of Tujunga and Patrick D. McGee of Van Nuys, have announced plans to run for the U.S. House seat vacated when Reagan appointed former Rep. Ed Reinecke as lieutenant governor.

Should one of them win Reinecke's seat, Reagan would have to call another special election to fill an Assembly vacancy.

POVERTY WAR NOT DEAD, FINCH SAYS

New HEW Chief Warns 'Great Society' Operations May Be Shuffled Around

WASHINGTON (AP) — Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch has indicated the Nixon administration will keep the embattled Office of Economic Opportunity instead of trying to junk it as many Democrats fear.

Finch, however, made no promise in a broad ranging news conference yesterday and indicated there will be an attempt to change the name of some programs or shift them to other agencies.

Finch's comments were made in advance of a meeting of the President's new Urban Affairs Council, called today specifically to hear the health, education and welfare secretary's recommendations on the future of OEO.

"The sense of my colleagues on the council," Finch said, "is not for a total dismantling of OEO."

The secretary also made a reference to a "feeling" on Capitol Hill against dismantling the agency that spearheaded Lyndon Johnson's war on poverty.

Many Democratic members of Congress have warned the administration it faces a stiff fight if it tries to tamper too much the Great Society's chief instrument.

Finch said he hoped his recommendations would be made public so "Congress can fight over them."

Just when this would be was uncertain with Congress in a 10-day recess and many members out of town. It was considered unlikely that the administration would make any recommendations public without first informing key committee chairmen which sources say it has not done yet.

Certain programs of the OEO came in for severe congressional criticism after hearings last year disclosed that two Chicago street gangs had been the recipients of a $1 million grant in an experimental project.

Finch said most of the recommendations would generally follow President Nixon's task force on welfare problems made last December.

Under these recommendations, the preschool education program Head Start would be "spun off" to existing departments but Finch said he was not prepared to say which department.

This is one long-rumored change in particular that some congressmen have vowed to oppose.

No Acquittal Expected In Sirhan Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conviction of manslaughter is the best the defense can expect for Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, says his chief attorney, Grant B. Cooper.

Cooper was questioning a prospective alternate juror yesterday when he remarked that a defense claim of diminished capacity on Sirhan's part "could not result in a verdict of not guilty."

Questioned by newsmen after court, Cooper said the only possible verdicts are first or second-degree murder or manslaughter.

In California, first-degree murder carries a penalty of life imprisonment or death at discretion of the jury. Second-degree murder calls for five years to life; manslaughter one to 15 years.

Sirhan, 24, a Jordanian who came to this country as a boy, is on trial charged with murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy last June. The defense, by its questioning of jurors, has indicated several times it plans to base its case on diminished capacity, a defense reinforced in California by several decisions since 1949 but little known outside the state. The contention holds that an otherwise sane person may have diminished responsibility for a violent act because of certain influences.

While the jury of eight men and four women was sworn in this week, six alternate jurors remain to be picked. Yesterday was another day of questioning and excusing prospects—10 of them, altogether. Five persons have been tentatively seated. Testimony will not start until the alternates are sworn in.

Sirhan smiled broadly at his mother, Mary, and brother, Munir, 21, when he saw them seated in a back row of the courtroom. At other times he seemed alternately solemn and in high spirits.

Ex-Freedom Rider To Be Finch's Aide?

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Farmer, former national director of the Congress of Racial Equality and a supporter of Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey for president, is slated for a key post in the Nixon administration.

Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch disclosed yesterday that he plans to name Farmer, 49, to a post with far-reaching responsibilities in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He did not specify the position.

Farmer is the first Negro named to a major post in the Nixon administration. Finch himself has said other prominent Negroes have turned down offers because they feared criticism.

Farmer resigned three years ago as head of CORE, a civil rights group that was in the vanguard of the struggle for Negro equality in the South during the early 1960s. In 1961 he led the Freedom Rides, which sometimes received violent receptions from Southern whites.

Last year he ran for Congress on the Republican-Liberal ticket in the heavily Negro Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn, N.Y. He lost to Mrs. Shirley Chisholm, a Democrat and the first black woman ever elected to Congress.

Author Cited In Ray Case

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle cited author William Bradford Huie for contempt of court yesterday, then rebuked Huie during a hearing on motions to permit photos and further interviews in the James Earl Ray case.

Battle will hear the March 3 trial of Ray, charged with murdering Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The judge has issued stringent orders prohibiting pretrial publicity.

Huie, Ray's biographer and the recipient of a 20,000-word manuscript written by Ray in jail, was arrested as he emerged from an appearance before the Shelby County grand jury in which he is reported to have discussed the Ray papers.

He posted $1,000 cash bond pending a contempt trial.

Battle said he had asked Huie not to publish a series of stories in Look magazine prior to the trial. He pointed out that two stories ran last fall when Ray was first scheduled for trial and a third is about to run. He said he believes all violate the order limiting pretrial discussion of the case. Huie wrote that Ray was part of a conspiracy.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Soldiers Drown

BISSAU, Portuguese Guinea (AP) — Military authorities reported today 47 Portuguese soldiers drowned when their raft sank while crossing a river. The communique did not say when the disaster occurred.

The raft sank while crossing the River Corubal.

Panthers In Court

SAN FRANCISCO — (UPI) — Black Panther George M. Murray, pivotal figure in the dispute at San Francisco State, must appear in court Valentine's Day for possible revocation of his probation.

Municipal Judge Albert Axelrod ruled yesterday in a tense courtroom packed with Murray's supporters that he and Jack Alexis, also a black student leader in the strike, were still on probation when arrested last month in connection with campus disturbances.

He ordered the two men to return Feb. 14 to show cause why the probation should not be revoked.

He allowed the two men to remain at liberty until their next hearing.

Murray also faces a charge of gun possession in San Mateo County. Arraignment on that charge was postponed last Monday by a Redwood City municipal court judge because of yesterday's hearing.

Hijack Case Out

HONOLULU (UPI) — A federal judge yesterday dismissed charges against Archie E. Evans, Portland, Ore., who was arrested in connection with an alleged hijacking threat aboard a United Airlines jetliner over the Pacific.

Judge Martin Pence cleared Evans of an FBI charge that he "imparted false information regarding piracy of an aircraft."

U.S. Attorney Yoshimi Hayashi, who recommended to Pence that Evans be cleared, said the hijacking report was the result of a "stupid joke."

McNamara In Africa

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Robert S. McNamara, president of the World Bank, arrived here today to conclude a financial aid agreement with Senegal. He is due to visit the Ivory Coast and the Congo Democratic Republic next week.

Fort Ord Bomb

FORD ORD (AP) — A bomb exploded in the post theater last night, injuring six people, authorities said.

Witnesses said they heard a tremendous boom but saw no fire when the bomb went off under a seat.

Sitting in the seat was Pvt. Curtis Chiang, 24, of Hawaii, who was taken to the post hospital with a severe foot injury.

Three other soldiers, all friends of Chiang in advanced infantry training, were slightly injured, as was the wife of a soldier and her 13-year-old daughter. All were treated for minor cuts and released.

Officers said the bomb was apparently made of pipe about 10 inches long and had a timing device.

The theater was crowded with 400 person. There was no panic.

Khan Re-Elected

KARACHI (AP) — President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan was re-elected head of his ruling Muslim League party at a meeting in Dacca without opposition, Associated Press of Pakistan said today.

Street demonstrations against the president continued yesterday in Dacca and Lahore, where former Foreign Minister Zulkifar Ali Bhutto threatened to starve himself unless the president lifts the state of emergency in Pakistan under which Bhutto was jailed Nov. 13.

Second Look At SST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe hopes to have by mid-March recommendations for President Nixon on the future of the controversial, multimillion dollar supersonic airliner program.

The government already has invested more than $500 million in developing the airliner. But former President Lyndon B. Johnson's budget for fiscal 1970 omitted any request for SST funds, leaving any decision to the Nixon administration.

Boycott Spreads

OSLO (UPI) — Grapes from California will not be unloaded in Norwegian ports, the Norwegian Transport Workers Union announced today.

Pot Party Raided

NEW YORK (AP) — Police raiders broke up what they described as a mass "pot party" at a private home in Queens early today. They seized 108 young people, including 68 between the ages of 10 and 15, and confiscated a quantity of weapons.

Moscow Warned

BOLOGNA, Italy (UPI) — Italian Communist leader Luigi Longo opened his party's 12th congress today with a strong denunciation of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia and warned Moscow against overthrowing the Czech leadership.

A four-man delegation by Central Commitee Secretary Boris N. Ponomarev and representatives of 41 other Communist parties from throughout the world also heard the 68-year-old secretary of the West's largest Communist party call for communism's independence of the Kremlin in a speech that brought cheers from the congress' 900 Italian delegates.

Gun Ring Smashed

CONCORD (UPI) — Police today had recovered 170 stolen guns worth $30,000.

Acting on a tip, 18 law officers yesterday raided a Concord gas station and arrested two men and a juvenile girl.

Police said the weapons were part of 500 firearms stolen Sunday from the Traders Sporting Goods Store in San Leandro.

The two men, John F. Haley, 20, Concord, and Richard S. Bouschey, 24, Oakland, were charged with possession of stolen property.

Brazil Crackdown

RIO DE JANIERO (AP) — President Arthur da Costa e Silva has tightened his grip on Brazil, recessing legislatures of five states indefinitely and purging 33 legislators.

Warplane Crashes

KANASAWA, Japan (AP) — A Japanese air force F104J jet fighter crashed today in a densely populated area near this western Japanese city, starting a fire that killed four persons and restroyed 14 homes.

Police Duck Snowballs After Raid On Campus Pornography Forum

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Angry students pelted police with snowballs at the University of Notre Dame yesterday after plainclothes officers confiscated a film being shown as part of a conference on pornography and censorhip.

Student sponsors canceled the six-day conference which was to have ended Monday with a discussion of the question: "Has this entire conference changed your ideas on pornography and censorship?"

Sheriff's officers led by Prosecutor William E. Voor Jr. rushed into Nieuwland Science Hall where about 200 students were waiting to watch a film titled "Kodak Ghost Poem."

Cathy Cecil said police seized the film as she was attempting to hide it under her dress. Miss Cecil, who said she was dragged down stairs by police, is a student at St. Mary's College, adjacent to the 7,200-student all-male Notre Dame. Both are Roman Catholic schools.

Students said that during scuffling in a hall a riot-control chemical was sprayed.

Voor said there were no arrests and no charges filed. He said police were on the campus at the request of the university.

After police left, about 300 students gathered for a march downtown to the courthouse where the film was taken. However, they disbanded after agreeing to meet today to plan further action.

A group of faculty members signed a statement saying, "The academic freedom of the university has been violated by the intrusion of the local police on campus.

"We endorse our students' efforts to study the issues of censorship and art, and we deplore the attempt of local police to censor the subjects we investigate in our academic conferences."

F. Richard Rembusch, Student Union president, said the rest of the conference was halted "in an effort to restore peace to the Notre Dame community." He said there was no pressure from the university.

On Thursday night, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, banned films planned for the conference along with an art show of nude paintings and sculptures.

Notre Dame "has no intention of being used for the showing of hard-core pornography although we certainly have no objection to a serious discussion of pornography, which is a great problem in our day," Father Hesburgh said.

He said students broke a pledge not to show a film declared pornographic by courts of two states. He said phone calls were received from two girls who protested the first showing of films.

Father Hesburgh could not be reached for comment last night.

John Mroz, of Osterville, Mass., conference leader, said the art materials were shipped back to New York yesterday. He added, "We made a mistake in not previewing the films."

Fleet Keeps Up Pressure In Bombing

SAIGON (AP)—The U.S. Seventh Fleet is launching 100 to 125 planes daily to attack the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos despite the shortage of one carrier, American military sources said today.

Four instead of the usual five carriers operate in the waters off South Vietnam, they reported, because the nuclear-powered Enterprise was ravaged by explosions and fire in a bombing training exercise 75 miles from Pearl Harbor Jan. 14.

Despite the fact the Enterprise was laid up for at least three months of repairs, the Constellation was allowed to return to the United States last month. The Enterprise was to replace the Constellation.

"Even with less carriers, we are maintaining the intensity of our strikes over Laos by flying harder and taking fewer breaks from the war," said Vice Adm. William F. Pringle, Seventh Fleet commander.

His mention of Laos by name was unusual. The U.S Command in Saigon never comments on operations against the Ho Chi Minh trail, North Vietnam's lifeline through Laos. This is because Laos, under terms of the 1962 Geneva agreement, is officially neutral.

Terror and attempted sabotage were main developments in the absence of any large scale fighting in South Vietnam yesterday. Thirty-five Vietnamese civilians were killed and 53 were wounded in 11 incidents reported by government spokesmen.

Two of the major incidents were in central Vietnam. A bus hit a mine, killing 14 and wounding 17. An explosive went off in a village market place, leaving eight dead and 30 wounded.

LOCKS

Nichols Jr., the 349th's supply supervisor, told the court, "I don't feel it (jail) would be of any advantage to either him or the United States."

The defense also presented the court with eight letters attesting to Locks' character. One, from a Santa Clara probation officer who is a friend of the airman's family, recommended against imprisonment. Another, from his former high school counselor in San Jose, described him as an outstanding student, a former student body president, a letterman in football, basketball, baseball and swimming and former head of the California Scholarship Association.

The prosecution called Locks' commanding and executive officers to testify in favor of a stiff sentence. The 349th was called to active duty at Hamilton during the Pueblo crisis in January of 1968 and is due to be released in June.

Locks, who formerly lived in San Anselmo but now lives in Richmond, testified for 30 minutes in his own defense before the verdict yesterday morning but was not allowed to challenge the constitutionality of the Air Force order.

His attorneys had repeatedly sought to argue that the order, issued Oct. 10, two days before the demonstration, was a violation of the First Amendment's guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly. Col. John H. Leonard, the presiding officer, ruled, however, that the order was constitutional.

Before Leonard cut him off, Locks told the court he had knowingly violated the order because "I felt to my mind that this regulation was not constitutional."

He also said he did not think the television interview touting the next day's demonstration by "GI's for Peace" was in violation of the order or he would not have appeared on it.

The longest drought in Texas' history started in 1950 and continued until 1957.

She has screeched her way through "Rosemary's Baby," "Homicidal" and other horror movies and has appeared in the Rifleman and the Andy Griffith television shows and numerous commercials.

Ex-newspaperman Paul Speegle, a straw hat band from San Francisco's Red Garter, the La Rocca's vocal group, the Jimmy Diamond orchestra and the Pacific Jazz Band will also perform at the dinner.

Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Donald Bull at 11 Inman Avenue, Kentfield.

officer shall be appointed in every county."

The probation officer is thus made a county officer "provided by law" and there have been at least two court rulings holding him to be so. And he is not among the officers exempted from the residence requirement in Section 24001 of the Government Code.

This residence requirement prevented the Superior Court of the County of San Francisco from hiring Philip Green of Seattle as chief probation officer in 1951, after he had been selected for the job. beenselected for the job.

Bruce went on to say that after applications have been received, an examining board, including disinterested persons from outside the county, would screen and check the applicants. It would submit to the county administrator a list of the top qualified applicants, and from this list he would recommend one or more to the county board of supervisors.

The supervisors, as the appointing authority, will make the final choice, Bruce concluded.

However, the same Section 575 of the Welfare and Institutions Code which makes the probation officer an "officer provided by law" goes on to say:

"Probation officers in any county shall be nominated by the juvenile justice commission or regional juvenile justice commission of such county in such manner as the judge of the juvenile court in that county shall direct, and shall then be appointed by such judge."

There is not a word about an examining board, the county administrator or the board of supervisors entering into the process anywhere.

The juvenile justice commission is composed of Rex T. Silvernale, chairman; John L. Rockwell, Stanley R. Friese, Mrs. Malcolm Finley, Dr. William H. Pemberton, Frank Mulland, Lanny Berry, and John Donovan. They comprise the screening committee, according to the state law.

The juvenile court judge is Samuel W. Gardiner. He makes the appointment, according to state law.

Viet Valor Earns Two Officers Medals

Two Army officers now stationed at Fort Baker have been decorated for valorous actions during recent combat tours in Vietnam.

Maj. Charles L. Landers Jr. received a second oak leaf cluster to the Bronze Star Medal for heroic action while directing an air strike against the enemy while under machinegun and rocket fire.

Capt. Leland W. Svicarovich was awarded the Bronze Star for "outstandingly meritorious" service in combat.

SERVING — Airman 1/c George Kokalis, son of Mrs. Katherine Pantazes, of 112 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, is now serving as a construction equipment operator at Cam Rahn Bay, Vietnam.

DELEGATE — Mrs. Mary Ann Newcomb, of Bolinas, director of the Marin Child Development Center and the atypical infant development program, will be a delegate to the 12th annual Conference on Research and Teaching of Infant Development at the Merrill-Palmer Institute in Detroit Feb. 13-15.

SERVING—Quartermaster 3/c Russell G. Frazer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack G. Frazer of 308 Sunset Parkway, Novato, is serving aboard the guided missile destroyer Waddell.

GRADUATED — Harry Wolfe Humphreys, of 11 Greenfield Avenue, San Rafael, has been granted a Master of Science degree in dentistry at the St. Louis University.

SHAW

lowed down here by people from the detective agencies.

Q. I asked if you had been hypnotized in New Orleans?

A. The point is, if I say yes, you're going to want to know who they are.

Q. If I promise not to ask who they are, will you say yes or no?

A. Yes, they have.

As Spiesel was questioned about his hypnotic encounters with hypnosis, Perry Raymond Russo was waiting outside the courtroom as the next state witness scheduled.

Russo, 26, is a key witness in Garrison's case. He told a preliminary hearing that, with his memory refreshed by a hypnotist, he remembered hearing Shaw, Ferrie and Oswald conspire to kill Kennedy.

Vernon Bundy, Jr., 30, a former narcotics addict, preceded Spiesel to the stand. He testified he saw Shaw meet Oswald in the summer of 1963, confer with him and give him money at the Lake Pontchartrain seawall.

Bundy said he had gone there to prepare his hypodermic needle, inject two capsules of heroin and "goof off." He said he remembered both men, and lat-remembered both men, and iater identified them from photo-might be policemen and watched them closely as they stood nearby.

Bundy then asked if he could stage a little demonstration to illustrate how he came to be convinced that Shaw was the man he saw at the seawall. "It ain't fixed," he said.

"Sure, go ahead," said Dymond.

Bundy left the witness chair and had Shaw walk the middle aisle of the crowded courtroom to the front entrance. Bundy then sat down in a chair at the defense table.

"Now, here I am on the seawall," he said. "I've got the sack with my outfit (needle) between my knees. Now, will the gentleman walk toward me?"

Shaw, looking puzzled and irritated, walked past Bundy's chair. The 6-foot-4 defendant has a slight limp—the result, he said, of a back injury received in World War II.

"Everybody see this, now," said Bundy, pointing at Shaw's feet. "This is the foot that he kicks out when he walks," said Bundy. Before Bundy left the stand, Dymond asked: "You were not completely positive the man you saw was Shaw until you saw the foot. Is that right?"

"I wasn't completely sure," Bundy replied.

narcotics laws, the chief said, so the statistics do not necessarily point to an increase in drug use.

Arrests last year by cities were: Belvedere, 13; Corte Madera, 6; Fairfax, 41; Larkspur, 15; Mill Valley, 20; Novato, 54; San Anselmo, 22; San Rafael, 92; Sausalito, 66, and Tiburon, 19. The unincorporated area of the county led with 166 arrests.

The bureau does not supplant local police authority, but supplements the local law enforcement agencies.

The bureau operates under the administration of the five-member police services council.

Driver's Truck Sabotage Target

Five tires were punctured and a firebomb placed under the gas tank of an oil rig belonging to a Petaluma nam who crossed a Standard Oil picket line in Richmond yesterday, police reported.

Police said Ray Anderson of 812 Middlefield Drive was doing private hauling in a truck owned by C and A Trucking of Petaluma, and apparently was followed back to his home by striking oil workers. The incidents occurred there.

The fire bomb burned itself out without exploding, police said.

Sharp Temblor Hits North Coast

EUREKA (UPI) — A sharp rolling earthquake shook up a large part of Humboldt County in Northern California yesterday afternoon, but did no damage.

The quake registered 4.5 on one seismographic station's equipment and 6 on another.

The tremor lasted 10 to 15 seconds and was felt more sharply along the coast than inland.

Young Fire Victim Reported Recovering

Michael Lee, 13, of 18 Nina Drive, Novato, seriously burned in a fire Wednesday, was reported in satisfactory condition and improving today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco.

Michael was pouring gasoline on a fire in the fireplace of his home when it flashed back at him. His brother, Patrick, 15, rolled him in a blanket to extinguish the flames.

Victim Of Overdose In Good Condition

A 34-year-old Fairfax woman, who apparently took an overdose of pills, was reported in good condition today, but still under observation, in Marin General Hospital.

Georgette Ruth Oliver of 197 Piper Court took the pills, reported police, after an automobile accident on Wednesday in San Rafael.

Youngster Rescued From Steep Hillside

An ambitious 8-year-old hill climber took on a slope behind 1908 Fourth Street yesterday and ended up being rescued by the San Rafael Fire Department.

Firemen said a passerby noticed the child, Wayne D. Goldstine of 2 Neame Avenue, San Rafael, stranded on a cliff. He couldn't go any higher and he couldn't get back down, firemen said. He was not hurt.

YOUTH

cause they suspected that a sale of marijuana was taking place.

The police report, which was the basis of the innocent verdict, gave this account of the incident:

Gutierrez and another officer were cruising in the Fillmore District of San Francisco when they saw Smiley talking to Fraser and Richard. After the policemen stopped the trio, Richard reached quickly into his sleeve as if he had a weapon there.

Gutierrez started grappling with him with his left hand, while with his right he went for his gun. But Richard grabbed the gun hand.

While Gutierrez was struggling to free it, the gun discharged and Smiley fell, mortally wounded.

Smiley, who had been wounded in Vietnam, was on Christmas leave from Fort Ord, visiting his parents, Harry and Irene Smiley of Novato.

Municipal Court Judge Leo Friedman earlier dismissed charges of possession of marijuana and resisting arrest against Richard and Fraser, ruling that the police had no probable cause to stop and question the three men.

Mrs. Smiley, the slain youth's mother, has filed suit for $500,000 against the City of San Francisco, plus Gutierrez and B. John McKay, both members of the controversial Tactical Squad.

She accused both officers of negligently using their firearms. "We lost everything when we lost our son. I have been under medical care since," she said.

Mrs. Smiley said her son was awarded two Purple Hearts for wounds suffered while fighting in Vietnam and was involved in more than 25 combat operations against the enemy.

The suit is pending in Superior Court of San Francisco.

these rocks is to steam clean them."

"It was awful," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, after an aerial inspection yesterday. Muskie is chairman of a Senate subcommittee on air and water pollution holding hearings into the rupture. (See photo, page 2.)

Unofficial estimates placed damage to beaches, harbors and boats at tens of millions of dollars. The Coast Guard said at least 191 birds, gummy with oil, had died.

All other drilling operations in the blackened Santa Barbara channel were ordered halted by the federal government yesterday.

With calming winds, little new oil flowed onto the white sandy beaches yesterday and only light amounts oozed into small boat harbors.

The Ventura marina and Santa Barbara harbor remained black and smelly, the heaviest concentration of oil six miles offshore of Santa Barbara, around the drilling platform where Union Oil workmen labored to seal the well.

Deadly Vaccines Still Not Found

San Rafael police today had no clues to the whereabouts of several vials of deadly plague and other vaccines stolen Thursday from the Permanente Clinic at 1930 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

Vials containing 18 cubic centimeters of the plague, 12 cubic centimeters of typhus, 22 cubic centimeters of tetanus and four cubic centimeters of diphtheria vaccines were taken from a refrigerator in the clinic, police said.

Marin County health officials said that since the virus is dead there is no danger of an epidemic and an ill person could not spread the disease. However, they warned that the vaccine could cause a painful death to anyone who injected it directly into the bloodstream but it would have little effect if swallowed.

OBITUARIES

Bandleader Anson Weeks Dies

SACRAMENTO (AP) — In the big dance band era, "Dancin' with Anson" was a byword.

The Anson Weeks band played at most of the country's biggest ballrooms and hotels, from the Waldorf Astoria in New York to the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles.

Among band alumni who went on to fame on their own were Bob Crosby, Xavier Cugat, Tony Martin and George Liberace.

Weeks, a native of Oakland, died yesterday. He had been in failing health in recent years but at 72 continued to lead his band as late as last week at the Sacramento Inn.

Death was attributed to emphysema, from which he had suffered for 15 years.

His band's first appearance was in Sacramento in 1923. A 1926 engagement at the Hotel Mark Hopkins in San Francisco pushed the band into the front ranks.

Survivors include the widow, Viola, and five children. Funeral services will be Monday in San Francisco.

LOUIS CASSO

Private funeral for Louis Matthew Caso of Greenbrae has been held.

Caso, 40, a newspaper advertising salesman, died at his residence at 373 Via Casitas Thursday. He is survived by his wife, Ruth.

R. C. KOLBY

Reinhard C. Kolby, 72, of 1132 East Court, Novato, died today at a local convalescent hospital after a long illness.

Kolby, a retired San Francisco fireman, had lived in Novato 13 years. Previously he lived in Sebastopol.

Survivors are his wife, Beatrice Kolby; a son, Raymond Kolby of Petaluma, and a daughter, Arleen Kolby of San Marin.

Funeral will be at 10 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Chapel of Marin, Novato. Burial will be private.

WILLIS C. LOWE

Funeral for Willis C. Lowe, father of Mrs. Patricia M. Gibbs of San Anselmo, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at the Memorial Chapels of Carew and English, Masonic and Golden Gate avenues, San Francisco.

Burial will be in Holy Cross Cemetery, Colma.

Lowe, who lived in San Rafael 60 years ago, died after a long illness in a San Francisco hospital Wednesday. He was an architect, working mainly in Oakland. He also was chief airport engineer for Pan American Airways' Orient-Africa division for several years.

A native of San Francisco, he was a Spanish-American War veteran, a member of the Society of American Military Engineers, the De Young Museum Society and Elks.

He is also survived by his wife, Viola; another daughter, Mrs. Louise Jorgensen, and two brothers, Silas and Thomas Lowe, a sister, Mrs. Myra Lippert, and two grandchildren.

JULIA NELSON

Funeral for Julia Nelson, 86, of Olema, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael. Inurnment will follow.

She died Thursday in a Marin convalescent home after a long illness. A native of England, Mrs. Nelson lived in Marin County for 55 years.

With her husband, the late Ed Nelson, Mrs. Nelson operated the Nelson Hotel in Olema until the 1940s, when she sold the business.

No immediate relatives survive.

Deputies List Seven Thefts In Rural Area

Seven burglaries were reported to the Marin County Sheriff's office yesterday.

Elma R. Lappert of 4810 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, told deputies that burglars took a transistor radio from her home between 8 a.m. and 5:40 p.m. Wednesday.

Checks valued at $470, $50 in cash and a Master Charge card were taken from the car of Mariella Sparks, 1431 Petaluma Hill Road, Santa Rosa, at 6:50 p.m. Thursday while it was parked in front of 981 Drake Avenue, Marin City.

Hugh Owens of 3000 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, said a .22-caliber rifle and a portable electric typewriter, valued at $275, were taken from his home between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

A plug-in telephone, a piggy bank and four children's games were taken from the home of Linda Scherf, 755 Bay Road, Tamalpais Valley, between 2 and 5 p.m. Jan. 31.

Two portable television sets, an adding machine and a stereo turntable, amplifier and two speakers were stolen from the residence of Mrs. E. W. Bullard, 77 Wolfe Grade, Kentfield, between 6 a.m. and 4:25 p.m. Thursday.

Nancy Downey of 622 Goodhill Road, Kent Woodlands, said burglars took a tape recorder and child's safe bank from her home between 2 and 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

An outboard motor, valued at $416, was taken from a showroom at the Golden Hinde Boatel in Inverness between 6 and 7 p.m. Thursday.

In another theft, Karen E. Greenwalt of 79 Barbaree Way, Tiburon, told deputies that someone took the window from the left door of her 1959 MG roadster between 6 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. Thursday while it was parked at 37 Rancheria Road, Kent Woodlands.

Kidnap-Rob Hearing Continued To Monday

Preliminary hearing for Daniel Thomas Stathos of Pacifica and Kenneth Lee Harnal, both 22, accused of kidnapping and robbing restaurant owner Luciano A. Sabella Nov. 24, was continued yesterday to 2 p.m. Monday.

Dist. Atty. Bruce A. Bales declined to state what occurred during proceedings yesterday after Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. barred the public and press from the courtroom on the request of the defendants.

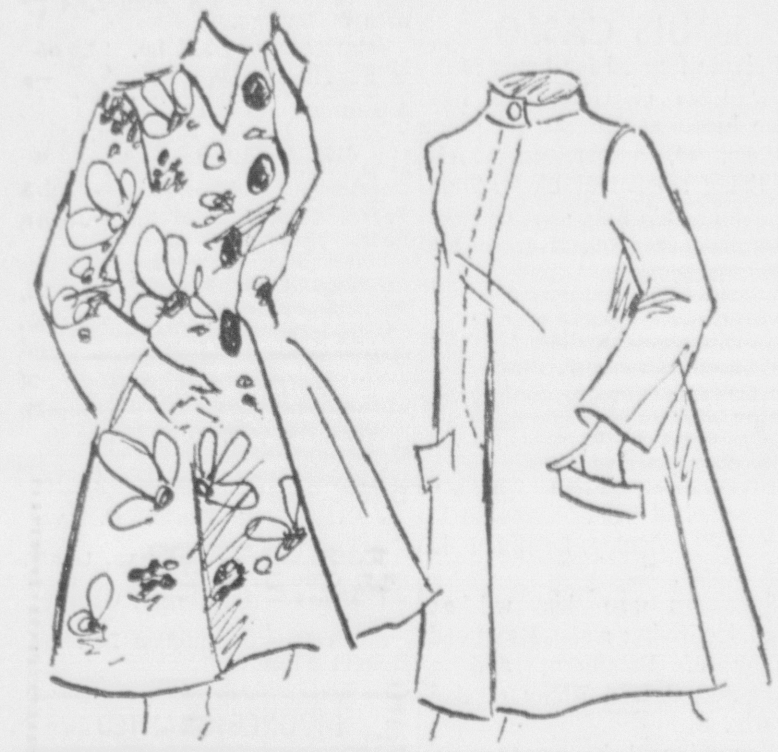
SEW SIMPLE

Make A Rain-Shine Coat Gay

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR READERS:

Here's more news for your spring sewing. It's hard to call a raincoat anything that sounds glamorous, but I like to call them your "rain or shine" coats. They may be made out of water repellent moire, heavy cottons, silk and worsted Italian Silk or almost anything, for that matter.



Make your rain or shine coat in any simple style, but make it colorful, gay and eyecatching because there is no clothing a woman wears that is more dreary than the ones she wears on a rainy day.

There are products you can buy that can be sprayed on your coat when you have completed it to make it water repellent; some fabrics are pre-treated, and you may also have your coat treated at the dry cleaners when you have finished it. These marvelous coats can be worn as a lightweight coat when the sun is shining, too, or when the weather demands a lightweight wrap.

MRS. THOMAS FILIPKOWSKI, Brewerton, N.Y., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for sending the following suggestion:

"When you are making garments out of quilted material, the facings become too thick if they are cut out of the same material. I have found that by removing the machine stitching from the facings, I end up with a single layer of material which works out perfectly."

DEAR EUNICE:

I made a very heavy sleeveless dress to go with a coat ensemble and even though I eliminated the shoulder seam on the facings, the armholes look very thick and bulky, the neckline also looks too thick to me. I have tried pressing the edges and I'm still not satisfied. Is there a solution?—MRS. F. C.

DEAR MRS. F. C.:

I am glad you asked this question, because I have just examined a very heavy sleeveless dress that was quite expensive and there wasn't a facing used. Instead, the bodice was lined separately with a China silk lining. This was finished like the dress so that it would be smooth inside and hand whipped to the armholes and neckline. Before you begin sewing the lining in your dress, be sure to clip the inner curves of the armholes and neckline, baste it on the ⅝ inch seamline and press in shape.

If your fabric is the least stretchy, I would suggest machine stitching it first on the ⅝ inch seamline so that you won't pull it out of shape. You will also have to clip the same areas in your lining. When you baste or pin it in place, be sure to turn under about ⅛ inch more on the lining so that it will be slip-stitched in place slightly in from the finishing edge of your garment and consequently won't show from the right side. This makes a beautiful finish to your sleeveless garment, and I hope you will all remember this when working with heavier fabrics.

DEAR EUNICE:

I would like to make myself a spring coat, but most of the patterns I look at are called "coat-dresses." Can these patterns be used for coats and if so, what must be done to them in order to obtain a properly fitting coat?—MRS. C. M.

DEAR MRS. C.M.:

There is quite a difference between a coat-dress and a coat pattern. A coat-dress is usually cut similar to a dress. In other words, it doesn't have the amount of ease you need for a coat that is to be worn over other clothes. The sleeves are usually quite narrow and in general, these patterns would not be suitable to be worn over anything except the skimpiest lightweight sleeveless dress.

A coat-dress pattern does not include a lining pattern either; however, this is relatively simple to cut by using the same pattern as the coat, eliminating the width of the facing and adding the extra width for the seam allowance where the lining will be attached to the facing. The back of the pattern should also be cut a little fuller for ease.

These patterns have been used for coats and have been used successfully; however, you must decide first just where you want to wear your coat and what it must be worn over. If it's for a general all-purpose coat, I wouldn't recommend it.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Are Two Letters A Coincidence Or Do Others Share Problem?

DEAR HELEN:

I'm stunned. I hate the guy I love, if that's possible, but I don't think I'll ever trust anyone again.

We went together for two years, and I promised to wait for him when he was in Vietnam. He was so wonderful to me. He was clean and straight and never expected more than was right, even when he was leaving. I thought I knew him through and through. All the time he was fighting. I was true. I wrote to him everyday and sent gifts. He wrote every day too. We made plans about marriage.

Then he was badly wounded and sent home early, to a hospital about 3,000 miles away. The first letter I got from him there was very cool, but he did say he wanted to see me. The second letter was a brush off. He said he was going to live back east where he was having a ball, and I was a good kid who would go far, but let's face it, we just weren't made for each other. So good-bye. Just like that.

I've been trying to date other fellows, but I feel miserable when they even hold my hand. I hate the world and I hate my former guy, so how can I still love him? — Should I just give up and never write to him again?

HURTIN'

DEAR HURTIN':

Before you cross off this man you thought you knew so well, read the following letter. It probably isn't from your guy (could coincidence stretch that far?), but it may encourage you to write one more time, and ask for the real reason behind his breakup.

DEAR HELEN:

I came back from 'Nam with an injury in my spine. Maybe I'll be okay, but I have a disability discharge, and have to have prolonged treatment. I'm not exactly husband material right now, even though I love my girl.

If I told her about my long hospital bouts, and the uncertainty over my future, I know she'd hop the next plane. But I don't want a nurse. If I can't have a wife, I'd rather she would forget me, as it wouldn't be fair. I love her too much to see her waste her life.

Isn't it better that I tell her I've changed my mind about our marriage? As I see it, this is the only way. She may feel bad for a while, but she won't learn to hate an invalid husband. I'm not being melodramatic. I just want your opinion.

DISABLED VET

DEAR DISABLED VET:

Read both letters in this column carefully, and then — tell your girl the truth! You'll hurt her far more by lying!—H.

Beef Grades

Beef varies in quality more than any other kind of meat. But you don't have to judge beef quality for yourself. U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) grades are reliable guides to meat quality. For any specific cut—sirloin steak, for example—the higher the grade, the greater the tenderness, juiciness and flavor. Grades available, in descending quality order, are USDA Prime, USDA Choice, USDA Good, and USDA Standard.

Diana Marie House Plans To Be Wed In The Fall

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. House of Mill Valley announce the engagement of their daughter, Diana Marie House, to Stanley T. Burnett of San Francisco, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Paul Burnett of Lodi.

A graduate of Tamalpais High School last year, Diana is attending Sonoma State College. She is the sister of Robert J. House Jr. of Salem, Ore., Mrs. John D. Harrison of Stockton and Debby House of Mill Valley and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. David House of Berkeley and Mrs. George Helzer of Stockton.

Stanley, a specialist E/5 who is serving with the Army stationed at the Presidio in San Francisco, was graduated from Lodi High School.

A fall wedding is planned.

Streets-Whiteman Rite Held In Sausalito

Jo Ann Whiteman was wed to Lt. James Bert Streets last Saturday in a ceremony at Christ Episcopal Church in Sausalito.

Mary Boddorff of Wilmington, Del. was maid of honor for the bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carr Whiteman Jr. of San Rafael. Margaret Crooke of Fullerton and Janet Stevenson of San Anselmo were bridesmaids.

Capt. Robert L. Getty of Merced was best man. Capt. Silverio Barroqueiro of Sacramento and Lt. Ronald Blum of Merced ushered guests to their seats.

A reception at the Alta Mira Hotel in Sausalito followed the ceremony.

Jo Ann was graduated from high school in Pennington, N. J. and from the University of Colorado, where she was a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. Lt. Raymond Joseph Whiteman, who is serving with the Army in Vietnam is the bride's brother.

James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wesley Streets of Seminole, Okla. He was graduated from Seminole High School and the United States Air Force Academy. Jerry Calvin Streets of Seminole is his brother.

The couple will live in Riverside, where the bridegroom is stationed at March Air Force Base and the bride will teach elementary school.

You name it...
we'll build it on a view site at Peacock Crest

Never before a chance like this! A home built to your wishes at a fraction of the cost you'd expect. See Peacock Crest (with the famous view!). Inspect the models, and five basic plans. Decide what you'd like to "keep" or change. (You may want one exactly as is.) Work directly with our architects. Maybe another room? Special den? Recreation center? Studio? Larger? Smaller? You name it...we'll build it. You'll save thousands compared to conventional architect/builder methods—because you'll start with Perma-Bilt's volume building techniques and basic plans already created. Imagine how costly it would be to spend hours with a private architect and work from scratch. Your Perma-Bilt team provides a firm estimate and time schedule on the customized home you wish...built exactly as you want it for your family. No, you've never heard of this being done before by a volume builder with "volume savings." So hurry! See for yourself. NOW, at Peacock Crest.

Personalized homes built to suit.
Free consultation and estimates.

Homes from $38,950.

From Highway 101, take San Rafael turnoff. Turn right on Second St., which changes to Third, then to San Pedro Road. Go about 2½ miles to Knight Drive, and left up the slope to Peacock Crest. Open 10 'til dark daily. Telephone 454-0950.

ON THE AGENDA

'Mendocino Family' To Conduct Program On Drug Use, Abuse

A group of young people from Mendocino State Hospital will appear before the Tamalpais High School Parent Teacher Association Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school's Ruby Scott auditorium.

The panel, calling themselves the "Mendocino family," has been organized as a team to help high school students understand more about problems related to drug use and abuse. They are undergoing treatment at the hospital for drug abuse.

Dr. Ernest Dernburg of Sausalito will be a speaker to explain the cause and effects of drug use. He is psychiatric director for the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic and psychiatric consultant to the comprehensive child care program at Mt. Zion Medical Center. He has recently lectured to some 30 members of the Tamalpais High School faculty ad hoc drug committee.

The program was organized by James Hanretty of the school staff to inform parents and invite them to participate in a continuing drug education effort at the school.

A PANEL DISCUSSION on horticultural subjects will be the topic at the Marin Country Club Garden Club meeting at 1 p.m. Monday at the Country Club in Novato, according to Mrs. J. N. Faville, president.

Mrs. Jack Gibbs will head the panel, which will include Mmes. William Bills, Walker Geddes and William Begley. A question and answer period will follow.

Mrs. Richard Basco of Larkspur will also give a demonstration of making unusual artificial floral arrangements.

ELEAZAR OFODILE, a citizen of Biafra and now finishing his doctoral studies as a teaching assistant at the University of California will be the speaker at the public meeting of the Novato Branch, American Association of University Women at 8 p.m., Monday in the library of Sinaloa School in Novato.

Richard Mears of Novato, a representative of the Institute of Nations, will also present a talk on the summer institute, held in the Santa Cruz Mountains for junior and senior high school student leaders interested in world affairs.

Members of the world interests section of AAUW are the sponsoring group for the meeting.

ST. RAPHAEL'S MOTHERS' Guild will hold a panel discussion at their monthly meeting Tuesday from 1:15 to 3 p.m. Bay Area housewives of diverse ethnic and religious backgrounds will speak on "Focus on American Women." Prejudice in today's society will be brought out by the women who have spoken before approximately one hundred meetings during the past three years.

Babysitting will be available.

ON WEDNESDAY members of St. Anselm's Institute 98 Young Ladies Institute will welcome Mrs. Edward Nunes of Santa Rosa who will make her official visit as grand president. There will be a special meeting with initiation of new members beginning at 8:15 p.m.

Chairman for the evening is Mrs. Jack Benz. She will be assisted by Mmes. Thomas Cusick, Paul Neese, Robert Lee, Virginia Bergin, Thomas Bradley, Laurie Antolini, Clarence Curtin, Adelaide Tedrick, Richard Bettencourt, Bernard DeBisschop, Romeo Bacci, Walter Milani, Dave Lucas and John Daly and Misses Kathleen Doyle, Teresa Heininger, and Loretto O'Rourke.

THE FILM of Hans Christian Andersen's "The Daydreamer" will be shown Feb. 12 by the McKinley Parent-Teacher Association in Petaluma as its fund raiser for the year. The showing will be at 12:30 p.m. in the school's multi-use room, and light refreshments will be sold by the P-TA members. Mrs. Floyd Lubbers is chairman for the program.

A ONE-ACT comedy, "The Flattering Word," will be presented for the Mount Carmel Women's Club on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Mount Carmel School auditorium in Mill Valley. The public is invited.

The play is being presented by Lawrence G. Bedini, cofounder of the Bedini Playhouse School of Theatre in San Francisco, and the cast will consist of students from the playhouse.

Bedini is also drama director of the San Francisco Musical Club and the Century Club in San Francisco and in this capacity has presented many successful plays.

THIS WEEK the Volunteer Bureau is seeking: 1) people who like small children to work twice a week as kindergarten teacher aids in Central or Southern Marin; 2) a volunteer to be clerical aid to staff people concerned with teen-agers. This job is on Thursday afternoons and requires either shorthand or fast longhand. Thorough orientation will be provided; 3) individuals with entertainment skills such as juggling, magic shows, hobby demonstrations or card playing for spot jobs in hospitals.

Interested volunteers may call the Volunteer Bureau for an interview appointment.

THE PELICAN PLAYERS, all members of the Tiburon Peninsula Club, have scheduled performances of their third annual musical revue for May 1, 2, and 3 at the clubhouse.

Knowing How Turns The Trick In Removing Those Stains

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you want to make your shoe shine last longer smear a little damp soap on the shoes first. If they are black shoes and scuffed you can touch them up with India ink. If you can't get polish into the space between the sole and uppers use a cotton tipped swab.

If they've got tar stains on them take them off with lighter fluid. If they've got rubber soles use soapsuds and a little ammonia on the soles. If you put the polish on shoes the night before it will make them last longer. If the soles squeak, rub them with neatsfoot or linseed oil.

IF THEY'RE just wet, dry them slowly on shoe trees. If you don't have any shoetrees stuff them with paper. If you don't wipe off the mud first it will ruin the finish.

If you get the shoe polish on your hands you can loosen it up with baby oil before washing it off. If you get the dirt under your fingernails you can loosen it by brushing the nails with dry baking soda on a wet brush. If you have any shoepolish left over you can put it on your shoelaces and they will stay tied better.

IF YOU GET pencil marks around the pocket of a shirt erase them before washing or they'll be hard to get out. If you get ball point pen spots on a shirt give it a quick rinse in clear water before washing in soapsuds.

If you used cleaning fluid to remove a spot and it left a bigger spot, a little steam from boiling water in a kettle will remove the ring. If you started out with a grass stain on your golf slacks rub with vinegar until it (the stain) disappears. If it's a drip dry shirt and the collar and cuffs look ominously black apply concentrated dry sal soda with a damp brush. If you have only scorched the shirt you can bleach it by moistening it with water and holding it under a sun lamp.

If you get wine spots on your shirt rub the area with a cut lemon before having it washed. If you slop whiskey on your shirt, slop on some soda and you'll have whiskey and soda and a cleaner shirt. It works the same if you prefer plain water and whisky.

IF YOU CLEAN the insides of dry rubbers and galoshes with a vacuum cleaner you can save a future shoeshine. If you rub a suede jacket with a soft sponge it will clean it—some. If your shirt buttons look dirty clean them with an eraser.

If you don't believe any of this ask the American Institute of Men's and Boy's Wear, which told us about it in the first place.

Mrs. Victor Udaloff Is Museum Guild President

MRS. VICTOR UDALOFF

Owl collecting, but not live ones, are among the hobbies of Mrs. Victor N. Udaloff, the new president of Ignacio Guild, Boyd Marin Museum of Science.

"About 12 years ago I started my collection, she said, "and now I have china, wooden and pine cone owls, a cookie jar and other dishes and pictures of owls."

Linda Udaloff also likes to knit, sew, play bridge and golf and enjoys auto travel to historical landmarks and gardening.

She and her husband, the assessment engineer for the city of San Francisco, have three children: Rick, 18, Laurie, 14, and Russell, 10 years old. They have lived in Marin County three years.

The new president is also active in the Parent-Teacher Association, Novato Newcomers Club and teachers' aide work.

The Ignacio guild was organized last year, and Mrs. Udaloff served as its secretary. The guild plans to participate in "The Festival of Trees" as a fund raising project.

Officers chosen to serve with Mrs. Udaloff are Mrs. James Hendricks, vice president; Peter Martin, secretary; J. D. Lane, treasurer; Lester Kuhns, publicity; John McLaughlin, staffing chairman; and Lloyd Ross, Festival of Trees chairman.

Eugene S. Kilgores Jr. Renew Friendships On Month-Long Trip

By MOLLY MARIN

Back from a month-long trip to New York, Philadelphia, the Barbadoes and the West Indies are Dr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Kilgore Jr. of Tiburon.

In New York they saw a number of shows and Mimi Kilgore renewed acquaintances with friends in the television and theatrical world whom she had known during the years she worked in Manhattan with a television company. She frequently saw Jane Connell, a former Californian, who is opening in the Broadway production, "Dear World." Miss Connell, who is the wife of Gordon Connell, was known in Marin when she was a player in the Straw Hat Revue.

While in the East, Mimi saw Mrs. Marjorie Farood, formerly of Mill Valley, who now lives in Scarsdale, N.Y. Mrs. Farood will move to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., this spring. Her daughter, Lele, 12, Mrs. Kilgore's goddaughter who played tennis at the Belvedere Tennis Club, is now ranked 10th in the country for junior girls 12 years old, by the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association. Mrs. Farood is also taking up flying, working for her pilot's license.

The Kilgores had to decline the invitation of Marjorie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Davis of New York to attend the inauguration, as their schedule was already planned.

While in New York, the Tiburon couple met Dr. and Mrs. Charles Eberle of Belvedere. The Eberles went on to visit Antigua. While staying on the small island of St. James in the Barbadoes, the Kilgores met the Larry Metcalfs of San Francisco.

THE LITTLE Jim Club of Children's Hospital of San Francisco is holding a voting party Tuesday evening from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Crocker-Citizens Bank, 1 Montgomery Street in San Francisco.

The queen of the 1969 Mardi Gras Ball, to be held Feb. 15 at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, will be elected at the party.

Candidates are Mmes. Roger Sant, Lionel Jackson, Jules Levaggi, Daniel I. Chadbourne, Ann DiGiorgio Hein, Leo V. Merle IV, Peter John Owens, Eugene M. Gillis and Marjorie Corcoran Gallun.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT W. Seidel of Ross are parents of a son, James Boyd Seidel, born Feb. 1.

Jamie, as the baby is called, is the brother of Eric, nine, and Kirk, seven years old, and the grandson of J. R. Seidel of Walnut Creek and Mrs. John D. Boyd of Nyack, N.Y.

Ozawa-Led Program Proves Interesting

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

SAN FRANCISCO — Surely last night's San Francisco Symphony concert, conducted at the Opera House by Seiji Ozawa in the second week of his guest appearances this year, will be remembered as a highlight of the entire season. This will be both from the standpoint of the unique program and brilliant performance.

The character of the program was due largely to the West Coast premiere of Japanese composer Toru Takemitsu's "November Steps," so named for its first commissioned performance in New York in November and because it represents the composer's first steps in combining ancient Japanese and contemporary European music.

ORCHESTRA DIVIDED

Extraordinary enough was the division of the orchestra into two string ensembles facing each other, two harps, two percussion groups and small groups of woodwinds. These seemed to realize the composer's stated ambition of presenting sound in its original unpolished form.

But what really made the work unique was the long duet unaccompanied by the orchestra, played on two ancient Japanese instruments by two musicians brought from Japan especially for this work.

Dressed in Japanese style, Miss Kinshi Tsuruta played the biwa, a lute-like instrument sounded with a large wooden plectrum that produced sounds like a twang, rasp and whack, and Katsuya Yokoyama gave a virtuoso performance on the shakuhachi, a vertical bamboo flute with an amazing variety of tonal resources.

They ranged from a very beautiful, long sustained and barely audible singing tone to a vigorous, breathy whoosh, a plaintive sound like a boat whistle and even a guffaw.

When in his ingratiatingly spontaneous style the tiny Japanese Maestro Ozawa explained the solo each played as an encore, the instruments were heard to better advantage — the biwa in a little piece with a theme like "William Tell," that Miss Tsuruta sang, and the shakuhachi in a mournful Buddhist elegy.

The enormously enthusiastic reception of this work and the composer — who looked even smaller than Ozawa — indicates a growing acceptance of contemporary idioms.

'PINES OF ROME'

In a sensational contrast to the sensitivity and delicacy of this work and played immediately afterward was Respighi's "Pines of Rome," ending in a blazing finale, the like of which has probably never been heard in the Opera House before. Theatrical enough in itself, it was heightened in drama by Ozawa's having trumpets played high up in the organ galleries on each side of the stage. The effect was electrifying.

The Prokofieff Fifth Symphony, which opened the program, was also given an exciting reading, thanks to Ozawa's marvelously vital rhythmic drive, a stronger than usual bass sound from the low strings and some fine individual performances on the harps, clarinets and horns. Ozawa directed all but the Takemitsu work from memory.

In the words Robert Schumann is supposed to have said of Chopin: "Hats off, gentlemen — a genius!"

College To Offer Tour Of Mexico

A 30-day tour of Mexico, with emphasis of folk music and art, is being offered by the Sonoma State College Office of Education Services and Department of Foreign Languages.

Called "The Magic of Mexica," the tour will be conducted by Dr. William O. Cord, Spanish professor and chairman of the foreign languages department. The trip, beginning June 30, will include a private excursion to important cities and historical points in Central Mexico. The group will travel about in a chartered bus, with an English-speaking guide.

Dr. Cord said the cost will range from $635 to $681, depending on the size of the group.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Thousand Clowns' Worth Evening In Ross Theater

By GARY TISCHLER

You've seen the movie, now see the play at your neighborhood theater.

Everybody seems to be taking a crack at "A Thousand Clowns," and now the Ross Valley Players have tackled it and have come up with a surprisingly believable and enjoyable piece of theater.

The thing to do is forget about the movie. Jason Robards prancing around the Statue of Liberty, that super-sensitive kid, Barbara Harris, and all that was a nice piece of magic that catered to every tight-collar's slice of wishful thinking so that even Murray's fadeout surrender was something of a triumph. It was nice, but it wasn't quite real.

What the Ross Valley Players have done is to bring the whole thing back to earth, losing some polish, gaining solid contact. Murray Burns is not Jason Robards, but Murray Burns, champion of feeling and spontaneity, something of a bum, selfish, unwilling to grow up.

GROWS WITH PART

Al Newman, who portrays Murray, is no Robards either, but he is Newman, and he grows with the part after a slow start. It's a steady job, not as fleshy as it should be at times, but he succeeds in turning Burns into a human being, instead of a caricature of a lovable rascal.

The youngster, Nick Burns, that middle-aged kid, doesn't look like a big-eyed wonder from a sensitivity session. Hunter Austin does succeed in making him a believable youngster, somebody who is a little more aware than most youngsters, but still a boy, a little, pudgy kid.

Mel Bermann is Arnold Burns, Murray's straight-and-narrow businessman brother with a kind of stoic and long-suffering dignity that climaxes into a moving justification of his kind of life.

John Peebles at times scores well as Albert Amundson, the outwardly cold-fish social worker, but is at times too boyish and cloying.

Without taking too much credit away from the rest of the performers, Barbara Nelson as Sandra Markowitz and Peter Scott as Leo (The Chipmunk) Herman, stick to the mind more than the rest.

PART JUST RIGHT

Scott's performance as the kid show comedian-phony is a flamboyant job in a meaty part. He winds up as a mustachioed, professional bleeding heart, a ravaging, fluttering blob of a man at once funny, disgusting and touching. It's a small part that could easily be done too well. Scott, although too blustering at times, is practically just right.

Miss Nelson plays a butterfly who still thinks she's a larva. She literally blossoms on stage with a sort of feminine-Lucy comedy technique as she changes from a hesitant well-meaning, overemotional female schemiel to an alive person. It's a beautiful job.

The set of the Murray apartment has just the right touch — not too cluttered with absurdity but in a state of pleasant, wonderful chaos. It, like the play, is almost for real.

Goldfish, depending on the variety, can cost anywhere from 10 cents to $2,000 each.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Long-Ignored Chemical Turned Out To Be Much-Used Aspirin

VAN DELLEN

Felix Hoffmann wanted to help his father who was crippled with arthritis. The young German chemist began searching through the records of chemical oddities.

In 1898, he persuaded his father to try aspirin, synthesized in 1853 by Charles Frederick von Gerhardt but shelf-bound because no one knew of its benefits. It relieved the father's pain and stiffness and triggered further studies.

SINCE ASPIRIN was introduced in the United States by The Bayer Company, we consume nearly 50 million tons daily. Many companies manufacture the drug. It is an old standby in rheumatic conditions. When pain is severe aspirin is taken several times a day — or as much as the person can tolerate.

Not everyone, however, can take aspirin. Some are so senstitive, that one-tenth of a 5 grain tablet produces serious reactions, such as hives, asthma, and congestion along the air passageways.

GASTROINTESTINAL irritation such as bleeding, heartburn of indigestion may be minimized by taking the salicylate with a glass of milk, food, or an antacid. Several years ago, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported that there was no difference in the irritative effects of buffered and ordinary aspirin. Coated salicylates are available for those who develop dyspepsia.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

ALTERED BASAL METABOLISM

A. B. writes: Is it possible to have a basal metabolic rating of plus 30 one week and minus 14 the next?

REPLY

Yes. Increased readings may be seen when the individual is nervous or emotionally upset. Errors also creep in through technical difficulties in calculation. This is one of the reasons why many physicians prefer using radioactive materials or the PBI test in determining thyroid activity.

KEEPING SKIN YOUTHFUL

A reader writes: What can an elderly woman do to keep her skin looking its best?

REPLY

Apply oils and lanolin, including cold and vanishing creams. Minimize exposure to the sun and wintry blasts. Avoid squinting by wearing dark glasses when out-of-doors. Meanwhile, enjoy life and stop frowning and grimacing. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on the aging skin.

CAN'T TAKE THE COLD

Mr. R. O. writes: Why do I become breathless when walking out of doors on a cold day? I'm never bothered in summer.

REPLY

This may be normal even though cold may interfere with breathing by constricting the bronchial tubes and blood vessels. A thorough examination of the heart and lungs is in order because individuals with heart trouble or chronic lung diseases usually are bothered more when the temperature drops.

DETACHED RETINA

S. R. writes: Does a detached retina result in blindness?

REPLY

The answer depends upon the area involved and the extent of the detachment of separation of the retina from the back of the eyeball. The surgical treatment, especially with ultrasound, has been most successful.

Today's Health Hint — Hydrogen peroxide that no longer bubbles should be discarded.

Burglar Steals $120 Bedspread

A burglar with a penchant for expensive bedspreads helped himself to a $120 brown one Wednesday at the home of Muriel Crawford Frink of 617 College Avenue, Kentfield the sheriff's department reported yesterday.

Also taken were two cameras, a projector and several blank checks.

Stereo equipment, a radio and an alarm clock were stolen yesterday from the home of Geraldine M. Underwood of 307 Ferndale Avenue, Mill Valley. A sliding glass door had been pried open at her home.

Sheriff's deputies also reported the theft of several articles from the car of Arany Von Szalav of Brisbane while it was parked in Marin City Wednesday. Taken were 10 rolls of film a car coat, umbrella, cigarette lighter and three books.

Mental Tests Set In Retrial

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court has ordered a psychiatric examination for Robert Peter Sundberg, 26, of San Rafael, convicted in 1967 of felony assault on a San Rafael police officer.

A higher court has ruled that Sundberg must be retried because the question of his sanity should have been investigated.

Sundberg was sentenced to a one-to-10-year term in state prison on Sept. 15, 1967, but is now in County Jail awaiting the new trial. The psychiatric test was ordered Wednesday.

Sundberg was accused of lunging at Patrolman Robert A. Larrison with a screwdriver when the officer came to investigate a disturbance report in Sundberg's room at the Carmel Hotel.

Naval Reserve Inspection Set

The annual inspection of the Naval Reserve Surface Division 12-31 (S) will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the division's training center, 153 Madison Avenue, San Rafael.

The public may attend the inspection of the unit, which includes about 60 men from Marin.

New Directors Voted At Farm Bureau Session

A 20-member board of directors was elected Thursday at the annual meeting of the Marin County Farm Bureau in Point Reyes Station.

The directors are William Barboni, James Grossi, Charles Clarkson, Anthony Nunes and John Volpi, all of the Novato area; A. J. Bianchi, Point Reyes Station; Eugene Brown, Petaluma; David Burbank and Alfred Poncia, both of Fallon; Wilford LaFranchi, Henry Tomasini and Stanley Swift, both of Nicasio; James Marshall, Mrs. Viola Mitchell, and Romeo Satori, all of Tomales; Donald McIsaac, Clarence Rogers, Boyd Stewart and Frank Truttman, all of Olema, and Horace Edrington, Healdsburg.

Officers will be elected at the directors' meeting at 10 a.m. Feb. 18 at the farm bureau office in Novato.

Also at yesterday's session, Richard Owens, secretary of the California Farm Bureau Federation, discussed state and federal legislation on schools and labor.

Work Session Set By Transit Panel

The San Francisco-Marin Water Transportation Study Committee will hold a public "work session" at 10 a.m. on Tuesday on its $45,000 study of the feasibility of ferry service between the two counties.

The meeting will be held in the San Francisco offices of the consultants for the study, Arthur D. Little Inc., 500 Sansome Street. The committee contracted with the firm last month to make the study, which is due June 30.

No Charges Filed Yet In Drug Case

No charges were filed yesterday against Valerie Van Nest, 20, of Tiburon, arrested Thursday on suspicion of having marijuana in her minibus, pending further investigation by the district attorney's office.

Miss Van Nest was arrested by the California Highway Patrol on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Greenbrae.

Trial Move Denied By Army Court

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A request to have the mutiny trial of an Oakland soldier moved from the Presidio was denied yesterday in the second day of a court-martial against one of 27 soldiers accused of mutiny.

Defense attorney Paul Halvonik, counsel for Pvt. Nesrey Sood, 25, also argued that his client was "denied a speedy trial" and that the mutiny charge did not apply.

Lt. Col. George R. Robinson, the Army judge, turned down all of Halvonik's motions.

Sood and 26 other soldiers were charged with mutiny following a sitdown strike last October to protest conditions at the prison and the shooting of an inmate during an alleged escape attempt.

Among those awaiting trial is Pvt. Keith C. Mather, of San Bruno, one of the so-called Marin City Nine. The group chained itself to a clergyman in an antiwar demonstration last summer at St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church.

Stall On Bridge Injures Couple

A Sausalito man and woman were injured today when their car slammed into another automobile stalled on the Golden Gate Bridge, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Robert J. White, a 50-year-old attorney who lives on a boat at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor, suffered a lacerated hand and Eleanor Rioux, 40, of 203 West Street, had a cut lip and possible fractured ribs. They were taken to St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco for treatment.

George W. Casassa, a 22-year-old student of 130 Via Lerida, San Rafael, told patrolmen that his car ran out of gas on the bridge about 2 a.m. The CHP reported White, the driver of the other car, apparently did not see Casassa's car.

Bones Found In Mill Valley Called Ancient

Bones discovered last Sunday in a Mill Valley creek bed are approximately 100-150 years old and probably those of Mexican Indian servants of early Spanish settlers, according to Marin County Deputy Coroner Keith C. Craig.

However, Craig, who said he had consulted with Dr. John McBeath, an amateur archaeologist from Novato, would not rule out the possibility that the bones might be those of Miwok Indians, known to have lived in the area up to the early 1880s.

Two skulls found with the bones were "very similar" to those of the Miwok Indians, Craig said. However, he noted that the teeth in the skulls were in very good condition, indicating that the Indians probably were Mexican servants on a good diet in an early Spanish home.

The teeth of the Miwok were usually pitted and broken from eating hard nuts.

The three shopping bags full of bones recovered by Frank and Scott Raney, of 20 Upperhill Road, Mill Valley, and Paul Fielder of 1 Underhill Road, contained enough thigh bones for six skeletons but only two skulls, Craig said.

One of the skulls belonged to a man, probably over 40, and the other one, somewhat smaller, to a woman who was around 25-30, Craig said.

Lucretia Little, Mill Valley's unofficial historian, told the Independent-Journal that an 1858 survey map of the Reed Ranch shows an Indian village and mound near the area in which the bones were discovered.

The youngsters found the bones in a sandy section of the Salt Creek bed adjacent to the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way in Scott Valley.

Paul Jones Files School Ballot Papers

Incumbent Paul L. Jones filed official papers yesterday as a candidate for the San Rafael Board of Education, but said later he may decide not to run.

Jones, area field director for the Civil Defense Administration, was appointed to the school board in 1967 and would be seeking his first elected term in the April 15 election.

Jones said he felt he had not been able to give the school board post enough of his time and that "I would be happy to have someone else take the job."

He said he was asking friends in his Terra Linda neighborhood whether any would be interested in replacing him. He emphasized, however, that his replacement did not have to come from Terra Linda. Jones is the only board member from the Dixie School District attendance area.

Jones said he would be leaving on an Eastern business trip that would not enable him to return to San Rafael until after the candidates' filing deadline Thursday.

The only other incumbent whose term expires is Lawrence I. Kramer, chairman. He has not filed candidacy papers with City Clerk W. C. Cornwell.

Franklin's Gift Boon To College

LANCASTER, Pa. (UPI)—What is now Franklin and Marshall College was chartered by the Pennsylvania legislature during the winter of 1787, only weeks before Colonial leaders met in Philadelphia to frame a constitution for the United States.

Named for Benjamin Franklin—whose cash contribution of 200 British pounds sterling is now valued in the endowment at more than $700,000—it was the third college in Pennsylvania and the 14th in the United States. In 1853 Franklin merged with Marshall College—named for the famed Chief Justice, John Marshall—and the combined colleges opened that year under the leadership of a board of trustees headed by James Buchanan, who later became the 15th President.

Rain Brings Fire

KIRCHDORF, Austria (AP) — Rain was blamed for causing fire on a railroad car of a freight train. Officials said the rain seeped through a leaky canvas that covered a load of 20 tons of quicklime and the developing heat set fire to the wooden boards of the car.

ART REVIEW

'Black, White, Clay' A Display Of Talents

By LAURA DEVENDORF

"Black, white and clay," an exhibit of photographs by Thomas C. Johnson and ceramic pots, forms and faces by John Dumas, is a fine combination of talent continuing through March 1 at Anima Mundi gallery, 352 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley.

Dumas' ceramics are earthy and raw and Johnson's photographs dwell on wood, metal, glass, flesh and other natural things. On one hand, Johnson shows depressing views of contemporary life — the tail ends of buses and littered, grimy garages. And it's a strange comparison with his photos of the decaying ghost town, Bodie.

SIMPLE DIGNITY

Somehow, the latter's dusty, cobwebbed interiors, littered with the same everyday sort of things, have a simple dignity, even beauty. And the mood is even stronger in the four exteriors where both loneliness and pride seem engraved in the graying, time-ridged wood Johnson examines so minutely. You can almost smell the dryness and feel its stiff, long-splintered surface.

STAGY NUDES

Another close-up series, this one of doors, has that same tactile quality. And while most of Johnson's nude studies seem stagy, one bending figure shot close-up becomes almost more recognizable as a free-form marble sculpture than as flesh.

Dumas' work is as unpretentious as his biography tacked on the wall. Excerpts from this read, "Dumas: registered human being . . . fashionably completed four years at Brown University . . ." and it concludes, "Seeking fullness in dirt, fire and water."

The latter statement is evidenced in all his work. It is free, earthy, irreverent, at times macabre, even ghoulish, usually gorgeous and always full of energy.

A heavy half-orb hangs above another, the sliced top of which results in an eerie form. Crude masks hang from the ceiling. Strange chunks of darkened clay dangle from the insides of crates. And gouged, bulging slabs, wall-hung or mounted on ceramic boxes are struck with skulls and birds with yawning, squatty beaks as openings.

BIRDS HIS THEME

Birds are Dumas' recurrent theme. They wrap their winging images around giant pots, their heads and necks emerging sharply from the curving plane. Sometimes he combines the ceramic birds with real driftwood, bones and feathers to build a total form, such as a ceramic body with real feather wings roosting on a driftwood perch.

It sounds terrible but it works, as do other Dumas' things because of the power, energy and natural taste in them.

Six Drinking Motorists Sentenced

Six persons were sentenced yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

John Henry Wiesner, 41, of 807 Estancia Way, San Rafael, was sentenced to 10 days in the County Jail, fined $211 and placed on 18 months probation. He was arrested Feb. 2 on Fourth Street in San Rafael.

Clifford Walter Parlee, 42, of 2 Wolfe Grade, Kentfield, who was arrested on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard last Aug. 23, was given a five-day suspended jail sentence, placed on one year probation and fined $200.

Clifford Eugene Allen, 38, of 767 St. Francis Avenue, Novato, was fined $150 and placed on six months probation. He was arrested by the California Highway Patrol Jan. 18 on Highway 101.

William Richard Smith, 51, of Novato, who was arrested last Oct. 7 in San Rafael, was fined $125 and placed on one year probation.

Mae Carolyn Borg, 53, of 530 Ethel Avenue, Mill Valley, was fined $150 and sentenced to one day in jail. She was also placed on a year's probation. She was arrested last June 5 in Mill Valley.

Milo Wilson LeFever, 36, of 27 Vendola Drive, San Rafael, who was arrested last Sept. 5 on Highway 101, was fined $125 and placed on six months' probation.

Suspect Admits Stolen Card Use

James Warren Tamburini, 21, of San Rafael, pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to attempting to buy a television set and radio with a stolen credit card.

He was ordered to appear in Marin Superior Court Monday.

Tamburini was arrested Dec. 19 in connection with the attempted purchase at Butler's Magnavox in Northgate Shopping Center.

Pharmacist Hit, Briefly Stunned

A 61-year-old pharmacist locking up the Marinwood Pharmacy for the night was struck on the head and knocked out for a few minutes Wednesday, according to the sheriff's department.

Claude F. Minchin of 525 Fairway Drive, Novato, recovered consciousness within a few minutes and was treated at Marin General Hospital for a scalp cut.

Minchin thought he might have been hit with a bottle.

Nothing was reported missing from the store, the sheriff's department said.

Car Club Open House

In a drive to enlist new members, the North Bay Corvette Association will have an open house tomorrow, 1-4 p.m., at the Campbell Bishop Chevrolet Co., Highway 101 at Paradise Drive, Corte Madera. Cars will be on display and phamplets will be distributed to tell the purpose and plans of the club.

Petaluma Eyes Road Projects

The Petaluma City Council — reviewing capital outlay projects at a study session today — sought programs that would have wide appeal and good chances for success on a possible June 10 bond issue.

In reviewing a proposal for $4,635,000 in street projects that would have to be financed through bond issues, the council agreed that a second Highway 101 overpass at the Caulfield Lane extension should receive top priority for bond issue consideration.

Estimated to cost the city $251,000, the project has long been sought by residents of East Petaluma who are often bogged down in heavy traffic on the lone Washington Street overpass. City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer questioned whether the west side residents would be hesitant to approve the project and suggested a west side project also be included in a bond issue.

Meyer recommended consideration of a traffic signal system at the Magnolia Avenue-Petaluma Boulevard North-Payran Street intersection. That west side project, estimated to cost nearly $100,000, had been recommended by City Engineer David Young to be financed by gas tax funds.

"If a bond issue is to pass, it must have something for everyone," Meyer said. Noting the bonding capacity of the city was now around $3 million, Meyer suggested a bond issue be kept down to the $500,000 level. He said the finance committee is currently preparing a recommendation to council on bond issue items.

The council agreed that projects improving traffic flow and the downtown core area would have more bond issue appeal than luxury items such as the development of a 30-acre Lucchesi park, also on the east side.

The council agreed that projects improving traffic flow and east side as a "necessity" and said it felt sure the voters would agree and approve it on a bond issue. Fire Chief Roscoe A. Benton has recommended construction of a new station on McDowell Boulevard South.

Pair Deny Theft In San Rafael

A Sebastopol man and his companion from San Francisco pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to a charge of stealing an adding machine from a San Rafael service station Jan. 25 after knocking down the attendant.

A preliminary hearing for Douglas Rice, 26, of Sebastopol and a co-defendant, Robert John Marlowe, 31, was set for Feb. 24.

The offense allegedly occurred at the Standard Service Station at 475 Third Street.

Transit Speaker

The Marin Real Estate Board will meet 8 a.m. Tuesday at the Corte Madera Lions Club to hear Dale W. Luehring, general manager of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, speak about transportation problems.

SENSITIVITY CLASS BRANDED A PLOT

Ex-Parole Officer Compares Sessions To Korean Communists' Brainwashing

By CHARLES YOAKUM

Sensitivity training is only a fancy name for brainwashing and is being used by segments of our government to perpetuate their own existence, a former law officer told a crowd of about 250 persons at Redwood High School last night.

Ed Kieckmann Jr., speaking at a lecture sponsored by the ultra-conservative Truth About Civil Turmoil (TACT) committee, likened this rapidly-spreading educational device to the brainwashing used by the Communists during the Korean war.

Dieckmann also attacked sex education classes, calling them "another arm of the same body," referring to sensitivity training courses.

Sensitivity training — which has received so much publicity in recent months — takes many forms, but usually involves an individual being subjected to strong group criticism of his personality after he is encouraged to reveal his innermost feelings. It is very similar to the group therapy used by psychologists and psychiatrists on the mentally ill.

Dieckmann is a former State parole officer in Huntington Beach who said he resigned last October when his superiors attempted to have him undergo sensitivity training with Al Prentice "Bunchy" Carter as the group leader.

Carter was one of two Black Panthers shot to death recently at UCLA.

Since then, Dieckmann has traveled nationally speaking out against sensitivity training.

Dieckmann said that school teachers, principals and administrators have all been pressured by the National Education Association and the National Training Laboratory to try to use sensitivity training.

"Call it what you will — sensitivity training, group criticism or psychodrama — it all adds up to the same thing," Dieckmann said. "It's the same technique used by the Nazis in their youth programs."

"Sensitivity training is actually just the opposite as it sounds," Dieckmann said, "it's a de-sensitizer."

Dieckmann said that the National Education Act, Title 3 of 1965 — which brought about the beginning of sensitivity training — was supported by Sen. Wayne Morse after being proposed by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell —"two old 'bugaboos' of ours."

Dieckmann said that the group criticism which goes on in many forms of sensitivity training is aimed at breaking down an individual's morality and internal loyalties.

Dieckmann said that the spectacular sensitivity training methods — such as the nude marathons — are not practiced in Communist countries "but are used only in target areas (of conspiracy.)"

He also warned the crowd "not to think that sensitivity training is something that is happening elsewhere."

"I understand that at Tamalpais High School they have a 'creeping and crawling session' with the students ending up in the center of the room for a slow 'pile-on.' "

He said that, at Long Beach State, a speech class became a sensitivity training class, that sex became the entire subject and that the final was "held in a motel."

"All they did was sit on a bed and reveal their innermost thoughts about sex," he added.

The vast majority of the large crowd was clearly with Dieckmann. Only one dissenter voiced an opinion during the question and answer session.

David Dwight, a psychology teacher at Terra Linda High School, said that he favored sensitivity training, although he had not used it himself. He said that "psychodrama" had been used by his high school, but that students were not forced to participate.

One member of the audience said that he understood 35 teachers from Mill Valley had been sent to a course on teaching sensitivity training last summer.

Dieckmann urged the audience "not to try and fight sensitivity training individually," but told them to join TACT and combat it on a much larger scale.

Funds Collected For Boardwalk

The necessary money has been collected from property owners of the Hugh Porter subdivision to repair and maintain the Greenbrae boardwalk, Lee R. Miller, Greenbrae Improvement Club recording secretary, said yesterday.

Miller would not reveal the amount of the money, saying that the contract is yet to be signed. He said, however, that the club is considering an $11,077 bid to do the repairs from von der Werth Inc., Greenbrae.

Election of officers, which had been planned for Thursday night's meeting, was continued.

Nearly 82 per cent of the items now stocked in frozen food cases were non-existent in 1957.

Legal Group Seeks Stay Of Execution

A stay of execution for Robert L. Massie, convicted killer who insists he wants to die in the gas chamber, was asked yesterday of the California Supreme Court.

A group of lawyers, who last year unsuccessfully challenged the constitutionality of the death penalty, made the request, contending the 27-year-old Massie is insane and should be given a sanity hearing.

Massie is scheduled to die in the San Quentin gas chamber March 12.

Last year, following the blanket stay of all executions by the California Supreme Court, pending arguments on the constitutionality of the death penalty, Massie filed a motion claiming it was his constitutional right to be executed.

Massie, convicted of killing a San Gabriel woman during a 1965 robbery, argued that persistent delays in his execution could be interpreted as cruel punishment.

The petition filed by the group of attorneys maintains Massie is waiving his rights without legal effect because he is insane.

Massie is one of four San Quentin Death Row inmates who have been scheduled to die since the blanket stay of executions was lifted in November after the Supreme Court ruled the death penalty was constitutional.

Pole Collision Hurts Driver

A Fairfax man was injured at 6:50 p.m. Thursday when his car struck a Pacific Gas and Electric Company power pole at 1914 Fourth Street, San Rafael, police reported.

Charles Ernest Hancok, 31, of 26 Redwood Road, Fairfax, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple abrasions and contusions.

His car struck the pole after he slammed on the brakes to avoid hitting another automo-

Wall Street Marches To World News Time

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market kept tune to the mixed news background in heavy trading this week.

North Vietnam kayoed hopes for an early breakthrough at the expanded Vietnam peace conference in Paris by demanding the ouster of South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu's administration as the first step in breaking the deadlock.

Still, investors drew some encouragement from word that the United States and North Vietnam have been meeting secretly outside the formal meetings. The fourth round of the four-cornered talks is scheduled for next Thursday.

Mideast tensions also created uncertainty among traders. But some were cheered by President Nixon's announcements the United States intends to take the initiative in the United Nations efforts to bring calm to that area.

Nixon said he was pursuing every possible avenue to peace in the Middle East because "it is an area that might explode into a major war."

Domestic news, generally viewed as constructive, included rising steel prices, record construction spending in December, increased auto sales in January, primarily the result of the big rise by General Motors; stepped up factory orders in the final month of 1968; a boost in installment credit in the same month, and news the nation's manufacturers enjoyed record corporate profits last year despite the 10 per cent tax surcharge.

The UPI market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, showed a gain of 0.12 to 135.10. Of 1,709 issues traded, there were 810 advances, 780 declines. There were 112 new high set, 52 new lows.

The New York Stock Exchange index mirrored a rise of 26 cents to $58.64 in the average common share price.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index gained 0.52 to 103.53; Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrials advanced 1.80 to 947.85. DJ rails also firmed, but utilities retreated.

Volume swelled to 64,165,150 shares, up from 59,606,988 during the previous week. It also toppped the 47,439,810 shares at a like period a year ago.

Episcopal Church: Catholic And Protestant?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Ask an Episcopalian whether his church is Catholic or Protestant, and he's likely to give you the baffling answer: "Both."

The Episcopal Church is one of 18 autonomous national churches which comprise a world-wide fellowship known as the Anglican Communion. It is the third oldest and third largest family of Reformation churches (the Lutherans and Presbyterians being first and second).

As the English expression of the reformation, the Anglican Communion is historically a Protestant body. But many Anglicans from the 16th Century until the present have bridled at being called Protestants.

They prefer to think of themselves as members of a reformed Catholic church—one which has retained the ancient Catholic creeds and the true Catholic sacraments, and which has preserved a threefold ministry of bishops, priests, and deacons who can trace their line of ordination back to the Apostles.

The claim of "Apostolic succession" for Anglican clergymen is based on the fact that the Church of England did not acquire a new ministry at the time of its establishment: It continued under the same bishops and priests it had before its break with Rome.

Anglicans contend that the Vatican itself tacitly recognized the validity of Anglican orders when it waited 12 years to excommunicate the clergymen who acknowledged Elizabeth as head of the Church of England. The Anglican attempt to retain what is valid in Catholic tradition while accepting the basic insights of the great Protestant reformers is a typically English solution. It is the English genius for compromise applied to religion. Some people find the result distasteful: They dismiss Anglicanism as being neither Catholic fish nor Protestant fowl. But others agree with the noted Anglican scholar Dr. Chad Walsh:

"If Christendom is ever to be reunited into one great Church, that Church will of necessity be one with sufficient scope and Catholic traditions. I believe the Anglican Communion is a small-scale model of what such a Church can be."

It is an indisputable fact that the Anglican Communion has succeeded for more than four hundred years in holding together in one body "Anglo-Catholics" whose worship is virtually indistinguishable from the Catholic mass; "high churchmen," who emphasize the Catholic heritage; "low churchmen," who lean more toward the Protestant tradition; "evangelicals," who are hard to tell from campmeeting Protestants; and finally most numerous of all — "broad churchmen," who cherish both the Catholic and the Protestant aspects of the Anglican via media, and who welcome the opportunity to serve as a bridge between the divided branches of the Christian family.

The Episcopal Church, like the Presbyterian churches, derived its name from the way it is governed. "Episkopos" is the Greek word for "bishop." Episcopal bishops have no more actual power than have the administrative officers of most Protestant bodies. Their wishes in such matters as the handling of money and the management of church-related institutions are subject to the action of democratically elected bodies representative of the church membership. Also, local congregations retain a large degree of autonomy.

But Episcopalians do not look upon their bishops primarily as administrative officers. They are supposed to be the spiritual shepherds of the flock, charged with preserving sound doctrine and interpreting the teachings of Christ.

Anglicanism came to America with the earliest English settlers. The first Anglican church was established at Jamestown, Va., in 1607 by a chaplain who accompanied Capt. John Smith's party. Before the revolution, Anglicanism was the established state religion of most of the Southern colonies, supported by tax revenues. George Washington, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, and many other founding fathers were Anglicans.

During the Revolution, the Anglican churches suffered from popular resentment against a religious body that recognized George III as its head. When the Revolutionary War began in 1776, the Anglican churches comprised the largest religious body in America. When it ended, they were one of the smallest.

The growth of the Episcopal Church was slow for many years following the Revolution. It continued to hug the Eastern seaboard, and neglected to evangelize the frontier, where other Protestant bodies were making tremendous strides. It acquired a reputation as a church that catered to the carriage trade and had no room for the masses—a reputation it still is trying to live down.

It was not until after World War II that the Episcopal Church finally shook off the lethargy that had earned it the nickname of "God's frozen people." The postwar boom in church membership came along just as Episcopalians were awakening to the fact that Jesus thought of them, too, when He said that the gospel must be preached "to every living creature."

Between 1950 and 1960, the membership of the Episcopal Church almost doubled. Today it is one of the six largest American denominations, with more than 3.3 million members. Among them are people from every race, nationality and economic group—living refutations of the old "class church" label.

If the Episcopal Church still has a special appeal for any one group of Americans, it is for the academic-intellectual professional community. Large numbers of scientists, doctors, lawyers, writers, college professors and the like, are to be found in the pews of Episcopal churches.

One reason is that Episcopal clergymen are notably well educated, and their sermons rarely if ever insult the intelligence of any listener, however, learned he may be.

Episcopalians probably do not drink any more than the members of some Protestant churches that are officially committed to total abstinence; but they are less furtive about it. The Episcopal Church condemns any use of alcohol that leads to drunkenness or impairs a person's ability to discharge his responsibilities, but sees no sin in moderate drinking at an appropriate time and place.

Episcopalians also take a relaxed attitude toward card-playing, dancing, Sunday golf, and other social activities that cause the blood pressure of a strict Calvinist to rise.

This should not be taken as indicating a laissez-faire attitude toward moral issues. No other church except the Roman Catholic Church takes such a dim view of divorce and Episcopalians have been in the front ranks of the fight for racial justice.

To outsiders, the most conspicuous virtue of the Episcopal Church is the beauty of its liturgy. Although many other churches have borrowed liberally from the Book of Common Prayer, its majestic cadences still sound most at home in an Episcopal setting.

Dr. John J. Canoles To Leave Church Post

Dr. John J. Canoles, who has been the acting pastor of the Novato Presbyterian Church since Rev. C. M. Croughan resigned Aug. 1, last Sunday announced his resignation as assistant pastor.

He will remain at the church, however, until April 1, according to Roger Smith, an elder of the church who made the announcement.

Dr. Canoles was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael from 1928 to 1959. Then he was assistant pastor at the Portalhurst Prebyterian Church in San Francisco for two years. He became affiliated with the Novato church in 1962.

Dr. and Mrs. Canoles will move to The Sequoias, a Presbyterian retirement home in Portola Valley later this spring.

Member Estimate

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—Preliminary estimates place membership in the Southern Baptist Convention at the end of 1968 at 11.3 million, on the basis of data received from 25,369 of the approximately 34,000 churches in the denomination. This would be an increase of 180,000 over the 1967 membership.

Dr. Wilkins To Preach At Service

Dr. John R. Wilkins, of Petaluma, former director of missionary education of the Methodist Board of Missions, will preach at the 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Methodist Church of Mill Valley.

Dr. Wilkins, a retired Methodist minister, served in the national post for six years, until his retirement in 1964.

Prior to that Dr. Wilkins served as executive secretary of the missions board of the California-Nevada Conference and superintendent of two districts — San Jose and Redwood-Shasta.

Named Chairman

Dr. Harold K. Graves, president of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Strawberry, has been named chairman of the Inter-Agency Council of the Southern Baptist Convention of Nashville, Tenn.

Pastors And Chaplains Conference Tuesday

A pastors and chaplains conference will be held for three days beginning Tuesday at the Golden Gate Baptist Seminary in Strawberry.

The annual conference is sponsored by the seminary and the division of chaplaincy of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention in Atlanta, Ga.

Speakers will include W. Morgan Patterson, associate professor of church history at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.; George W. Cummins, division of chaplaincy director of the Home Mission Board, and Col. B. C. Trant, Hamilton Air Force Base chaplain.

Highlighting the convention will be discussions of "Issues in Church State Relations" by Dr. Arthur Insko and Dr. W. A. Carleton, both of the seminary, and Patterson; "Meeting the Present Crisis" by Lowell Sodeman and Richard McKay, assistant directors of the industrial chaplaincy of the Home Mission Board, and Cummins, and "Current Trends in Religious Education" by Dr. Roger Skelton, Geil Davis and J. C. Bradley, all of the seminary staff.

PULPIT GUEST — Rev. Herbert E. Gordon, member of the Presbytery of San Francisco, will speak at tomorrow's 10 a.m. service at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo. His topic will be "God and Space." He is the father of Rev. Roswell C. Gordon, the church's associate minister.

Meeting Of Baptist Laymen Is Announced

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—A meeting of Baptist laymen from about a dozen Baptist conventions in North America is scheduled to be held here July 3-6.

Owen Cooper of Yazoo City, Miss., chairman of an ad hoc committee making plans for the meeting, to be called the Baptist Men's Congress on Evangelism and Lay Involvement, expressed hope that as many as 3,500 to 4,000 Baptist laymen and their pastors will attend.

Drive Starts Soon For Church Organ

A campaign to raise $30,000 for a huge new pipe organ for St. Paul's Episcopal Chruch in San Rafael will begin March 30, members of the congregation decided at its annual meeting.

The organ, which will have between 2,500 and 3,000 pipes and will take two years to install, will be made available to serious students and for organ concerts.

Mercy Project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Baptist World reports that Britain's 300,000 Baptists will be asked to give at least a day's pay in 1969 to help people in underdeveloped countries.

Musical To Benefit Church In Marin City

The Church of All Faiths of Corte Madera, an affiliate of the American Baptist Convention, will present "a night of music" tomorrow at 8 p.m. as a benefit to the building fund of the Village Baptist Church of Marin City.

Several years ago it was the Village Baptist Church which offered its help to the Corte Madera church in completing its new building at 5461 Paradise Drive.

"It is our turn now to help the Village Baptist Church in its building program through a special evening offering," said Rev. Joseph L. Hughes, pastor of the Corte Madera church.

Special music will be presented by Alma Wells, a well-knowned Marin lyric soprano; the Golden Gaters, a barbershop quartet; Charles Allen, baritone from San Francisco; Lee Faulkner and Donald E. Carroll Sr., both of the church.

Priest Realizes $25,000 In Church-Saving Auction

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest has raised about $25,000 through an auction to keep his slum area parish alive.

Rev. William Donohue organized the two-day auction last weekend to raise part of the $50,000 needed to keep Sacred Heart Church and School open for another year.

Sacred Heart is in a Negro neighborhood. Its parishioners are poor and most of the 220 pupils in the school are non-Catholic.

The Diocese of Buffalo told Father Donohue that Sacred Heart had become too great a drain on the diocese and would be closed and merged with another parish unless it could raise $50,000 a year in self-help funds.

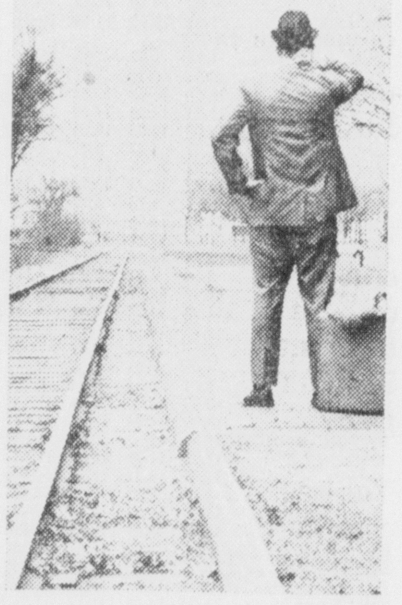
The 30-year-old priest, known to his congregation as "Father Bill," contacted 200 people and asked them to donate their time or goods to the auction to raise the money.

Among those assisting was Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y. He climbed up on a stuffed pink elephant and auctioned it for $100.

Text Selected For Training

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—The 1969 annual Assemblies of God Sunday School training program is under way, with more than 50,000 persons expected to participate during the year.

Each year a new training text is added to the curriculum for Sunday School teachers and officers in the Assemblies of God. The 1969 text, titled "Teaching for Christian Maturity," was written by Dr. George M. Flattery, president of the denomination's International Correspondence Institute.



...the way

The fast tempo of these times is enough to make one wonder whether he's coming or going. There's got to be a fixed point of departure and return.

The Christian faith is rooted deeply in the lives of those who have found Jesus Christ to be the beginning and the ending of all their "to and fro" meanderings in the earth.

It was to a confused disciple that Jesus said:

"I am the way, the truth and the life." John 14:6

Redwood Breezes; Marin Catholic Stuns Tam

As usual, there were four winners and four losers last night as the Marin County Athletic League opened the second half of its round-robin basketball schedule, but of the former, Redwood High School of Larkspur and Marin Catholic of Kentfield had extra reason for elation.

The league-leading Giants from Redwood looked better than ever as they avenged their only MCAL loss by routing San Rafael High 82-54, and the Wildcats gained their second win of a trying season in exciting fashion, upsetting Tamalpais of Mill Valley 54-53 in the last seven seconds.

In other games, second-place Novato High ran over Drake of San Anselmo 80-64 and Terra Linda High breezed past winless San Marin of Novato, 67-47.

The Redwood-San Rafael clash lost some luster when it was learned that Bulldog center Bill Sleezer had undergone an appendectomy the night before and would not play, but his teammates kept pace with the homecourt Giants for a quarter before the dam broke. With their fast break in high gear, the hosts ran of 50 points in the second and third quarters to end the argument.

Jerry Piro was superb for Redwood, grabbing 10 rebounds to share team leadership with Jim Peters and notching his season high of 27 points. While both of Redwood's 6-foot-, 6-inch postmen, sophomore Bill Challender and newly-eligible transfer Pete Webb, fouled out in the last period, they were not missed, as the issue was no longer in doubt.

Bruce Nave scored 20 points for San Rafael, which had beaten the Giants 56-55 a month earlier.

Tam and Marin Catholic both shot poorly early in their contest, but settled down to a basket-trading thriller in the last period. The Indians had a four-point lead with 17 seconds to go when Marin's Mike Parnow threw in a jumper, closing the deficit to 53-52. Whereupon Tam was fouled, missed the free shot, the 'Cats got the rebound, ran a fast break, and Mike Murray's layup with seven seconds left did the job.

Murray's 12 points and Steve Telender's 13 led Marin Catholic, while Bill Secor had 17 for Tam.

Ed Herrnberger and Steve McNally produced 25 points apiece as the Novato Hornets kept a game behind Redwood by outrunning Drake 80-64.

Novato got off to a quick 19-14 lead after a quarter and was never headed, despite 21 markers by Clark Jamison of the Pirates. Mark Silverman had 12 and Bill McClain and Brian Gaddy had nine each for Drake, while Chris Brush's nine followed the heavy artillery for Novato.

The Hornets, now 6-2 to Redwood's 7-1, thus stayed on the Giants' necks, a state of affairs that might last until the last game of the season, when Redwood treks to Novato.

Terra Linda High's Trojans remained in a tie for third in the MCAL behind Redwood and Novato by beating neophyte San Marin 67-47 at Terra Linda.

League-leading scorer Pat Purcell canned 23 points for Terra Linda, followed by Mike Peden's 16 and Mike Timmel's 10. Gary Howard topped San Marin as usual, with 21 points.

Fellas, A Joke's A Joke, But Golly . .

(News note: "His selection as commissioner of baseball not only surprised the sports world but the new commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, himself, who found out about it only a short time before the announcement.")

The scene is the front porch of Murchison Figbert, a certified public accountant, on a shady street in Peoria. It is early morning as a group of men in striped trousers, led by a portly old party with hexagonal glasses, a long cigar and a holder, and ashes on his protruding vest, pushes the doorbell. Murchison, still in his pajamas, his hair in his eyes and shaving cream around his ears, gropes to answer the door. The portly old man speaks, hand outthrust:

Portly: "Congratulations, Murchison, I am Walter O'Portly and you have just been selected commissioner of baseball!"

Murchison (suspicious): "Wait a minute! Whatever it is you're selling, I don't want any. Try next door."

O'Portly (hastily): "We already have. There's no one home there or HE would have been commissioner. No, Murchison, we're not selling anything. We're offering you a job at $100,000 a year and all the free martinis you can drink and still say 'No comment' coherently."

Need A Tennis Commissioner?

Murchison (dumbfounded): "But I don't know anything about baseball! I never even played it. Tennis is my game. Can't you make me commissioner of tennis?"

O'Portly: "Tut, tut, Murchison. All you have to know is the infield fly rule. McClurg, explain the infield fly rule to the commissioner. You don't? Well, never mind, Murchison. We'll hire somebody and put him in charge of the infield fly rule. You just say 'It's a league matter,' if it comes up."

Murchison (banging himself on the side of the head to be sure he is hearing right): "Fellows, a joke's a joke, but I'll be late for the office!"

O'Portly (smoothly): "No, no, Murchison. We have a limousine ready and your private plane to fly you to your new offices in the Empire State Building. We've rented an entire floor and we already have a list of prepared statements for you to make in any emergency. And a portable phone with a direct line to me at any time of the day or night. You may turn it off at night, but first you say, 'Good Night, Walter,' and give your longitude and latitude and estimated duration of sleep."

Complicated Ventriloquism Act

Murchison: "But I'm only a CPA! The press will crucify me. They'll call me 'Baseball's hidden debit' or 'The double bookkeeping,' or they say I'm going to change the name of the Red Sox to the Red Inks. Shouldn't you at least get a guy who has SEEN a game?"

O'Portly: "My boy, we know what we are doing. You see, what we need from you is a kind of complicated ventriloquism act. All you have to do is make sure they don't see my mouth move when YOU answer a question."

Murchison (desperate): "Shouldn't you get Stan Musial? Yogi Berra? Babe Ruth?"

O'Portly (desperate now, too): "Listen, Murchison, you're the 50,000th guy we've offered this to. I mean, consider we started at the Hudson River. My finger is sore from ringing doorbells. We stuck a pin in phone books from Hoboken to Harrisburg. We called phone numbers at random. We've advertised in the personal columns. We've wired every 'John Smith' in the country. We thought we lined up a guy in Tampa who was perfect for the commissioner. He's been in a coma for 11 years. But it turned out he'd once heard a game on the radio."

Gen. Watzisname Got Cobwebs

Murchison: "What happened to the commissioner you had—Gen. Watzisname?"

O'Portly (thoughtfully): "He got cobwebs, it got to be too much trouble to get the spiders out and chase the birds off his shoulders everytime we needed him at a World Series game."

Murchison (excited): "Wait a minute! I think I've got the man for you! A buddy of mine lives right down the street here and is an animal trainer . . ."

O'Portly (frowning): "An animal trainer! Sounds a bit too spunky and lively for what we had in mind."

Murchison (shouting): "Not him, dummy! His trained seal! His trained seal would be absolutely perfect for the commissioner of baseball! You can get him for 100,000 herrings in a bucket of water and he'll not only run the game for you but he'll play "Stars and Stripes Forever" for you on a bunch of bicycle horns before every game!"

Girl Jockey Wins Praise After Her Historic Ride

MIAMI (AP) — One Hialeah rail bird told another: "From now on when the morning line says 'No Boy' on a horse, it means Diane Crump is riding."

Not quite, it still means no jockey. But the tack rooms and paddocks of the major pari-mutuel thoroughbred tracks in America no longer are a man's world.

Diane Crump, 20, a cute blonde exercise girl who forgets things when she gets excited—and probably was the only jockey blushing while saddling up—pushed a slow horse for a mile and one-eighth yesterday, placing 10th in the 12-horse First Family Purse.

But even most male jockeys praised her ride and it was a first for any woman in this country.

"I did okay for the first time. Everything was just as I expected," Diane said later, her red and white silks and pink face heavily splattered with track mud.

DIANE CRUMP
Barrier breaker

Another girl jockey, Annbeth Reineit, 20, of Oslo, Norway, who has ridden only against girls on European tracks, watched Diane climb aboard the skittish Bridle 'n Bit owned by Tom Calumet of Chicago.

"I don't believe women can ride against professional jockeys. I don't believe she can be that good," Miss Reineit said.

But after the race the blonde Norwegian shook her head and her firm opposition: "She rode very well. She didn't do anything wrong. The horse was just no good."

Unknown to most of the crowd of 15,791, Diane began and ended by forgetting important details. In the starting gate she was listening to jockey Craig Perret give tips on how to handle Bridle 'n Bit when he interrupted to say, "Diane, you'd better put your goggles down." She had forgotten.

Riding past Rooney's Shield in the winner's circle, Diane apparently was rattled by cheers for her from the crowd, who apparently backed her in spirit although not at the tote windows. She dismounted and walked away without unsaddling her 50-1 horse for the weigh-in.

SCHEDULED AGAIN

Before she got the mud washed off, the Woodmount, Conn., girl who began riding when her family moved to Oldsmar, Fla., six years ago, was scheduled to go to the post here again next Tuesday—once again aboard Bridle 'n Bit.

Other girls have been assigned horses at major tracks—Penny Ann Early at Churchill Downs and Barbara Jo Rubin at Tropical, but in both cases jockey boycotts stymied the girls. At Tropical, 11 paid $100 fines for their action.

Several jockeys, including Hialeah leader Angel Cordero Jr., took themselves off mounts in the seventh race when Diane was entered. But seven others agreed to replace them and a full field of 12 went to the post.

Veteran jockey Manuel Ycaza—unsaddled by a five-day suspension—gave this opinion of Diane's ride: "She broke well, kept her horse out of trouble and drove when she should have. I wouldn't know what somebody else could have done with the horse."

Marin Tars Host DeAnza In Key Contest Tonight

More than a two-game winning streak will be on the line tonight in Kentfield when the College of Marin Tars host DeAnza College of Cupertino in a key Camino Norte Conference basketball test at 8 o'clock.

DeAnza wants to: Come back from its Wednesday loss to West Valley College in Campbell, a setback that seriously hampered the Dons' chances of overtaking unbeaten Contra Costa (20-3, eighth ranked in the state) in the CNC.

Marin's Tars want to: Prove they should have won their previous meeting, a 75-74 DeAnza win that still smarts, keep their winning string intact, and take over the role of pretender to Contra Costa's crown.

Marin (9-11) and 18th-rated DeAnza (15-7) are superficially alike, according to Tar coach Cal Riemcke. "We both like to take it easy and work our patterns, use muscle under the boards and play some defense," he said. Riemcke added his club matches up well with the Dons, but falls shy an inch or so in height at a couple of positions.

Center Cary Mitchell and forward John Seraceno, both 6 feet, 6 inches, are the frontline big men and leading scorers for DeAnza. Seraceno has averaged 14.8 points per game, and Mitchell 12.7, while guard Jim Martin runs the offense. John Dybvig adds outside shooting to the Don attack.

Riemcke will counter with the same starting five as has opened in recent weeks — Andre Horn and Daryl Ravani at guards, Tom Seidenberg and Ches Bornia at forwards, and Pat Schafer at center. Bob Tait and Gary Hanson, both impressive of late, will likely see action as subs.

Due to a conflicting Stanford game, the Marin contest will not be televised on Channel 38 as had been earlier announced.

Trevino In Good Position

PALM SPRINGS (UPI) — Rod Funseth has a cold and tough La Quinta to worry about today while Lee Trevino, the imperturable Texan, has it virtually made by playing the easier Indian Wells course in the fourth round of the $100,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament.

Funseth, the 35-year-old pro from San Jose, shot a one over 71 in the third round yesterday at Tamarisk and Trevino, the U. S. Open champ now playing his best golf of the year, matched it with a 71 at La Quinta.

That put Funseth at 10 under par 206 with two rounds to go in the 90-hole Hope Classic and Trevino at nine under 207.

La Quinta generally is regarded as the toughest course in the Hope this year and Indian Wells the easiest. La Quinta is a long and narrow layout while Indian Wells is shorter, although it, too, is fairly narrow.

The Hope is anything but a two-horse race for the top prize of $20,000.

TRAIL TREVINO

Two strokes behind Trevino with seven under par totals of 209 are Frank Beard, Art Wall, Gene Littler and Orville Moody, while at 210 are Bob Charles and Billy Casper.

Moody, from Killeen, Texas, got into the chase with the best competitive round of his career—a four under 68 at La Quinta in the third round.

Wall long as been one of the top pros around but a chronic back condition has slowed him down a number of times. Thus far, his back has been holding up as reflected by his sub-par rounds of 69-69-71.

Casper, who struggled in both the Crosby and Andy Williams tournaments, seems to have regained his putting eye. If that's so, then he is the man to

U.S. Skaters Shoot For Sweep Tonight

OAKLAND (AP) — With two titles tucked away—by tiny Janet Lynn in ladies' singles and Ronald and Cindy Kauffman in pairs—the United States tries for a sweep over Canada tonight in the North American Figure Skating Championships.

Tim Wood of Detroit takes a 770-point bulge over Jay Humphrey of Vancouver, B.C., into the men's free skating. Judy Schomeyer of Indianapolis and James Sladky of Rochester, N.Y., try to hold their 4.4-point lead over Donna Taylor and Bruce Lennie of Toronto in free dance.

Ronald Kauffman, 22, and Cindy, 20, received a standing ovation from the crowd of 8,014 after their clockwork performance last night.

The four-time U.S. pairs champions from Seattle received 5.9 points out of a possible 6.0 from two of the seven judges for technical merit and 5.9 from three of the judges for artistic expression.

RUGGED RONALD

With the rugged 6-foot-3 Ronald twirling Cindy and her flashing skates over his head, the brother-sister team compiled 325 points for two nights of performances, compared with 309.6 for JoJo Starbuck and Kenneth Shelley of Los Angeles.

The Canadian champions, Anna Forder and Richard Stephens of Fort Perry, Ont., finished fifth at 289.1 while the No. 2 Canadian couple, Mary Petrie and Robert McAvoy of Toronto, took third at 285.4.

"It was our highest point total ever," Cindy Kauffman said. Ronald, stationed in the Army at Ft. Carson, Colo., hopes to get his pilot's license. "I'd rather skate than fly but I've got to

Lew Sparks UCLA Charge; Cal Romps, Stanford Loses

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA basketball Coach John Wooden says he never expected to be behind at halftime but that's just where the nation's top - ranked college team was against a determined group of Washington Huskies.

But the Bruins survived and did it with Lew Alcindor playing defense and acting like a guard.

The Bruins wound up last night with a thrilling 62 - 51 triumph in a Pacific - 8 game, one of four played.

In other Pac-8 games, Washington State edged Southern Cal 72 - 70 in overtime, California crushed Oregon State 69 - 57 and Oregon tripped Stanford 74-72.

UCLA was down 33-29 at halftime against the Huskies. It was the first time in the short history of Pauley Pavilion that UCLA had trailed at intermission. But that didn't last long.

UCLA's fast break got the first five points after halftime for a short lead and midway through the half, Alcindor exploded defensively.

The 7-foot-1½ center stole a pass, dribbled the length of the court and passed off to teammate Lynn Shackelford for an easy basket.

ANOTHER STEAL

Seconds later, Alcindor duplicated the feat, but this time went all the way in for a solo basket and UCLA suddenly had a 48-43 lead.

The WSU-USC game was one of missed opportunities.

The Cougars' Dennis Hogg missed a shot at the end of regulation that might have won the game. The score was tied 67-67.

Both teams made 26 field goals but the Cougars hit on 20 of 29 foul shots for the victory. USC had 33 attempts but could hit on only 18.

Cal's 6-10 center, Bob Presley, concentrated on defense and held 7-foot Vic Bartolome to just seven points in the Golden Bear victory.

Charlie Johnson scored 19 points and Jackie Ridgle 18 in the triumph. Bill More got 23 for the losers.

CLASSY RESERVE

Oregon used only five starters and a reserve in chalking up its first Pac-8 victory but the reserve was Leonard Jackson.

Jackson, previously just a bench warmer, scored 14 points to share team scoring honors with Stan Love.

Stanford's Don Griffin, who had 28 points, missed a short jump shot with three seconds left in the game that would have tied it.

The Bruins remained unbeaten with their triumph and are now 5-0 in Pac-8 play.

Washington State, scheduled to take on the Bruins at Pauley Pavilion today, increased their Pac-8 mark to 5-1.

Washington dipped to 4-2; California evened up at 3-3; Southern Cal dropped to 2 - 3, Oregon State and Oregon are 1-4 and Stanford is 1-5.

Miss Lynn, Kaufmans Win Skating Titles

make a living," he said.

Miss Lynn, a pert blonde 15-year-old from Rockford, Ill., received four first-place votes in ladies' free skating to nip Karen Magnussen, 16, of Vancouver, by 1.4 points in the over-all standings.

STRONG COMEBACK

Miss Lynn, the U.S. champion, made up 13 points after trailing Miss Magnussen after the compulsory figures. Both faltered on the double loop in free skating.

"I had a letdown Thursday night but I feel I skated very well tonight," said Miss Lynn, who went out last on the chopped-up ice.

Ths Canadian champ, Linda Carbonetto, 19, of Toronto, pulled up from fifth to third while Tina Noyes, 20, of Colorado Springs, Colo., slipped to fourth despite a flawless exhibition.

Wood, a 19-year-old pre-law student at John Carroll University in Cleveland, was placed first in the men's compulsory figures by all seven judges.

Third behind Humphrey was John Misha Petkevich, a Harvard student from Great Falls, Mont. Gary Visconti of Detroit was fourth.

In dance, Debbie Gerken and Raymond Tiedemann of New York moved up from fourth to third, followed by Mary Church and Tom Falls of Toronto.

Bermuda Dunes is the fourth course used in the Hope classic. After today's round each of the pros will have played one round on all four courses and the cut for the final round will be made at the low 70 and ties.

Barry Injured As Oaks Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Superstar Rick Barry was injured and carried from the court on a stretcher late in a 124-122 Oakland Oak victory over Kentucky.

Barry suffered what an Oakland trainer said might be a pinched nerve during overtime in last night's contest.

Before being carried out, Barry scored 41 points for the Oaks, who came from behind to knot the count at 115-115 at the final whistle.

Barry was scheduled for X-rays today at a local hospital.

The winning baskets were two free throws by Ira Harge.

The Oaks outscored the Colonels 28-26 and 26-23 in the final two periods to send the game into overtime.

Sonoma State's Streak Snapped

Hayward State College snapped Sonoma State's three-game winning streak with a chilling 92-91 basketball verdict at Hayward last night.

Sonoma State came back to tie the score at 84-84 after trailing by 52-41 at halftime, but couldn't avert its eighth Far Western Conference loss against a lone win.

Ray Solomon led Sonoma State with 30 points.

LOVING COUPLE FIGHTS IT OUT

Light-heavyweights Paul Johnson (white trunks) of New York City and Jimmy Dupree of Jersey City, N.J., couldn't stay away from each other during their fight in Madison Square Garden as they grappled like wrestlers, finally falling intertwined. Referee Teddy Martin had to unravel the mess and help them up. Dupree won on a technical knockout in the ninth round.

New Shoe Curtails Football Injuries

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A shoe developed at West Point drew interest yesterday from professional football representatives at a two-day workshop on football injuries sponsored by the National Research Council.

Dr. John B. Kress, associate director of physical education at the U.S. Military Academy, discussed the shoe. It has four short cleats in the front, but none on its flat, slightly corrugated heel.

INTRAMURAL TEST

"We designed it pretty much ourselves and experimented with it for about five years," Kress told newsmen. "We use it only in our intramural program. While using it, we've had 33 knee injuries, almost all of them insignificant, and that's in 10,000 man hours of play.

"Only one of those injuries required surgery," Kress added.

Kress explained that the flat heel, unlike other heels, allows a leg to swivel when hit from the side rather than stay implanted in the ground, making a man less prone to knee injuries.

Dr. Fred C. Reynolds, team physician of the St. Louis Cardinals, program chairman, said, "Mainly we are trying to find out the state of our knowledge of the types of research on preventing injuries, in number and severity, and to promote further investigation that might change the injury picture."

OVEREMPHASIZED

Some of the professional football people at the workshop said football injuries were being overemphasized. Reynolds, when asked if he thought this was true, gave an emphatic "No."

"Numbers are not quite as important as severity," Reynolds said. "I don't think over a period of years we've had more injuries. We've had good years and bad years as far as that goes. But when they do occur and are severe, they can influence a team's ability to compete."

Petaluma Loses Second Straight

Slumping Petaluma High School's basketball team, with top scorer Pete Daggett "held" to 18 points, lost its second straight North Bay League contest last night, bowing to Hogan High, 69-66, at Vallejo.

Daggett had hit over 30 points in his last three games. The rest of the Trojans couldn't quite pick up the slack, despite 21 points by Larry Riis.

Larry Husband scored 23 points and Terry Sumpter 21 for the winners. Petaluma is now 14-6 won-lost on the season, and 5-4 in league play.

St. Vincent's Beats San Rafael Cadets

St. Vincent's High School of Petaluma needed a final period splurge to hold back San Rafael Military Academy, 73-66, in a Bay Counties League basketball game at Petaluma yesterday.

St. Vincent's led 41-26 at the half but the Cadets scored 40 points in the second half to make it close.

Steve Johnson and Mike Freitas topped the winners with 18 points each while Mike Lakes poured in 24 piints for the Cadets. The St. Vincent's junior varsity also won, 60-34.

Santa Clara Rolls Over Loyola Five

Surging on and on are the Santa Clara Broncos, undefeated this basketball season and now third ranked nationally.

They whipped Loyola of Los Angeles in a West Coast Athletic Conference game 82-65 last night to boost their season record to 19-0.

Dennis Awtrey and Ralph Ogden each scored 30 points to spark the victory.

In addition to hitting the hoop repeatedly, the Broncos held control with command of the boards. Awtrey grabbed 19 rebounds.

Elsewhere in the WCAC, Pepperdine dumped host University of San Francisco 71-64.

Leading the Pepperdine attack was Tom Egerer, with 31 points.

Outstanding in a losing cause was USF's Pete Cross with 32 points. He also tied Bill Russell for the USF record of scoring 30 points or more in four games.

Stanford Hires New Football Assistant

COMBINED AP & UPI

STANFORD — Roger Theder, a former coach at Bowling Green and Northern Illinois, was named an assistant football coach at Stanford University.

Theder will serve as an end coach at Stanford where he was a volunteer assistant last year while teaching at nearby College of San Mateo.

Theder, 29, is a graduate of Western Michigan University.

BASEBALL

SAN FRANCISCO — Thomas J. Frye, a righthanded pitcher-outfielder who was San Francisco's No. 1 pick in the February free agent draft, has signed a contract with the Giants.

The 6-1, 200-pounder is attending North Carolina State University and lives in Fairmont, N.C.

GENERAL

OAKLAND — The California State Athletic Commission has a new chairman. He is William Houston, Orinda, who succeeds Dan O. Kilroy, Sacramento, for on year.

At the Friday meeting, commissioner Douglas Hawden announced his retirement and the commission tabled a motion by Kilroy that would permit the suturing of cuts on fighters between rounds of a bout.

In addition, the commission granted promoter's licenses to Don Chargin Winterland, San Francisco, Jim Pusateri Oakland Coliseum-Arena and Jim Cosenza Concord High School Auditorium.

FOOTBALL

SAN JOSE — DeWayne Dewey King, former defensive football coach at three colleges, has been named an assistant at San Jose State by new head coach Joe McMullen.

King, 41, has coached at Rutgers, Pennsylvania and Michigan State. At San Jose, he will coach the defensive backs.

An author of a book on pass defense, King is the first assistant to be selected by McMullen, who took over as head coach from Harry Anderson at the end of the 1968 season.

CHICAGO — Joe Fortunato resigned as defensive coach of the Chicago Bears. Fortunado, 38, was a star linebacker for the Bears during 14 National Football League seasons.

TRACK AND FIELD

NEW YORK — Frank Murphy of Villanova won the mile run in 4:04.4 at the Madison Square Garden Invitational meet.

FORT WORTH, Tex. — Willie Davenport equaled the world record of 6.8 seconds in winning the 60-yard high hurdles at the Fort Worth Coaches Indoor Games.

TENNIS

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Okker of Holland defeated Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1 and gained the semifinals of the Philadelphia International Open with Australians Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Tony Roche.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—A committee recommended drastic changes in the setup of the USLTA, including hiring of a commissioner at a salary of $50,000 a year.

BOWLING

DENVER — Jerry McClary of Denver rolled a perfect 300 game in the $45,000 PBA Denver Open.

HORSE RACING

ARCADIA — Nice Mistake, $29, led all the way in winning the feature at Santa Anita by three lengths over Author's Royal.

Warriors Host Royals Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—With the Harlem Globetrotters as a curtain-raiser, the San Francisco Warriors entertain the Cincinnati Royals in a National Basketball Association game tonight at the Cow Palace.

Both the Warriors and the Royals will be without several of their mainstays. Al Attles and Joe Ellis of San Francisco are injured as is Jerry Lucas of Cincinnati, which will also be without Tom Van Arsdale who must attend an Air Force Reserve meeting.

The Globetrotters, court jesters of the game, face the New York Nationals in the first game at 7 o'clock.

"How can I tell which part of my sock goes in the back? There's no tag in it."

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday Feb. 8 the 39th day of 1969 with 326 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1587 Mary Queen of Scots was beheaded after being charged with plotting the murder of Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1940 every 10th person of two villages near Warsaw, Poland was shot in repirsal for the deaths of two German soldiers.

In 1963 Premier Karim Kassim of Iraq was overthrown in a military coup. He was executed the following day.

In 1964 Princess Irene of the Netherlands renounced her right to the throne to marry Spanish Prince Juan Carlos. They were wed two months later.

A thought for the day: Amos Bronson Alcott said, "Greater is he who is above temptation then he, who being tempted, overcomes."

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes Blindness Can Prevent Making A Contract

We often see what we expect to see rather than what is really there. At the bridge table this kind of blindness prevents us from adopting the winning line of play.

AVERAGE PLAY

Ask the average bridge enthusiast to play today's hand at six spades and he will go down, a victim of blindness. He sees dummy's solitary club as a singleton and therefore ruffs the ten and jack of clubs in dummy. Sooner or later South must try the diamond finesse, losing two diamond tricks.

During the bidding North made a doubtful free raise because he expected his singleton club to provide ruffing tricks. During the play, South is misled by the same illusiion. Actually, the slam is unbeatable if declarer never ruffs a club in dummy.

RUFFS HEARTS

Ater winning the first trick with the ace of hearts South should ruff a heart with a trump honor. South leads a low trump t dummy and ruffs the other low heart with another trump honro. Now South leads his remaining low trump to dummy and returns the singleton club.

When East plays low, South takes a finesse with the ten of clubs. West wins the trick, of course, but then cannot make a safe return.

SOUTH READY

If West returns a club, South wins two clubs and the ace of diamonds to take care of dummy's three low diamonds. If West returns a diamond, South wins two diamonds and the ace of clubs. If West returns a heart, South wins one trump and his two aces, still playing dummy's three low diamonds.

South must see himself as the dummy rather than as declarer. He ruffs out North's losing hearts and sets up North as the master hand.

Family Should Save Social Security Data

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — It's important to know your Social Security status, Penn State University home management specialists note. Every family should have an accessible inventory of all important documents.

Certain documents are needed to make Social Security claims. Among them are: proof of age for both husband and wife; Social Security cards for both; marriage certificate; latest income tax witholding statement, and divorce papers or death certificates, where applicable.

45 Drake Seniors In Scholar Race

Forty-five Drake High School seniors have ranked as semifinals in competition for California state college scholarships.

The students were chosen as a result of a scholastic aptitude test, which required a minimum score of 992.

The semifinalists will be judged further on the basis of financial need and grades. They are required to send financial statements and transcripts of their grades to the scholarship commission if they decide to proceed in the competition.

About 5,800 scholarships will be awarded to incoming college freshmen this year. The winners will be announced about April 11.

Semifinalists from San Anselmo are Dave Alvarado, Sheldon Ball, Chuck Boerger, Murray Bruce, Charles Bryant, Deirdre Bullis, John Cherry, Chris Cone, Jean Cummings, Miriam Forristal, Gary Glenn, Jean Goodman, Ric Harnsberger, Kristi Hein and Judy Hertzel.

Also Kathy Hyde, Marc Jones, Larry Kirkendall, Tim Luders, Laura Mathews, Lucy McGee, Laurie McHatton, Shelley Powers, Becky Reist, Jerry Retke, Terri Rudee, Kathy Schabel, Les Schlaegel, Alicia Snyder, Sylvia Sower, Laura Spence, Dave Tang, Joan Van Arnum and John Wiederhoeft.

Qualifying from Fairfax were Robert Charves, Mike Davlin, Ann-Marie Gare, John Giammona, Diane Giosso, Hervey Grasso, Rowena Orr, and Michele Williamson.

Pat Fahey of Nicasio, Virginia Gilstrap of Woodacre and Chris Wall of Forest Knolls also qualified.

Misdemeanor Charge

A headline in yesterday's Independent-Journal story of court action involving Novato television personality Jay Alexander read that the charge against him was not a misdemeanor, differing with the story. The headline should have read that it was a misdemeanor.

Workshop Set On Pruning Fuchsias

Edward W. Johnson, general chairman of the Redwood Shade Garden Club, will conduct a workshop on pruning fuchsias at 8 p.m. Friday at Whitaker Hall, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Golden Gate and Bay View Avenue, Belvedere.

The Independent-Journal erroneously reported Tuesday that the workshop was to be held Tuesday night.

Scout Drive Team Selected

Southern Sonoma positions have veen filled on the membership team for the Miwok Boy Scout District, according to David A. Rice, Scout executive.

Heading the Petaluma drive is Charles Combs, assisted by Rollan D. Rea, Robert Mattei, David Gessaman and Don Davis. Leading the Penngrove movement will be Raymond Morita, assisted by Arthur Matson.

Cottai membership chairman is Michael Ohannesian. He will be aided by Lester H. Petersen, Gene Bennett and Stephen Jones.

City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan and Robert Walters will lead the Rohnert Park effort. Leon Beck, assistetd by Roy Faught, will will handle the drive in Bloomfield, Valley Ford, Tomales, Marshall, Bodega and Bodega Bay.

15 Petaluma Seniors Feted For Scholarship

Fifteen students of Petaluma Senior High School have been honored in the annual Bank of America achievement awards program, according to Dr. Dan Montgomery, principal.

Four students won plaques for achievements in special fields and may compete for awards ranging up to $1,000. They are Derek Lorenz, science and mathematics; Debbie Yates, fine arts; Terri Miller, liberal arts, and Anne Wong, vocational arts.

Cited for superior performance were Hannelore Jordt, business; Pat Brown, foreign languages; Dan Hollis, mathematics; Darryl Tsujihara, laboratory science; Terry Jensen, music; Richard Prentiss, industrial arts; Eileen Woebling, home economics; Kathy Kneeland, art; Marge Pippus, English and Jim Arnett, social studies.

The winners were chosen by the faculty.

Boat Works Reports Thefts From Craft

Garvie Boat Works at 60 Bay Street, San Rafael, reported to police yesterday that a record player, telescope and spotlight were taken from a 42-foot boat being repaired.

L. R. Custer, of San Francisco, the boat's owner, estimated the loss at $310.

Absentee Ballot Deadline Is Set

Absentee ballots for San Rafael Elementary School District's $2.1 million bond election Feb. 18 must reach the county clerk's office in the Marin County Courthouse in San Rafael no later than Tuesday.

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported Feb. 3 that such ballots need not reach the clerk's office till Feb. 17.

Absentee ballots are available at the courthouse or by writing to Peter Meyer, elections officer, Courthouse, San Rafael.

Innocent Plea To Credit Card Forgery

Richard Anthony Conte, 31, of Corte Madera, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of credit card forgery. A preliminary hearing was set for 9:30 a.m. March 4.

Conted was arrested Jan. 25 after an Emporium security guard described him, officers said.

689 Donate Blood During Last Month

The Irwin Memorial Blood bank reported an all-time record of 689 blood donors visited the Marin Blood Center during January.

The Marin center, at 506 Fourth Street, San Rafael, gave an appeal for help after other communities across the nation reported a critical blood shortage.

Alto Firefighting Plan Is Refused

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire Protection District board has turned down a Mill Valley proposal to share fire protection of the Alto commercial strip recently annexed to Mill Valley.

The board Thursday night said it was not interested in "hit and miss" protection and should be responsible either for all the strip or for none of it, Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr. said. The city proposed Alto protect only the developed parts of the strip, Heynen said.

The board also hired Fred Lepage as an extra deputy fireman and made permanent the appointment of Michael Thompson as lieutenant.

The first vaudeville theater in America, the Gaiety Museum, opened in Boston in 1883.

The Editor's Notebook

Heroes Becoms Villains As The Years Roll By

EVERY GENERATION produces its share of observers who come to believe the world has turned topsy-turvy.

If you are a newspaper editor (or a newspaper reader) there are times when you think such observations may be correct.

If you read the editor's mail and eaves-dropped on his telephone conversations over the past couple of decades, you would be sure the world is all mixed up.

IN THE FIRST WEEK of February of 1949, for instance, a fearless editorial criticizing the Northwestern Pacific Railroad (and its corporate parent, Southern Pacific) would have resulted in (1) cries of righteous indignation and denunciation from the railroad as well as frowns from local business leaders, wondering what had loosened the fearless editor's trolly, and (2) a few surreptitious words of agreement and approval from some who wouldn't want anyone to know they harbored misgivings about the mighty NWP-SP.

If any editor wants reaction today, he needs only to write an editorial lauding and praising NWP and SP. The mail will bulge with signed denunciations of railroads in general, NWP and SP in particular, and especially for newspaper editors who find anything good to say about these public villains.

In many respects, railroads — including NWP and SP — are doing a better job than ever. But you don't see many editorial comments to this effect from fearless editors.

THE TELEPHONE COMPANY, PG&E, Greyhound, the airlines and even the Golden Gate Bridge Board fall into the same category as NWP and the other railroads.

They are all doing in many respects a better job for the public than ever before. But you don't see much editorial comment to that effect.

If a fearless editor want to be denounced, excoriated, criticized and damned, he needs only to write something commendatory about today's set of public villains.

Two decades ago, if you editorially blamed anything on "subversives," you were sure to be accused of "red-baiting" and waving a red herring.

Write today that dedicated revolutionaries are among instigators of campus turmoil and you get a batch of letters of applause and agreement.

Criticize the church editorially 20 years ago and you would be lucky to avoid being run out of town. (It did happen to some California editors only two decades ago.) Write an editorial today extolling the accomplishments of the church and you are the target of snide criticism.

If you spoke out against freeways and highway development in 1949, you risked denunciation. Speak out today in favor of highway development or freeway extension and you are certain of denunciation, from a different quarter.

Give the loggers the editorial devil for descecrating our forest two decades ago and you were certain to be the target for powerful reprisals. Praise the commercial lumber interests' reforestration operations now and powerful guns of organized conservationists will unlimber their criticism upon you.

The list of topsy-turvy comparisons can be endless.

HOW DOES AN EDITOR MAINTAIN his equilibrium?

Nature has provided for that.

Scar tissue gives you a tougher hide as you grow older.

Right Man For The Job

Occasionally some appointment to high public office causes us to exclaim, "There's a really first-class choice of the man for the job."

Such was the case with announcement yesterday of appointment of Jerome B. Gilbert, general manager of the North Marin Water District, to be executive officer of the California Water Resources Control Board.

"Jerry" Gilbert has headed the North Marin district for 10 years. They have been years of great growth, and he has guided that growth expertly. He has worked well with the district board and with its citizens. He has proved knowledgeable about water problems and district operations, and willing to share his knowledge. Recently, as chairman of the Bay Area Water Quality Control Board, he has demonstrated his ability anew in a field very similar to that which will be his in the state post.

Besides all that, Gilbert has been that almost-rarity among salaried public servants: a man who always gives straight answers to straight questions, and never tries to hide the truth. That has earned him special respect among those of us who gather and report the news.

Bouquets And Brickbat

BOUQUET to the Marin County Transit District Board for its unanimous approval of the proposal to turn inter-county bus operation over to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, which has the money to do the job. We trust the transit district will now get busy on a feeder bus system for Marin, without which improved inter-county service can do little to relieve the traffic snarl.

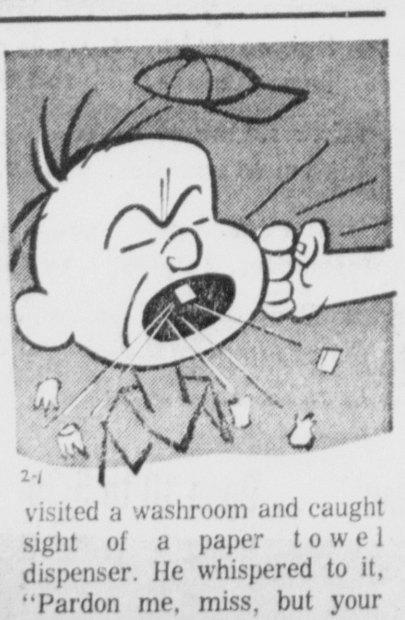
BRICKBAT to John A. Miskimen for voting as a Bay Area Air Pollution Control District director for a ban on backyard burning, despite the fact that the San Rafael City Council, of which he is a member, had gone on record—along with almost every other city council in Marin—against the proposal.

BOUQUET to the San Rafael City Council majority of Fred E. Jensen, Harry A. Barbier and Frederick C. Robbins Jr. for voting to put the proposed city lease-purchase golf course to referendum of the people before obligating taxpayers for it.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

Mother Manges was gratified. "You see, Jerry," she beamed, "I told you that was a nice little boy next door. I was glad to observe from the window just now that you had made friends with him and were helping him pick up his marbles." "Marbles!" scoffed Jerry. "I socked him in the jaw. Those weren't marbles; those were teeth!"



Jane Morgan claims she knows a producer whose weekly salary now goes to five figures: three redheads and two blondes.

A visitor from outer space visited a washroom and caught sight of a paper towel dispenser. He whispered to it, "Pardon me, miss, but your slip is showing."

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

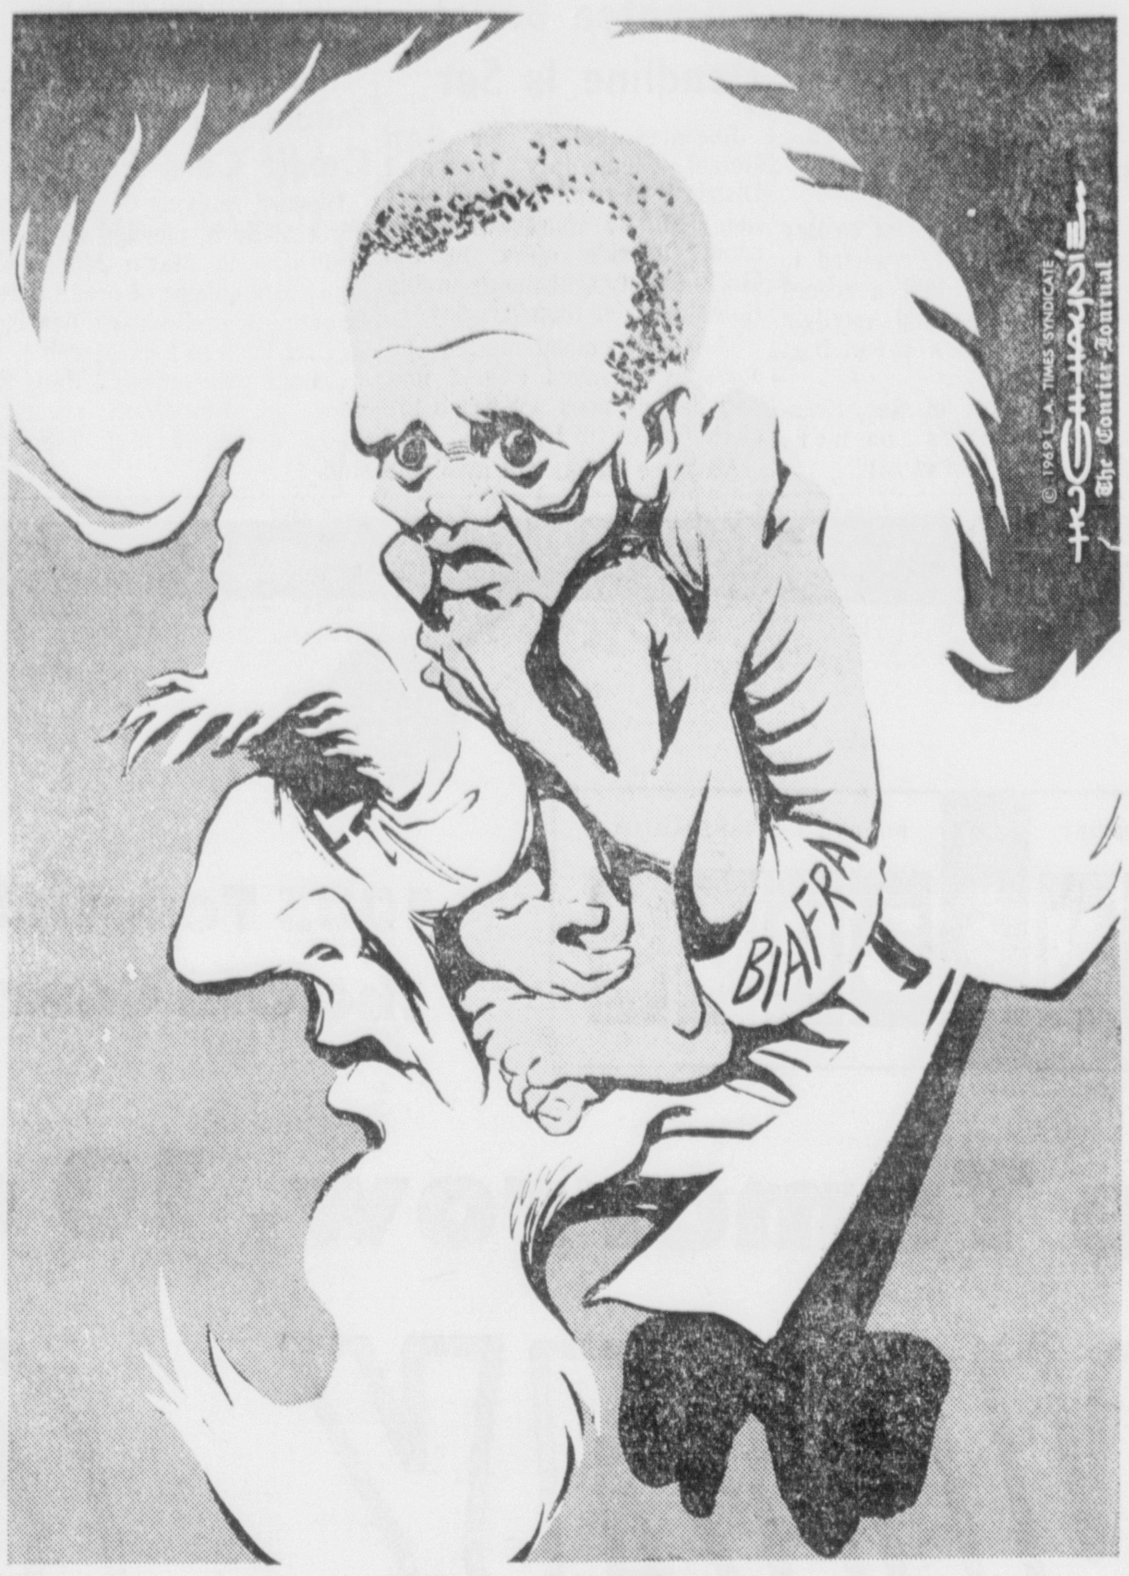
Feb. 8, 1959

Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, proposed a single authority to operate bridges, airports and seaports in the Bay Area.

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 8, 1949

Consultant Paul J. Leonard recommended a $2 million expansion program for San Rafael schools, including consolidation with the San Pedro School District and construction of schools in Sun Valley and Santa Venetia.



A Matter of Conscience

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Why Is Maillard Silent On Pueblo?

We have all been wondering why our Congressman William Mailliard has not spoken out on the USS Pueblo. Is it because he has made himself a rear admiral in the Navy and does not want to disturb them? He should help the men — many of them residents of California.

I think it is possible to fault the student activists at San Francisco State and elsewhere for a bad choice of tactics. Some of their professed goals are good and valid while others are nonsense but their tactics are very like to be "counter-productive," as I believe the fashionable terminology goes.

The ideals of the "left" are not usually the sort of things that can be quickly absorbed emotionally; that is, such concepts as mutual responsibility and the universal brotherhood of all life, or all mammals, or at least all mankind. On the other hand, the right thrives on instinctive Xenophobia, fear of "those others."

Now the technique of the activists has been the use of emotional pressure and confrontation rather than the use of reason. Once this precedent has been firmly set, it is certain the right will, some day, counter-attack with the same weapons and these are their long suit. Emotional exhortations to the defense of the cross and the flag, when turned up to a frenzied pitch, are practically irresistible. Further, if such a counter-attack comes with all stops out, the results will not only be disastrous to the goals of the left, but could easily be disastrous to the world in general.

Confusion Abounds In Pueblo Story

The Pueblo story gets more complicated each week. In one sentence Admiral Johnson had assistance for the Pueblo on call. Lieutenant Commander Clark claimed there were neither ships nor planes in position to come to the aid of the Pueblo on time.

Yet Commander Bucher's SOS was quickly implemented by U.S bombers from a South Korean base, which were over Pueblo in less than half an hour! Before they could scatter the enemy, they received orders to disengage and go home! Why?

Justice Brings Family's Thanks

We wish to express our appreciation for all the hard work the district attorney's office put forth in apprehending the murderers of Shirley and Curtis Ackley and seeing justice brought forth.

This is but humble gratitude that we as a family can express. For the speedy apprehension, the Marin County sheriff's department and the district attorney brought two killers to justice. The killers are Johnny Sommerhalter and Kenneth Preston, both of Santa Rosa.

Without the help of these two offices, justice would have never been sought. As we stated before: Thank you all for seeing justice brought forth.

LINES ON LIVING

Duty Adds The Lustre To Beauty Of Life

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

Ellen Sturgis Hooper observes a fundamental truth of life: "I slept and dreamed that life was beauty. I woke — and found that life was duty."

But where is the truth to be found? Is it in the dream of sleeping, or in the reality of awaking? Is it in the grueling tasks of daily living, or in the drifting euphoric ecstacy? Perhaps the truth lies in the middle. For life is both beauty and duty, intermingled and fused in the balance of co-existence.

The most beautiful things in life, the most satisfying joys of living, the most gratifying experiences of consciousness, are nearest and freest. Money cannot buy them. They are obtained only by one's own powers, in the involvement of the duties of the heart and in the disciplines of the mind. Only by our conscious efforts and liberating toil can we discover them.

THE ARENA of struggle and adventure is everywhere: two persons walk in the street; one gazes into the night and observes the stars, the other dips into the deep black and finds darkness; one is grandiose and listens to the whole world, the other is lonely and hears only his footsteps; one grasps the next opportunity, the other gropes for the next step; one is living in time and building in space, the other is existing in a vacuum.

Beauty is not a hallowed vision unfolding itself to the eye. It is a discovery for those who quest for it dutifully. It is a relationship, not an escape; a reality, not an illusion; a lifetime journey, not a weekend "trip."

ANY THRILL and joy that is sought for its own sake will bring no lasting happiness and no enduring pleasure. The beauty of joy must grow out of the duty of inner struggle, of daring adventure, of a life-consciousness that reaches out into the lives and loves of souls and sights.

It is outgoing engaging duty, not retreating self-indulgent happiness-hunting that will bring us the higher joys of the spirit and the deeper verities and ecstacies of life. The high priests of chemical bliss, the potion gobblers and the dial-a-salvation and see-God proponents, are self-deluding when they seek to crowd the fugitive moment with the eternity of a Heaven or a Hell.

WHEN ELIJAH sought the divine spirit, he found it not in the blaze bursting lightning, neither in the power-crushing earhtquake, nor yet in the energy-sweeping whirlwind. For it was in the still small voice of duty and in the sanctuary of his heart. Because greatness and divine grace are not produced in abrupt, earth-shaking, spectacular and dramatic acts. They are the great works of the small rays of a life of sunshine, sprinkled with the countless drops of the rain of human kindness that lavish growth and warmth to the world.

Whether our duties are great or small, in public life or in private enterprise, in making a living or in keeping a home, in the office or in the plant, in the classroom or in the boiler room, each and everyone of us can feel a sense of satisfaction in fulfilling his duties aright, whatever they may be.

No one summed it up better than Emerson when he linked God to man and made duty the binding element between them: "So nigh is grandeur to our dust, so near is God to man, when duty whispers low, 'Thou must,' the youth replies, 'I can.' "

THE DRUMMONDS

Congressional Reorganization Bill Needs, Deserves Public Support

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — It's Them Against Us, and to most people government is Them.

And unless government moves more to be Us, it is encouraging frustration and violence.

Congress in particular has got to do a better job, and the public will have to push it into doing it.

Majority rule must have more power in Congress, and its creaky machinery must be modernized so that it can transact the public business more openly, more efficiently, and more reponsively.

FORTUNATELY, a package of measures to do this is being put up to the House by a sizable bipartisan group, led by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, R-Ill.

They are modest but useful reforms and all headed in the right direction — toward loosening the stifling dominance of powerful committee chairmen and making Congress more responsive to its own majority so that it can be more responsive to the majority of the people.

There is momentum behind the Rumsfeld push, but we need to bear in mind that most of the senior, powerful members of Congress like self-reform about the way Winnie the Pooh likes sour honey.

This is why strong public support will be needed, and to that end we should know what the reform proposals would do and why they are critical to the Congress and to the country.

SEPARATELY, these reforms are not very exciting but, added together, they go to the heart of making democratic government function more democratically. Here are some of the things they provide:

1—Senate committees must meet on "written consent of a majority of the committee." Sounds innocent, but without it committee chairmen can single-handedly suffocate legislation by refusing to call a meeting.

2—Congressional committee meetings shall be public unless the majority rules otherwise.

3—Roll-call votes on bills within committees shall be made public.

4—A committee chairman must report on the written demand of a committee majority, within seven days, any measure approved by the committee. This is crucial. Some committee chairmen have pigeonholed approved bills for months.

5—No more proxy voting.

6—There shall be a roll-call vote in both houses on all appropriations bills. In the past, billions of dollars have been approved without it being known how anybody voted.

7—Every bill must contain a committee estimate of the cost of carrying it out.

8—There shall be a permanent Joint Committee on Congressional Operations to give continual study to congressional functioning and how to improve it.

THESE ARE NOT casual proposals. Most of them were unanimously urged by the Monroney Joint Committee on Congressional Reorganization in 1967 and passed by the Senate 75 to 9. Then the House Democratic leadership raised its hands in holy horror and arrogantly proved the need of these reforms by keeping them buried in the dark recesses of outdated rules.

These measures are coming forward again at a moment when they are especially important. Many Americans, who want nothing to do with the destructive militants, feel frustrated and on the outside looking in when it comes to the functioning of their government.

Unless Congress wants to feed this frustration and the fuel the cause of violence, it must prove that government by the consent of the governed requires that Congress must be responsible to the majority of the governed. It can only be so when its own majority can put its hands on the levers of Congress.

That's what it is all about. That is why the new congressional reorganization bill needs public support — and deserves it.

ART BUCHWALD

Peace, Welfare And Justice —And Crime In Washington

WASHINGTON — The crime problem in Washington, D.C., as everyone knows by now, is serious. And everyone is worried about it because it could have an effect on the national policies of the country. It's very difficult for people to make decisions on the affairs of state when they are living in an atmosphere of apprehension and anxiety.

Let me explain what I mean.

THE OTHER DAY I was getting a briefing on America's defense posture from my good friend, Gen. A. B. Em at the Pentagon.

"The United States has never been stronger, in spite of everything you read," General Em told me. "We've got hardware in every part of the globe and, while we're not looking for trouble, I assure you that there isn't a nation in the world, including you-know-who, who would mess with us. But, of course, our real business is peace."

"It's good to talk to someone who is neither a Dove nor a Hawk," I said.

"Without giving away any secret information, our missile sites right here in the continental United States could knock out anything the other side could send over."

AN AIDE walked in. "I'm sorry to bother you, sir, but your car has been stolen."

"My car!"

"Yes, sir. Right off the Pentagon parking lot."

"Of all the nerve!" the general shouted. He put on his coat and said to me, "I'm sorry I have to break this up." And then, to his aide, "Let's go ahead with the bombing raid on the DMZ. And double the bomb loads."

I WANDERED OVER to State to see if I could talk a friend on the Middle East desk into having lunch. He was wrestling with the tricky situation out there. "It's our policy to find a peaceful solution to this problem, making sure that neither the Arabs nor the Israelis feel they've won anything. But at the same time we must calm the fears of both parties and urge them to reconcile their differences."

Just then his secretary came in. "It's your wife on the phone." He picked it up. "Hello . . . What do you mean someone broke into the house? They took everything? . . . I know you wanted me to put bars on the windows. . . . Will you calm down? . . . Yes, I'm coming home right away." He slammed down the phone.

"What about the position paper you were going to do on the crisis?" his secretary asked.

My friend was heading for the door. "The hell with the position paper. The Arabs and Israelis can kill themselves for all I care." And he walked out, slamming the door.

I HAD NOTHING better to do, so I decided to look up a pal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. He was just going over plans for a large housing project for one of the major cities. "What we have to do is give people decent housing," he said.

"Once we can improve the environment, we will be able to deal with the problems of the underprivileged and disenfranchised. Now this model program, if it works, could be repeated in every part of the country and. . . . "

"Mr. Bostitch." A uniformed guard rushed in. "They just robbed the employees credit union downstairs and took $20,000.

"That does it!" said Bostitch as he tore up the plans into little pieces. "No more Mr. Nice Guy."

I WAS ABOUT to go back to my office when I ran into a judge. "We must get to the root of crime and eradicate the causes of it," he said as we walked back to his court. "Punishing people is not the solution for the long haul." In his chambers he said to his clerk, "Where's my robe?"

"Someone stole it during lunch."

Red-faced, the judge took his seat on the bench in his regular suit, and before the defense attorney could even make his plea in the first case, the judge slammed down his gavel and said, "Twenty years."

ADVERTISED IN LIFE

ONLY LUMACOTE the "Climatized Coating" WILL GIVE YOUR HOME LASTING PROTECTION AND BEAUTY NEVER BEFORE OFFERED

Guaranteed
15 Years
AGAINST CHIPPING
FLAKING AND PEELING

LUMACOTE

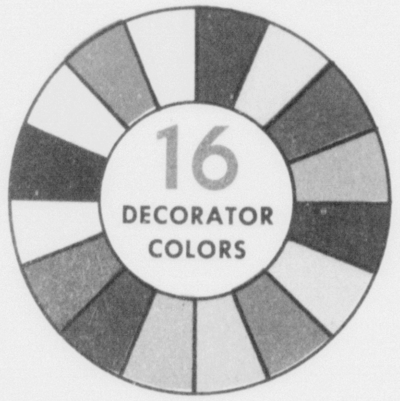
the "Climatized Coating"

Applied with special heavy duty equipment under 450 lbs. of pressure per square inch to a thickness approximately 20 times that of ordinary paint, that coating actually fuses itself to the wall surface and becomes a permanent part of the wall assuring longer lasting beauty, protection and insulation.

SAVE MONEY YEAR AFTER YEAR

One high pressure application bonds directly onto any surface without mess or odor . . . insulates, waterproofs, eliminates repainting and increases your property values.

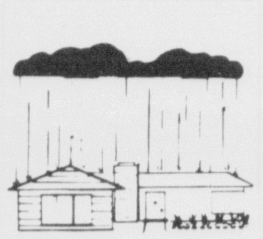
COVER ALL SURFACES TO SEAL CRACKS, HOLES AND ALL OTHER DEFECTS.



Carefully selected by leading decorators, each color is outstanding in its ability to enhance the appearance of any building, in addition to its weathering resistant qualities. The "Climatized" Coating may be applied over any existing color or finish . . . it wil not fade or discolor and is easily washed.

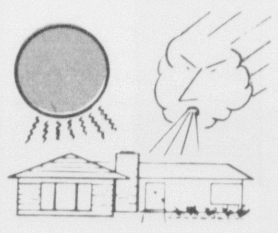
NO MONEY DOWN

terms to fit your budget



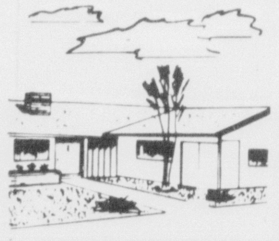
WATERPROOFS

Provides a "raincoat" for your building . . . stops constant absorption of moisture. The "Climatized" Coating will not oxidize; its waterproofing ability fully meets U.S. Government Specification SS-W-00110 (SA-FSS).



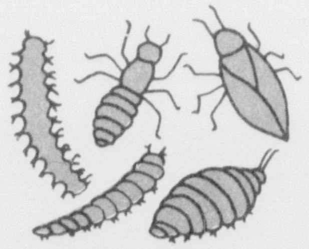
INSULATES

SAVE MONEY ON FUEL BILLS! You get better insulation than with many conventional insulating materials . . . your house will be warmer in winter and cooler in summer.



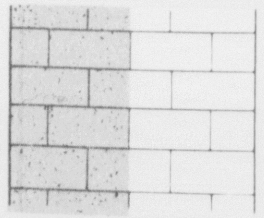
BEAUTIFIES and PROTECTS

Surface imperfections are covered by a beautiful, unblemished finish that is guaranteed to resist deterioration. Eliminate year in and year out need for costly repainting and maintenance.



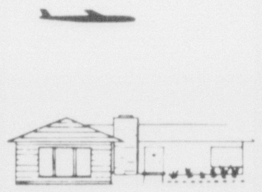
FIGHTS BUGS and FUNGUS

Formulated with TERMIKILL (an especially prepared additive), the "Climatized" Coating is designed to eliminate fungus, dry-rot, mildew, milspores, termite life and other noxious growth. Meets and exceeds U.S. Government Specification TT-P-29B.



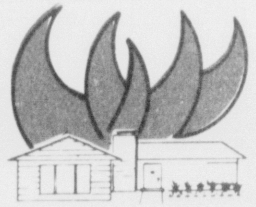
WILL NOT CHIP FLAKE or PEEL

Built-in toughness and flexibility make it possible for the "Climatized" Coating to retain its "brand-new" look for years and years . . . you'll be glad you chose this fully tested and guaranteed product!



REDUCES NOISE

Nature's most effective sound barrier is trapped, still air . . . in the "Climatized" Coating there are millions of air bubbles doing the job of absorbing sound waves from traffic, overhead aircraft, neighbors, etc.



FIRE RETARDANT

Extensive laboratory testing, plus years of experience in the field, show the "Climatized" Coating to be absolutely unable to support combustion. In many cases this ability to endure heat and flames has saved the building.

INCREASES VALUE OF PROPERTY

Protection against deterioration means your property will be worth even more as the years go by . . . you'll be relieved of worry about maintenance, paint and repair bills . . . you'll be happier with a beautiful "brand-new" appearance that is guaranteed to last.

This offer limited to 5 days only

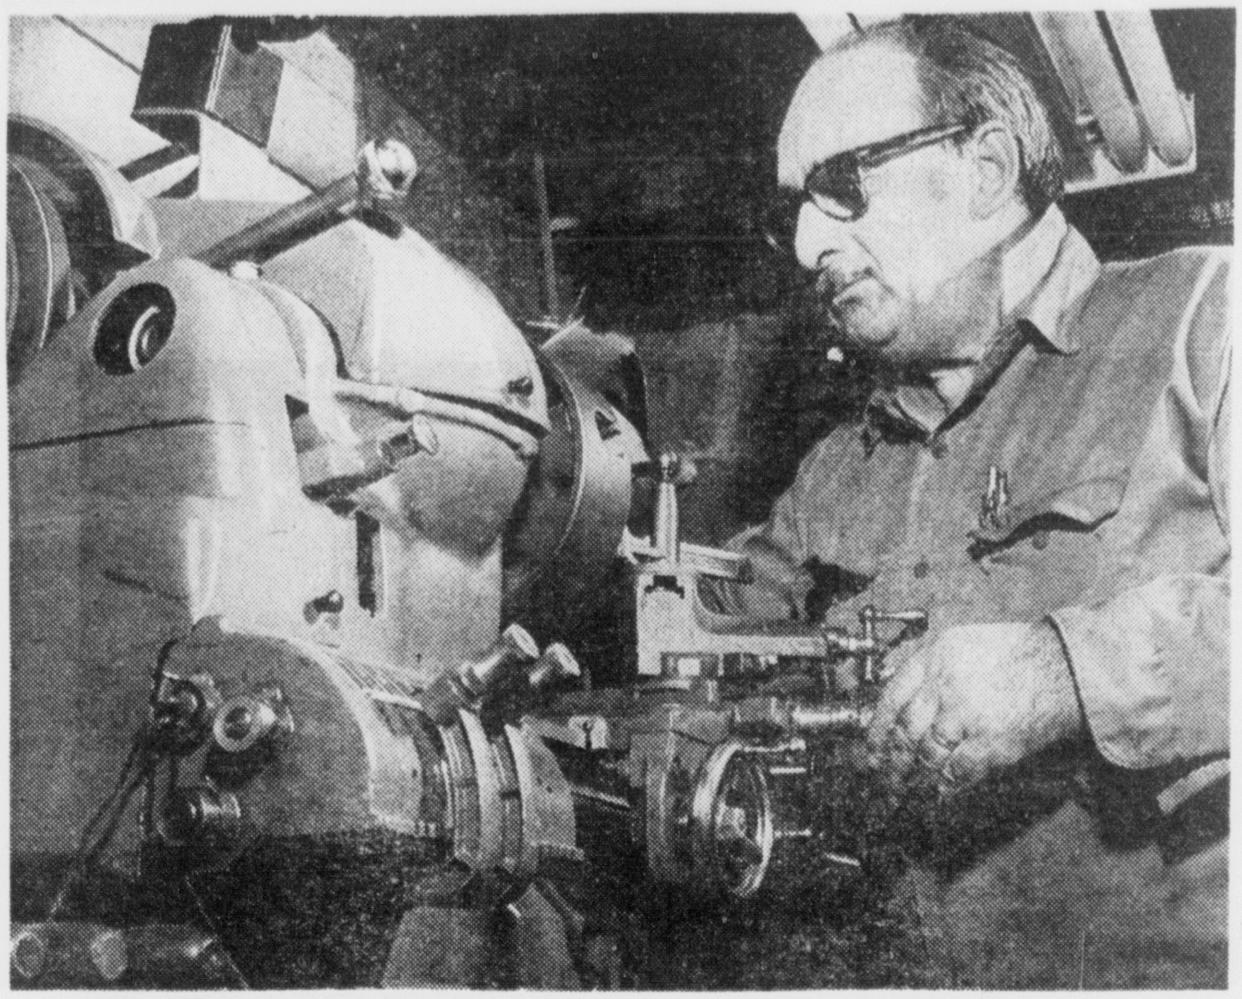
A Cradle For Baby Jessica

See Page M2



IN THE WORKSHOP at his Kentfield home, Robert Cooper used a metal-turning lathe for a woodworking project as he built a cradle for his first grandchild. The use of the machinist's lathe with its precise calibration enabled him to produce some fine detailing. But it also posed some special problems.

Grandfather Builds Cradle For A Baby

For The First Grandchild, It Had To Be Something Special

By DON KEOWN

A first grandchild, thought Robert Cooper of Kentfield, is deserving of something special.

So when their oldest daughter, Mrs. Richard Raznikov of Berkeley, informed the Coopers she was expecting her first child, her father asked her: "How would you like a cradle for the baby?"

Mrs. Raznikov was pleased with the suggestion, and so Cooper set out to build what had to be no ordinary cradle.

Cooper is an experienced home handyman, having remodeled his house at 14 Acadia Avenue and having built such furniture pieces as bookcases and cabinets.

BUT THE CRADLE he produced after four and a half months of working evenings and weekends in his home workshop he regards as his crowning achievement.

"I've never produced anything else this finely crafted," he says.

To begin with, there was the wood.

"I selected the very finest walnut," he says.

A GREAT DEAL of the pleasure Cooper derived from his project he credits to that selection.

"It was wonderful wood to work with," he says. "From now on I'm working with nothing but walnut and brass."

Cooper's workshop is located in one half of his double garage.

"My son and I keep our miniature railroad in the other half of the garage," he laughs, "and the cars sit outside."

IN IT HE HAS the usual power saw, and a lathe. But it is not the lathe ordinarily associated with woodwork. Rather, it is a metal-turning lathe. And while not customarily used for turning wood, its precisely minute and controlled calibration has enabled Cooper, working from his own drawings, to produce his spokes and other carved cradle parts in remarkably fine detail.

Indicative of the care that Cooper put into his project are the ornamental brass caps which he produced himself to cover the screw heads.

The rocking mechanism with its ball-bearing action reflects the same striving for perfection as does the furniture.

COOPER THEN climaxed his project by giving the walnut a handrubbed oil finish that brought out the grain of the fine wood in all its glory.

Use of the metal lathe on wood, however, did pose one problem.

"The sawdust from the wood soaks up the oil, and it is next to impossible to keep the machine oiled," he says. "But since I don't have a wood lathe, I just pour on the oil and try to do my best."

HIS BEST IS very, very good. The cradle, with a swinging crib that measures 34 by 17 inches, has won the praise of those accustomed to professional cabinetry.

Cooper completed the cradle in time so that it was in the Raznikov home in Berkeley and waiting when baby Jessica, born Jan. 24 at Marin General Hospital, and her mother arrived there.

Says Mrs. Cooper of her husband's project: "It is the kind of thing that is passed down from generation to generation."

COOPER ADMITS: "Yes, I made it as an heirloom."

Thus Mrs. Raznikov insists her father should affix his signature somewhere on the cradle so that future generations will remain aware of who the builder was.

"But," laughs Cooper, "I hate to mar it. Maybe I'll put my name somewhere on the bottom though."

Cooper, a long-time electrician now working for the city and county of San Francisco as an electrical inspector, says that his next project is likely to be a cabinet with drawers that his wife wants for their home.

"I'LL PROBABLY start producing some sketches until I work out what she wants," he says.

Despite four and a half months during which most of his off-duty hours were spent in the workshop, Cooper is ready to proceed with his next woodcrafting job without delay.

"I've discovered that when you use really top-grade woods, it isn't work at all," he says. "It's pure pleasure."

Marin Blood Donors Play Vital Role In New Heart Surgery

At 8 o'clock on a recent Friday evening, Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society received an emergency order from Palo Alto Stanford Hospital for 13 pints of Group O, Rh positive blood.

The fresh blood was needed within six hours for heart transplant surgery on a 54-year-old housewife.

Irwin Blood Bank relayed the request to its Marin Blood Center where recruiters phoned 13 local donors to provide the blood. These donors included three housewives, four business men, a librarian, optician, student, airline ticket agent, machinist and an operating engineer.

THE SEVEN men and six women began arriving at the blood center at 9 p.m.

By midnight, the blood had been delivered to the headquarters blood bank in San Francisco. There it was processed in the laboratory and at 1 a.m. was rushed to Palo Alto Stanford Hospital in time for the surgery.

Although this was the first time Marin County blood donors have been called upon to play a behind-the-scenes role in transplant surgery, helping to provide blood vital to regular heart surgery has become a routine responsibility at the seven-year-old Marin Blood Center.

OPEN HEART surgery, unheard of a dozen years ago, is now being performed at a rate of 16 operations a week in seven hospitals served by Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Each operation requires an average of 16 units or pints of blood of the type matching that of the patient. The blood must be received from the donor within 48 hours before the surgery.

Depending on the procedure of the individual hospital, up to 10 of these units are drawn by the blood bank into plastic bags containing a special anti-coagulant solution (heparin) for use in priming the heart-lung machine during the operation. The remainder of the needed blood is drawn into plastic bags containing another anti-coagulant solution (ACD) and is used to provide post-operative transfusions for the patient.

In the past 10 years, the blood bank has provided more than 70,000 pints of blood for more than 5,000 patients undergoing open heart surgery in hospitals it serves.

EXCEPT IN unusual cases (such as the heart transplant described earlier) the blood used for the heart-lung machine is drawn at the headquarters blood bank in San Francisco. However, donors at the Marin Blood Center are playing an increasingly important role in filling orders for the blood used for transfusions for heart surgery patients.

The center, at 506 Fourth Street, San Rafael, is open to donors Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. On Tuesdays and Thursdays it is open to provide blood bank information and to recruit donors by telephone for the next day's needs.

When Marin donors are needed to assist in filling orders for heart surgery, the center is notified by the headquarters blood bank at least a day in advance.

RECENTLY, WHEN blood banks all over the country were experiencing a serious seasonal shortage of blood, the Marin Blood Center was able to provide four hard-to-get units of fresh Group AB, Rh negative blood for a heart patient.

AB negative blood occurs in only one person out of 167, or 0.6 per cent of the population. There are only 17 known donors with this type of blood currently listed in the Marin Blood Center's files — many others having AB Negative. Other hard-to-get negative blood types (A, B, and O Negative) are urgently sought by the center.

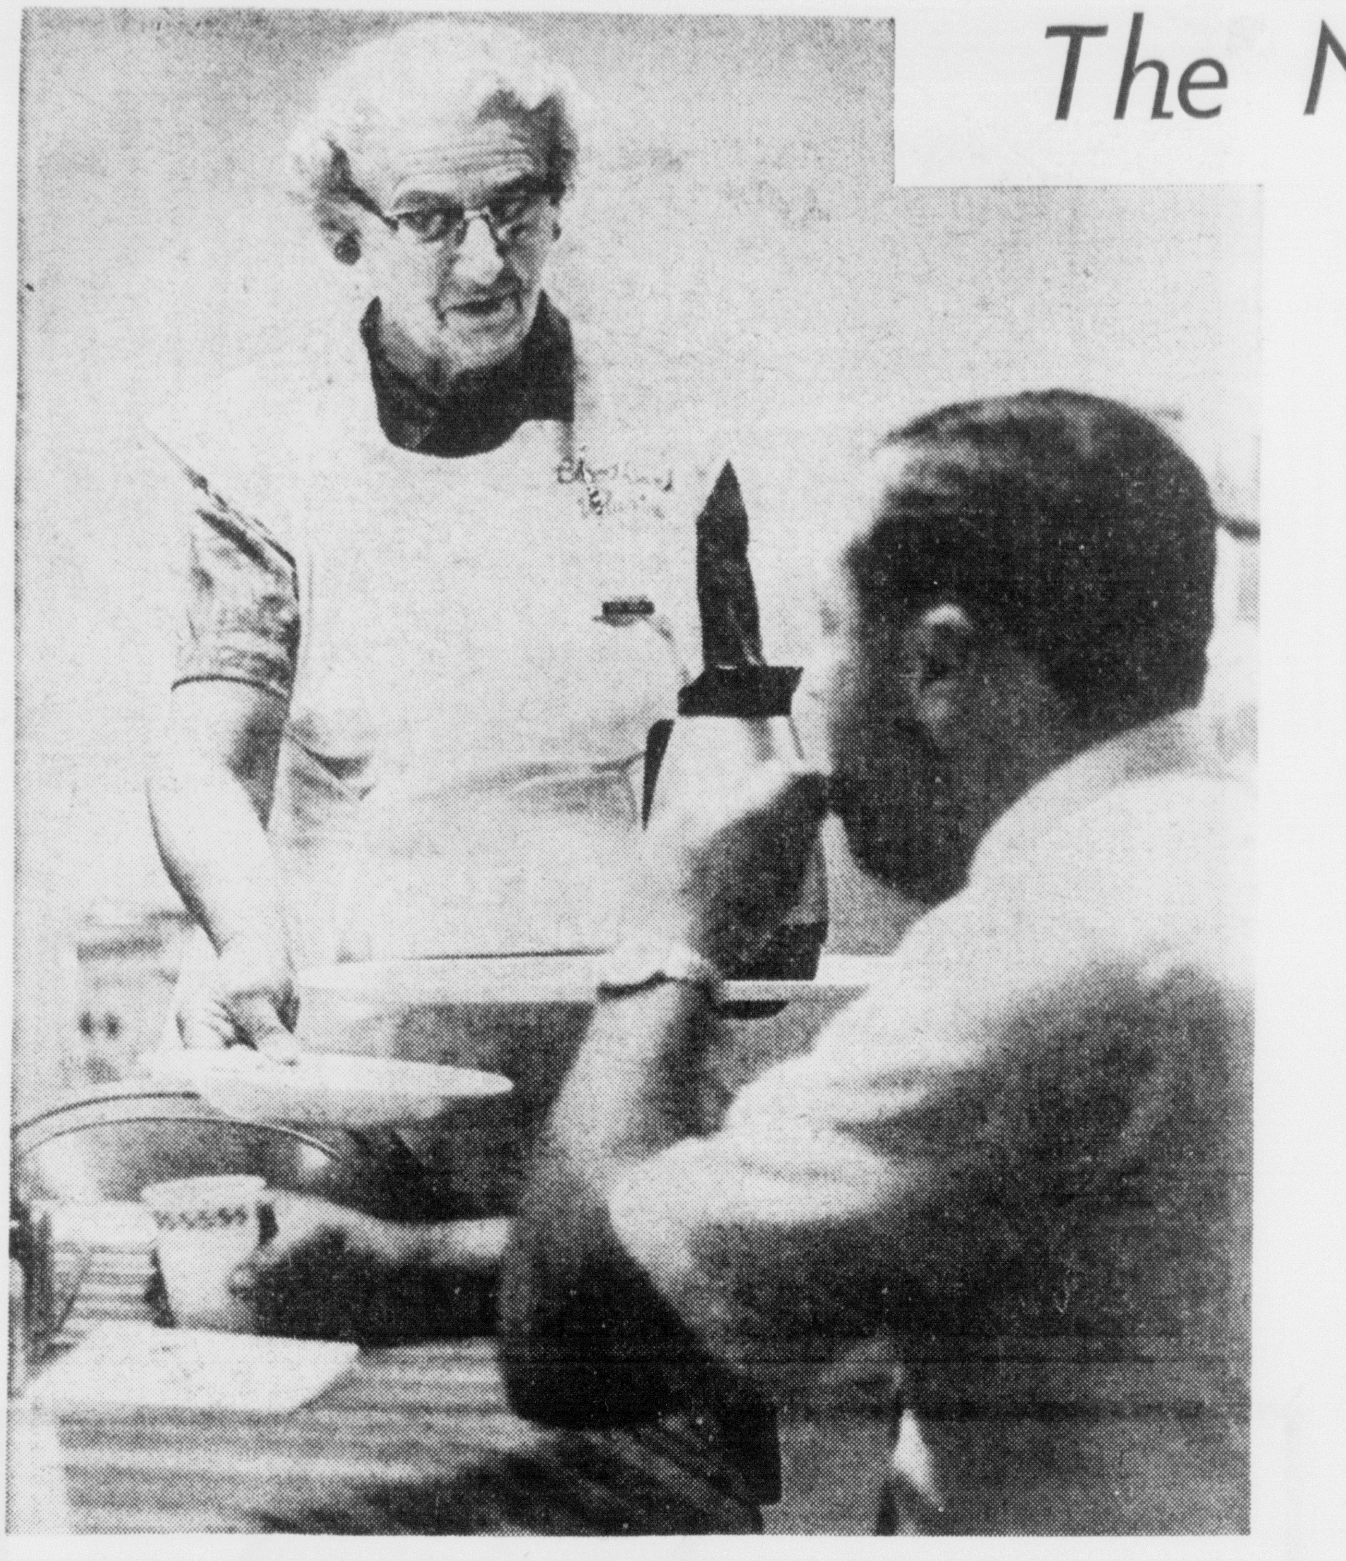
The Need For Blood



A DONOR AT the Marin Blood Center is served the customary refreshments by volunteer Mrs. Chester Monti after making his contribution to the vital program.

The Marin Blood Center began operations as an auxiliary of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society in May of 1961. It is sponsored by the Marin Medical Society and has the active support of many civic groups. Since its inception, it has collected 35,718 net units of blood.

DURING 1969, Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will need 100,000 units of blood to meet the requirements of 59 hospitals in eight counties —six of these hospitals in Marin. Although Marin County residents often receive blood as patients in San Francisco hospitals and elsewhere, as well as those in Marin, this year the blood bank will consign to Marin hospitals alone some 6,950 units of blood in the various groups and Rh types.

To keep pace with the growing local demand for blood, Marin residents, who donated 5,974 net units during 1968, will be expected to increase this total by nearly 1,000 units during 1969.

The past few years have seen a steady growth in the use of the components of whole blood for transfusion therapy.

In the past, the great majority of transfusions involved a unit of whole blood given by one donor and used by one patient. Now it is becoming more usual to fractionate a unit of blood into its component parts and to use these components to treat not just one but several patients.

THIS IS accomplished by drawing the blood into a special plastic bag with one or more satellite compartments. By spinning the bag in a centrifuge, the particular components — such as red cells or platelets — may be separated from the liquid portion of the blood and collected in the satellite compartments. The remaining liquid portion may be used to produce further components, such as fresh frozen plasma or cryoprecipitate, or be returned to the red blood cells to produce "platelet poor" blood or "leukocyte poor" blood.

The various components are used for patients with specific problems such as anemia, burns, hemorrhaging and various blood disorders.

Time is usually a vital factor in the preparation of components — most of which must be processed almost immediately, and some of which must be transfused within very few hours after the blood is received from the donor.

RECENTLY, A 34-year-old housewife receiving massive transfusions at a San Francisco hospital quickly drained supplies of the relatively uncommon Group O, Rh negative blood (one person in 15 has it).

Sixteen donors with blood of this type were recruited by the Marin Blood Center. Each unit of the blood was processed in the blood bank's laboratory to provide a unit of packed red cells needed the same day by the patient. The remaining plasma was used for other components.

Many recent cases can be cited in which patients hospitalized in Marin have created extraordinary demands for blood and blood components.

AMONG THESE patients (all hospitalized at Marin General Hospital) were a post-operative cancer patient who used 50 units of platelet concentrates in a nine-day period, a hemophiliac (bleeder) who used 48 units of cryoprecipitates in less than a month, and a victim of Hodgkins Disease who used 32 units of whole blood and platelet concentrates in a 10-day period.

Voluntary blood donors perform a dual service.

First, their gifts of blood are essential day after day in meeting both the regular and the special transfusion needs of the sick and injured. Second, every blood donation made is an investment in future protection for the donor, his family and neighbors.

When a donor gives a pint of blood, he receives a "credit" from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. At any time within a year from the date of donation, he may request the release of the credit for his own use or for any one else who may need blood. Or he may credit his blood donation to one of the many Blood Donor Club accounts maintained with the blood bank for the mutual protection of members of business, social, fraternal, church and community organizations.

Marin Blood Center is open Monday from noon to 6 p.m., Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Daedalians Find A Home At Hamilton

Military Flying Fraternity Welcomed To Air Base

To the uninitiated, the Order of Daedalians sounds very much like a college literary society or some kind of a secret, mystical organization.

There is, however, nothing secret or mystic about the Daedalians. And the membership of that unusual fraternal organization is much more at home at one of Uncle Sam's big air bases than on one of today's college campuses.

In fact, Hamilton Air Force Base is home or headquarters to one of its proudest units.

The Order of Daedalians was organized in 1934 by a small group of World War I aviators, the men who fought the first great battles in the skies.

THEIR PURPOSES: To preserve the extraordinary esprit de corps that had existed among them, and to impress upon a sometimes reluctant nation the importance of air power as a means of defense.

They were men dedicated to the thesis that the United States, for its own protection, must maintain a military air supremacy among the world powers.

Originally, membership was restricted to those commissioned officers of the U. S. army, navy and marine corps who had qualified as military aviators prior to Nov. 11, 1918, and to their male progeny.

BUT AS THE years began to thin their ranks, the Daedalians amended their bylaws to permit successive generations of military aviators to become eligible for membership in the name of deceased founder members, or in the name of deceased pilots who could have qualified as founder members.

Today the order maintains three categories of membership: founder member, hereditary member and named member.

The relaxed rules by no means open up the membership to all those who have worn military pilot wings. The honor is bestowed only upon those who are currently serving on active duty or are officially retired from active duty with the U. S. armed forces, and then only upon personal invitation and the recommendations of at least three Daedalians in good standing.

ON RARE occasions the order will waive its requirements and bestow membership upon some one who has made an outstanding contribution to aviation. The Daedalians do not solicit applications for membership.

The name "Daedalians" is derived from Greek mythology.

According to legend, Daedalus and his son Icarus were imprisoned on the island of Crete by the powerful King Minos. Unable to escape by land or sea, Daedalus reasoned that the king could not control the realm of the birds, and that therefore, he and Icarus should fly to freedom.

After fashioning wings of bird feathers and wax, Daedalus tutored his son in the mysteries of flight, cautioning him especially not to fly too low and too near the sea lest the spray sodden his feathers, nor too close to the sun lest the sun's heat melt the wax.

BUT WHEN father and son finally made their flight, Icarus, in his exuberance, disobeyed his parent's instructions and flew higher and higher. The sun did melt the wax, the wings disintegrated and Icarus plunged into what is now known as the Icarian Sea.

Daedalus, heartbroken, flew on to Greece to live out his years pondering the tragic fate of his son.

While the story is myth, the World War I pilots nevertheless decided to honor Daedalus as MARIN BANKER Clinton Jones III, center, presented a portrait photograph of his late father, World War I flying ace Clinton Jones Jr., to Golden Gate Flight No. 5, Order of Daedalians, who have given the picture a place of honor in the trophy room of their new headquarters at Hamilton Air Force Base. Accepting the photo were Lt. Col. Don Disbrow, left, flight captain, and Col. Charles L. Praul, former base commander at Hamilton and a flight member.

IT WAS THE last flight for World War I flying hero Clinton Jones Jr. of Marin, fourth from the right, when he gathered with fellow members of the Order of Daedalians at Travis Air Force Base after their return from attending the organization's national convention at Kelly Air Force Base in Texas. Jones died a short time later in 1965.

ORDER OF DAEDALIANS

Golden Gate Flight Now Has A Home

the originator of man's quest to fly by adopting his name.

TODAY, THE Order of Daedalians numbers more than 4,000 active members in 22 chapters that have been designated as "flights."

Golden Gate Flight No. 5 was established for members residing in the San Francisco Bay Area and in nearby communities, and now has a roster of approximately 400 men, about half of whom reside in Northern California. Marin County has contributed 25 Daedalians to Flight No. 5. Many of the other members are overseas in active military service.

Until fairly recently, Flight No. 5 also represented the Order of Daedalians in most of the western states including Alaska and Hawaii. With the encouragement and support of Flight No. 5, however, new units were formed for the Los Angeles area (Flight No. 7), the San Diego area (Flight No. 13) and Alaska (Polar Flight No. 10 in Anchorage and Farthest North Flight No. 21 at Fairbanks).

SAIGON FLIGHT No. 14 is headquartered in Saigon. And movements are under way to form Cascade Flight No.22 in Seattle and Aloha Flight No. 23 in Hawaii.

It is Golden Gate Flight No. 5 that recently found a home at Hamilton Air Force Base. Until then, the unit lacked a permanent base of operations using the Presidio of San Fran cisco postal address as its "headquarters."

Col. Charles L. Praul of Flight No. 5, former base commander at Hamilton, was instrumental in making available to the Northern California Daedalians space in the Officers' Club at the North Marin installation. The facilities there will serve as a combination office and historical display room where will repose Flight 5's flags, trophies and a photographic history of military aviation.

IN THEIR EFFORT to assure the continuation of American preeminence in the air and space, the Daedalians encourage and counsel young men to become armed forces aviators.

The Daedalian Foundation, supported by the financial contributions from the members, annually presents awards to outstanding military commands and units to instill a competitive spirit and a striving for excellence in the flying services.

Perhaps most coveted is the Daedalian Flying Safety Trophy that goes to the command achieving the best record for flight safety each year. Other Daedalian awards are for excellence in the maintenance of aircraft and weapon systems, and for superior technical supply and personnel management systems.

AWARDS ARE made, too, to distinguished graduates of the four military academies including scholarship grants of $2,500 for advanced studies in the aeronautical and astronautical sciences.

An outstanding pilot graduate at each of the respective services' advanced flying schools is given a special achievement award.

To recognize excellence in civil aviation, the Order of Daedalians annually presents a trophy to an airline flight crew that has shown extraordinary skill, knowledge and judgment in the air under emergency flying conditions .

The organization of Golden Gate Flight No. 5, as well as the other flights, is along quasi-military lines. There is an executive staff elected annually in December. The presiding officer bears the title of flight captain and is the chief administrator, assisted by a vice captain, a flight adjutant, a flight treasurer and a flight provost marshal.

LT. COL. DON Disbrow, U. S. Air Force Retired, a veteran pilot of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, is the current flight captain. He is a Vacaville resident.

Lt. Col. William Gatchet of Hamilton Base is the vice captain, Col. Robin C. Cannon of Novato the flight adjutant, Lt. Col. Samuel S. Richards of Oakland the flight treasurer and Col. Charles O. Garrels of Brentwood the flight provost marshal.

Col. Charles T. Stoffer of Greenbrae, a pioneer flyer of renown, is the flight historian.

Six standing committees are appointed for specific functions, and their chairmen along with

"Who Stained The Neck Of My Dress?"

At least once a year I answer this complaint which is asked much more frequently. Usually, the "stain" is noticed when a garment if first removed from storage. The "stain" wasn't there when the dress was put away, but now it is.

The "stain" is actually a color removal caused by a cold wave solution. Somehow in a beauty shop or at home, a hair set lotion has come in contact with the garment. The oxidizing agent in the lotion works very slowly, often taking three or four months in storage. Sometimes the color loss isn't noticed until after the garment has been drycleaned. Once the color has been removed, it cannot be restored. Take care, we repeat, to wear a "don't care" garment when having your hair set or doing it yourself.

Golden Gate Flight 5's roster is replete with illustrious names from military and civilian aviation history.

INCLUDED ARE Col. John A. MacCready, the first pilot to fly non-stop across the American continent in 1922 and a pioneer in high altitude flight; Gen. Otto P. Weyland, a distinguished Air Force commander, and Maj. Gen. Carroll W. McColpin of American Eagle Squadron fame.

Of special interest to Marinites is the name of the late Clinton Jones, a Marin County native who was a leading flying ace of World War I.

Captain Jones, born and reared in Ross, was credited with downing eight enemy aircraft plus three unconfirmed victories in aerial combat over France in 1918. Serving with the 22nd Aero Squadron, American Expeditionary Force, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross for gallantry in action.

RECENTLY THE World War I hero's son, Clinton Jones III, presented a 1918 photographic portrait of his father to Golden Gate Flight 5. It will be permanently displayed at the new headquarters at Hamilton Base.

The Daedalians generally are a hardy lot, and the founding members, 70-odd years and older, looking back on military careers that reach back half a century and more, hold their own with their younger compatriots.

"They know how to enjoy themselves," says Colonel Disbrow, "and it takes a major catastrophe to keep them away from our meetings and activities."

HE POINTS to Col. Edward V. Pettis of San Jose, a youthful 81 who not only promises that he will still be around at 90, but will still be attending the national conventions of the Daedalians as well.

"Ed means it," adds the Flight 5 captain, "and no one of us doubt him. I'll bet he keeps his word."

The Daedalian founder members do not dwell in the past. Their interest is as up to date as today's space explorations and exploits. But coaxed by their younger fraternal brothers, they'll sometimes tell stories of what it was like to fly back in 1918.

ONE SUCH is Maj. Stuart E. Elliott of San Rafael. He recalls clearly the exact date — July 1, 1918 — that he was transfered from a pilots' pool to the 13th Aero Squadron of the Second Pursuit Group, a newly organized squadron commanded by Lafayette Escardrille veteran Capt. Charles J. Biddle, for active duty.

"We were equipped with 21 of the latest model Spad XIIIs," he relates. "They were powered with 220 horsepower-geared Hispano Suiza motors with a range of two hours and 20 minutes flying time. They carried two Marlin machine guns synchronized to fire through the propeller, and two 12-kilo bombs attached to a rack beneath the cockpit. Their top speed was 136

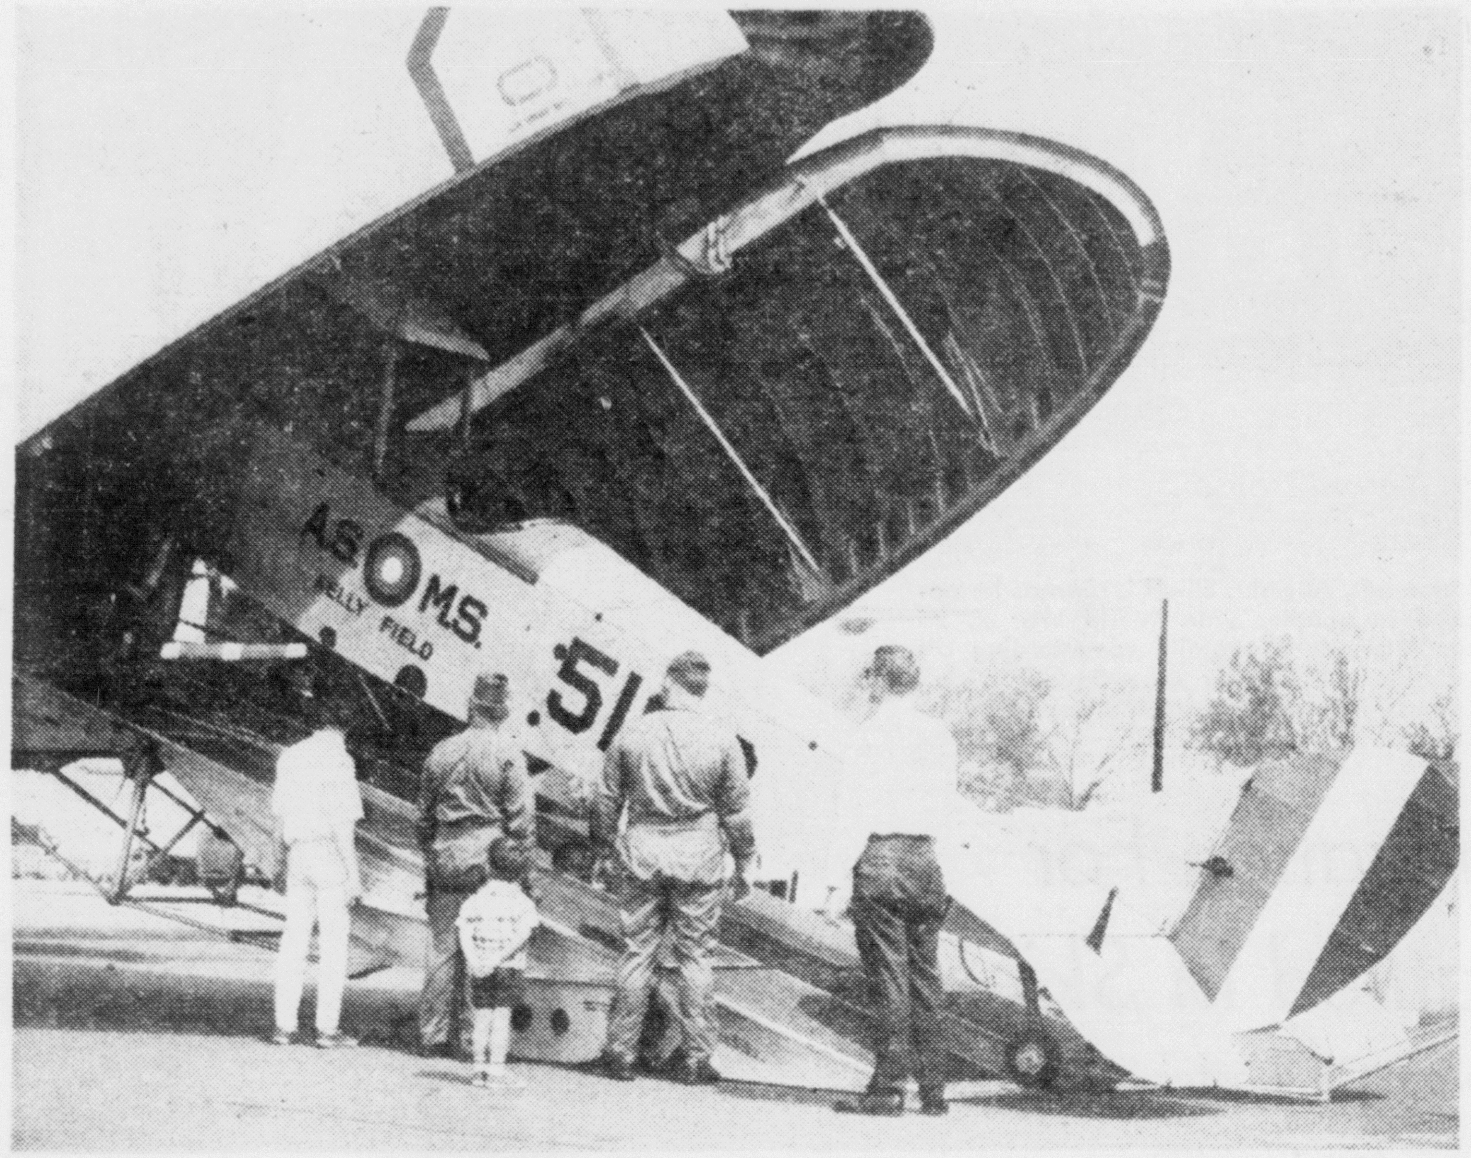
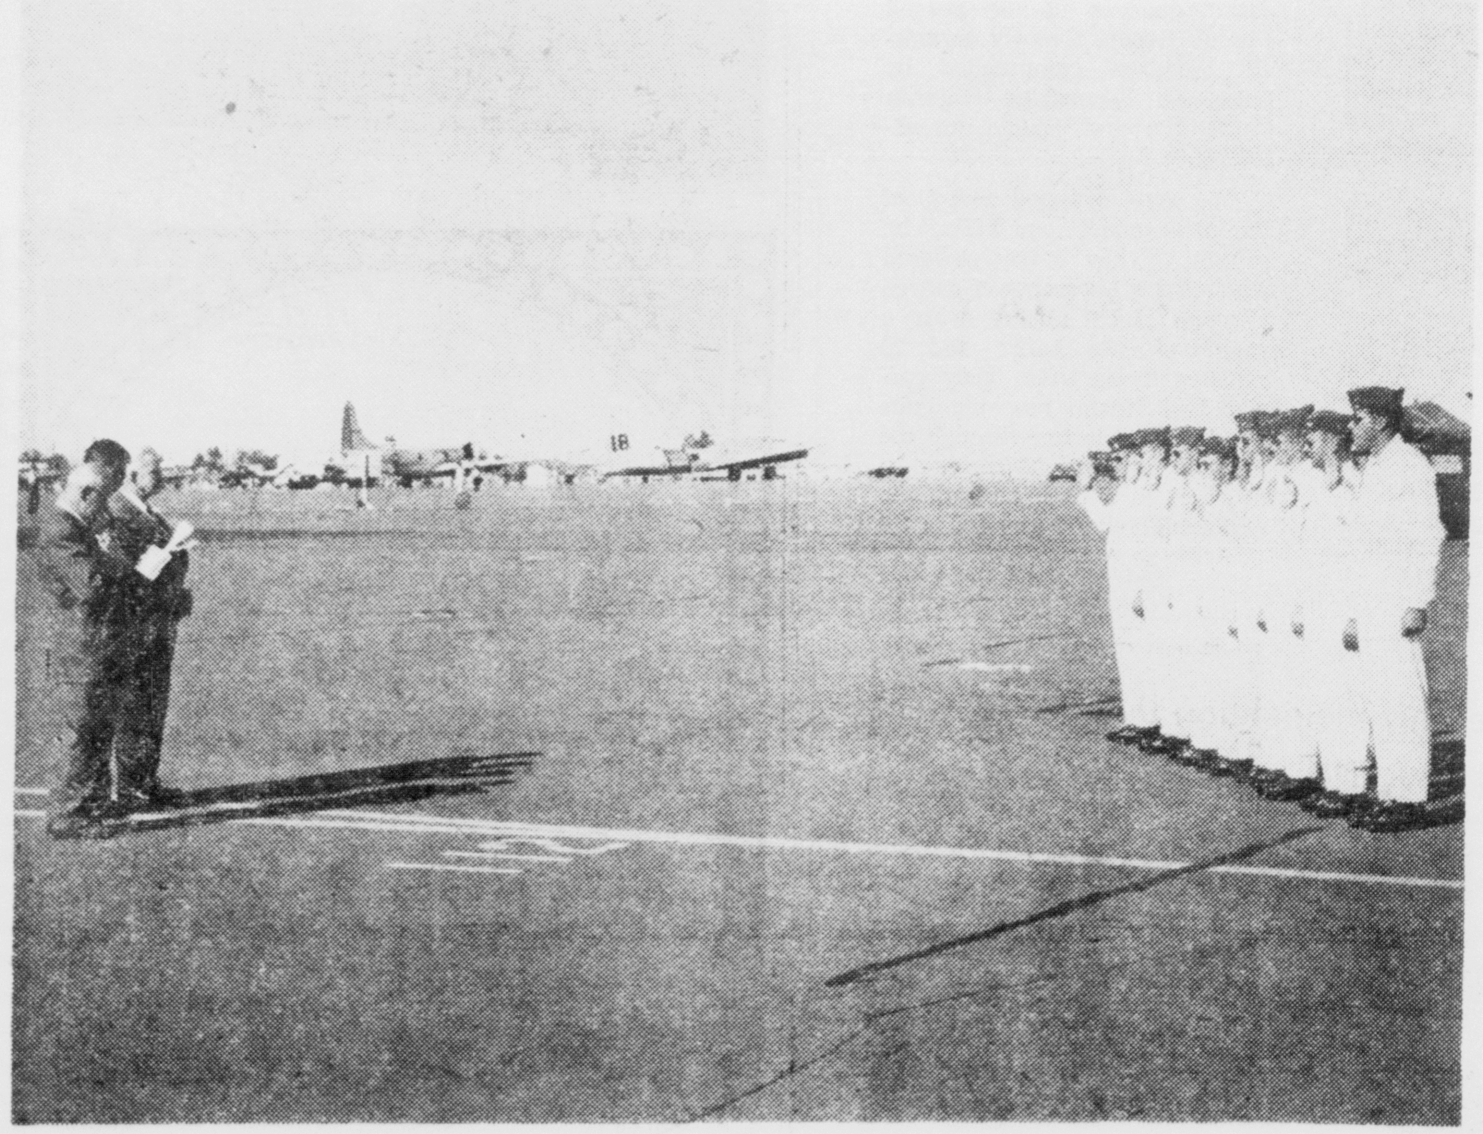
The Order Of Daedalians Supports U.S. Military Aviation

Organization Of Armed Forces Fliers Insists We Must Maintain Our Aerial Superiority



A DISMANTLED Jenny of World War I vintage was unloaded at Sacramento to play a part in an Order of Daedalians function. More than a few of the members of the military aviation fraternity had once flown the Jennies. This vintage aircraft had been "airlifted" by C-124 to Sacramento from the widely known Harrah's collection at Reno.



THE INTERNATIONALLY-KNOWN Thunderbirds, the Air Force's precision and stunt flying team, were indicted into the Order of Daedalians at Hamilton Air Force Base. Conducting the initiation ritual that made the Thunderbirds Golden Gate Flight No. 5 members was Col. Livingston Irving of Oakland. The Daedalians infrequently waive their rigid membership requirement rules to take in men who have made especially noteworthy contributions to aviation.

miles an hour.

"Our squadron was organized into three flights that patrolled a 40-mile front on the Toul area extending to St. Mihiel on the west. I flew with the first flight and was the No. 2 wingman to the leader who was none other than Princeton's immortal Hobey Baker, who also came from the Lafayette Escadrille. We alternated the flights at 6,000, 12,000 and 18,000 feet levels.

"OPPOSING US on the German side were an assortment of older Phalzes and Albatrosses, several photo reconaissance Rumplers and a squadron of modern Fokkers. We had bagged a few of the older planes and now action was lagging until one day near St. Mihiel six of us observed six Fokkers flying in the same direction, all at 18,000 feet.

"Both flights began a climbing match, seeking the advantage of the higher altitude prior to attack. The air was thin and cold and the Spads flew wobbly as we reached 21,000 feet and well above the also struggling Fokkers. We dove and chased them 15 miles inside the enemy lines and almost to the ground where we had to give up our quarry due to heavy ground fire.

"The results were indeterminate, but that engagement must have created a record height for World War I fighters. Oxygen and parachutes had not been developed and the open cockpits lacked heat or comfort provisions."

THE START of the St. Mihiel offensive, Major Elliott recalls, marked an end to the lull in the aerial excitement as well.

"It was hot mustard then," he says, "right up until the Armistice."

The famed Richtofen Circus was transferred to an area relatively close to Elliott's squadron.

"Although the baron was by then dead, his brother, Ernst Udet, Herman Goering and other top German aces made the going very rough for us. In the first two days of the drive they downed six of our pilots."

Shortly thereafter, Elliott says, his unit was transferred to another hot spot, Belrain in the Argonne, "and the action remained quite heavy."

HARKENING BACK to a lighter side of those thrill-filled days of more than half a century ago, Elliott says: "In my 18 months on the Allied front I never saw a flier with one of those long scarves streaming back from his collar.

"A muffler in any event was well-tucked beneath a garment so that it could not become entangled in control wires."

And he adds with a smile: "Naturally, while flying over the lines, I never spotted Errol Flynn — nor Snoopy."

Thus do these pioneers of military aviation exchange humor-tinged recollections at their periodic get-togethers. But always the emphasis remains upon the present — how to help keep Uncle Sam's aerial arm strong and ready for all eventualities.

FLIGHT 5'S executive staff is currently planning 1969 activities that may include joint meetings with other flights in Honolulu and Anchorage.

In October of 1968 Flights 5, 7 and 13 assembled in San Diego for such a joint gathering. Some 200 members and their wives participated in three days of activities ranging from business meetings to formal and informal dinners and cocktail parties to visits to military installations and other sightseeing attractions of the area.

Indicative of the wide range of interests of the Daedalians was their attendance while in San Diego at an in-depth lecture and film about oceanography provided by the Scripps Institute.

EACH SPRING the order holds a national convention at which Flight 5 is always well represented. The traditional site for that meeting has been Kelly Air Force Base at San Antonio, Tex. But when the San Antonio Exposition caused a shortage of accommodations in 1968, the convention was shifted to Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio.

Approximately 800 members flew in for a busy three-day program and for the renewal of cherished friendships.

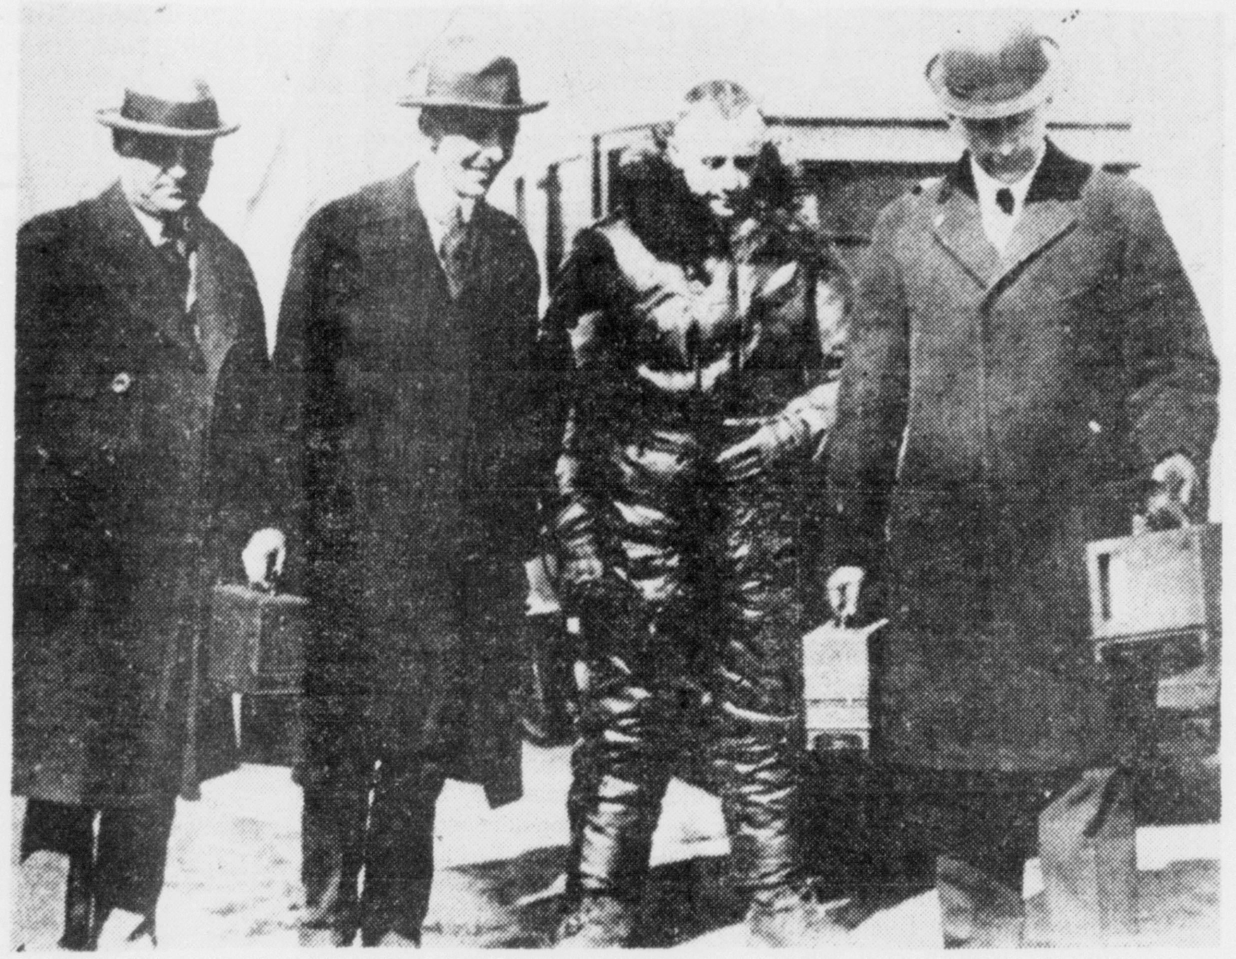
Gen. Frank P. Lahm of Flight No. 9, hosts for the 1968 event, has urged that the 1969 convention also be held at Wright-Patterson. But other flights are also interested and it seems likely that the 1969 gathering will be at Ent Air Force Base in Colorado under auspices of Falcon Flight No. 11. San Diego Flight No. 13 hopes to be the 1970 host.

Observes Colonel Disbrow: "With a little campaigning on the part of Marin County, San Rafael and Novato chambers of commerce, there is no reason why the 1971 Daedalian convention might not be held at Hamilton Air Force Base, especially in view of the new convention accommodations going up in Marin."

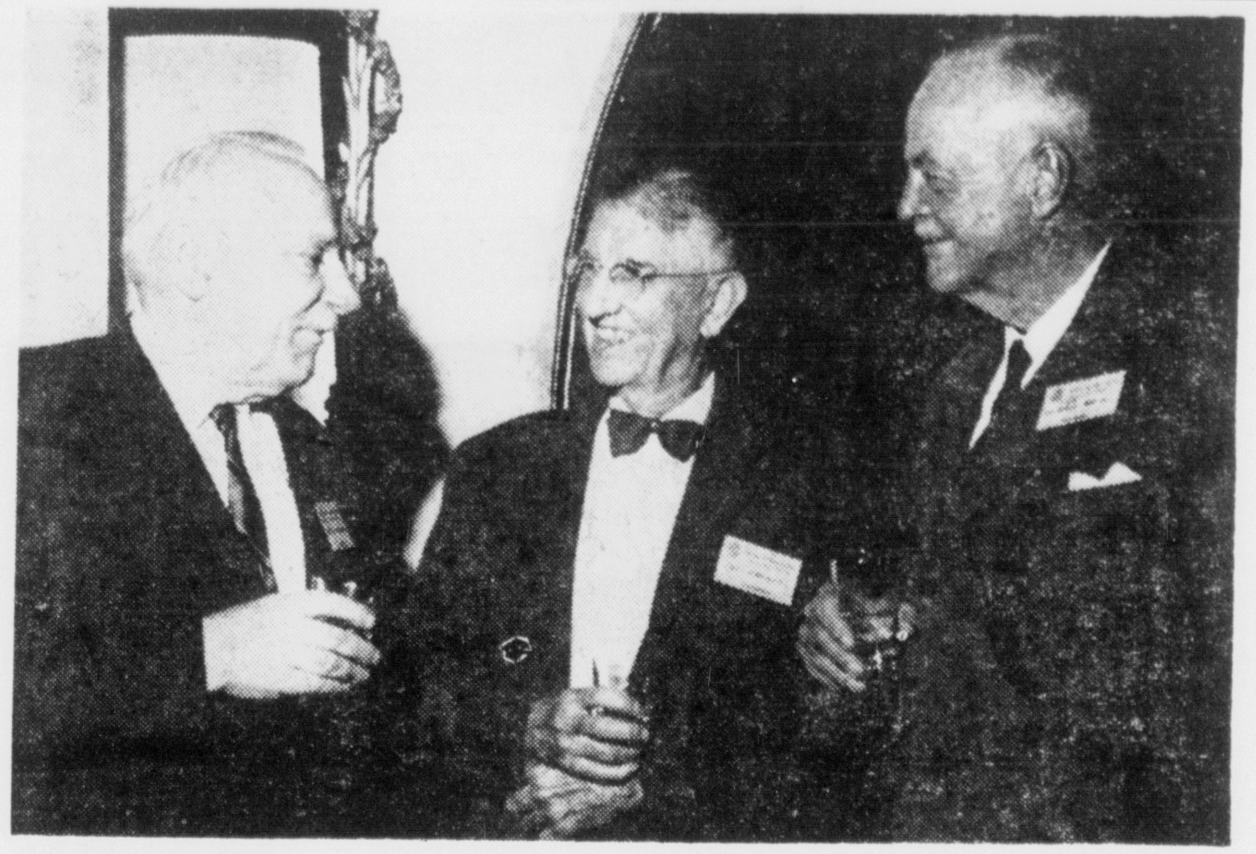
BUT WHETHER the big national gathering is brought here or not, more and more Marinites in the future are going to recognize the Order of Daedalians for what it is. No longer will it be mistaken for a college literary or debating society.

"Now that we have a permanent home base at Hamilton," says Colonel Disbrow, "Northern Californians can expect to hear a great deal more about the Daedalians and Flight 5.

"Aviators have a way of making their presence known!"



AMONG THE celebrities from aviation belonging to Golden Gate Flight No. 5, Order of Daedalians, is Col. John A. Macready, whose most famous feat occurred in 1923 when with another lieutenant, Oakley Kelly, he made the first nonstop transcontinental flight, New York to San Diego, in 26 hours, 50 minutes. Colonel Macready, now residing in Mariposa, regards his pioneering flights in high altitudes as a more significant contribution to aviation. At left he is seen in full regalia for a 1920 flight to 40,000 feet, the first entry by man into outer space where he encountered temperatures 82 degrees below zero and atmospheric pressure that fell from 14.7 pounds to one pound. Above, Macready is shown after landing from his historic altitude record flight with dignitaries that included Orville Wright, at right, the father of aviation and an official observer of his exploit.



ROWING, NOT aviation, was the subject of the moment when these three ex-aviators and ex-oarsmen got together at a Daedalian social function. Left to right they are Jim Cavagnaro of Sonoma County, famous rowing coach Carrol (Ky) Ebright of Berkeley, and Edson (Jack) Berlin of Marin.

DAEDALIANS ENJOY an active social schedule in addition to their efforts to support and encourage military aviation. Golden Gate Flight No. 5 members and wives shown at a 50th anniversary celebration at Mather Air Force Base are, left to right, Harvey Prosser, Charles Stoffer and Jim Cumberpatch, and seated, Mrs. Stoffer and Mrs. Cumberpatch.

The Prettiest Spot In India

The Travel Pages

Lazy lagoons, palm-fringed beaches, groves of mangoes, pineapples and coconut make Goa, India's tiny state, one of the most pleasant and prettiest places on earth.

For those who enjoy historical attractions in addition to natural beauty, little Goa, only 80 minutes by air from Bombay, offers these, too, as well as cozy hotels with all the amenities.

The sights in Goa are surprising — more European than Indian. This is because the Portuguese ruled there for 450 years, and left their imprint on the people in such fields as religion and architecture as seen in the numerous churches and convents. There is also a sprinkling of Hindu temples, and the 600,000 inhabitants of Goa live in harmony while practicing either Christianity or Hinduism.

GOA HAS AN abundance of deep rivers, so one of the most delightful ways of getting from place to place is by boat. At the tourist office in the heart of Panjim, the capital, you can make arrangements for a boat to transport you to Old Goa, once the handsome 16th and 17th Century capital, and now just a shell of its former glory days.

After you diesmbark from your boat at Old Goa, you will pass through the Viceregal Arch. Centuries ago, this privilege was reserved for the entrance of each new viceroy who marched through the arch with great ceremony as a symbolic entrance to the city, before taking office.

Old Goa is easy to explore on foot. As you stroll in the town square, now just a field of wildflowers, it may chill you to know that inquisitions were conducted there in former days. On the hillside near Old Goa, you can find bits of painted patterned bricks that used to adorn some of the churches that are now in a state of decay.

THERE IS NO fixed itinerary needed for strolling through Old Goa to see the remaining houses of worship. But, you should make sure to see:

Bom Jesus Basilica — The largest in Old Goa, it took 10 years to build and is in the Jesuit style of architecture. In the richly decorative interior, there is a lavishly adorned casket containing the body of St. Francis of Xavier. The casket was a gift from a former Duke of Tuscany, and the bronze panels on it depict scenes from Francis' life. The entire chapel is marble, inlaid with semi-precious stones and decorated with paintings of the saint's life.

A small museum, adjoining this chapel, has some sacred objects that are worth seeing.

The Chapel of St. Catherine is a gem of a church in the Renaissance style, one of the earliest and smallest in Old Goa.

St. Francis of Assisi Church and Convent is a lovely example of Portuguese religious art; the spacious church has a simple facade with an interior embellished by a rich stucco ceiling and a great many carvings. There is a museum adjacent with old portraits of former governors and other historical and religious paintings.

St. Cajetan is where carvings, twisted columns — the best of the flamboyant baroque — can be seen within, while the outside is an elegant neo-classic in design with twin towers and a dome. There is a gracefully arched window with panes of seashells in delicate pastel hues. The tombs of former Portuguese rulers are in the crypt.

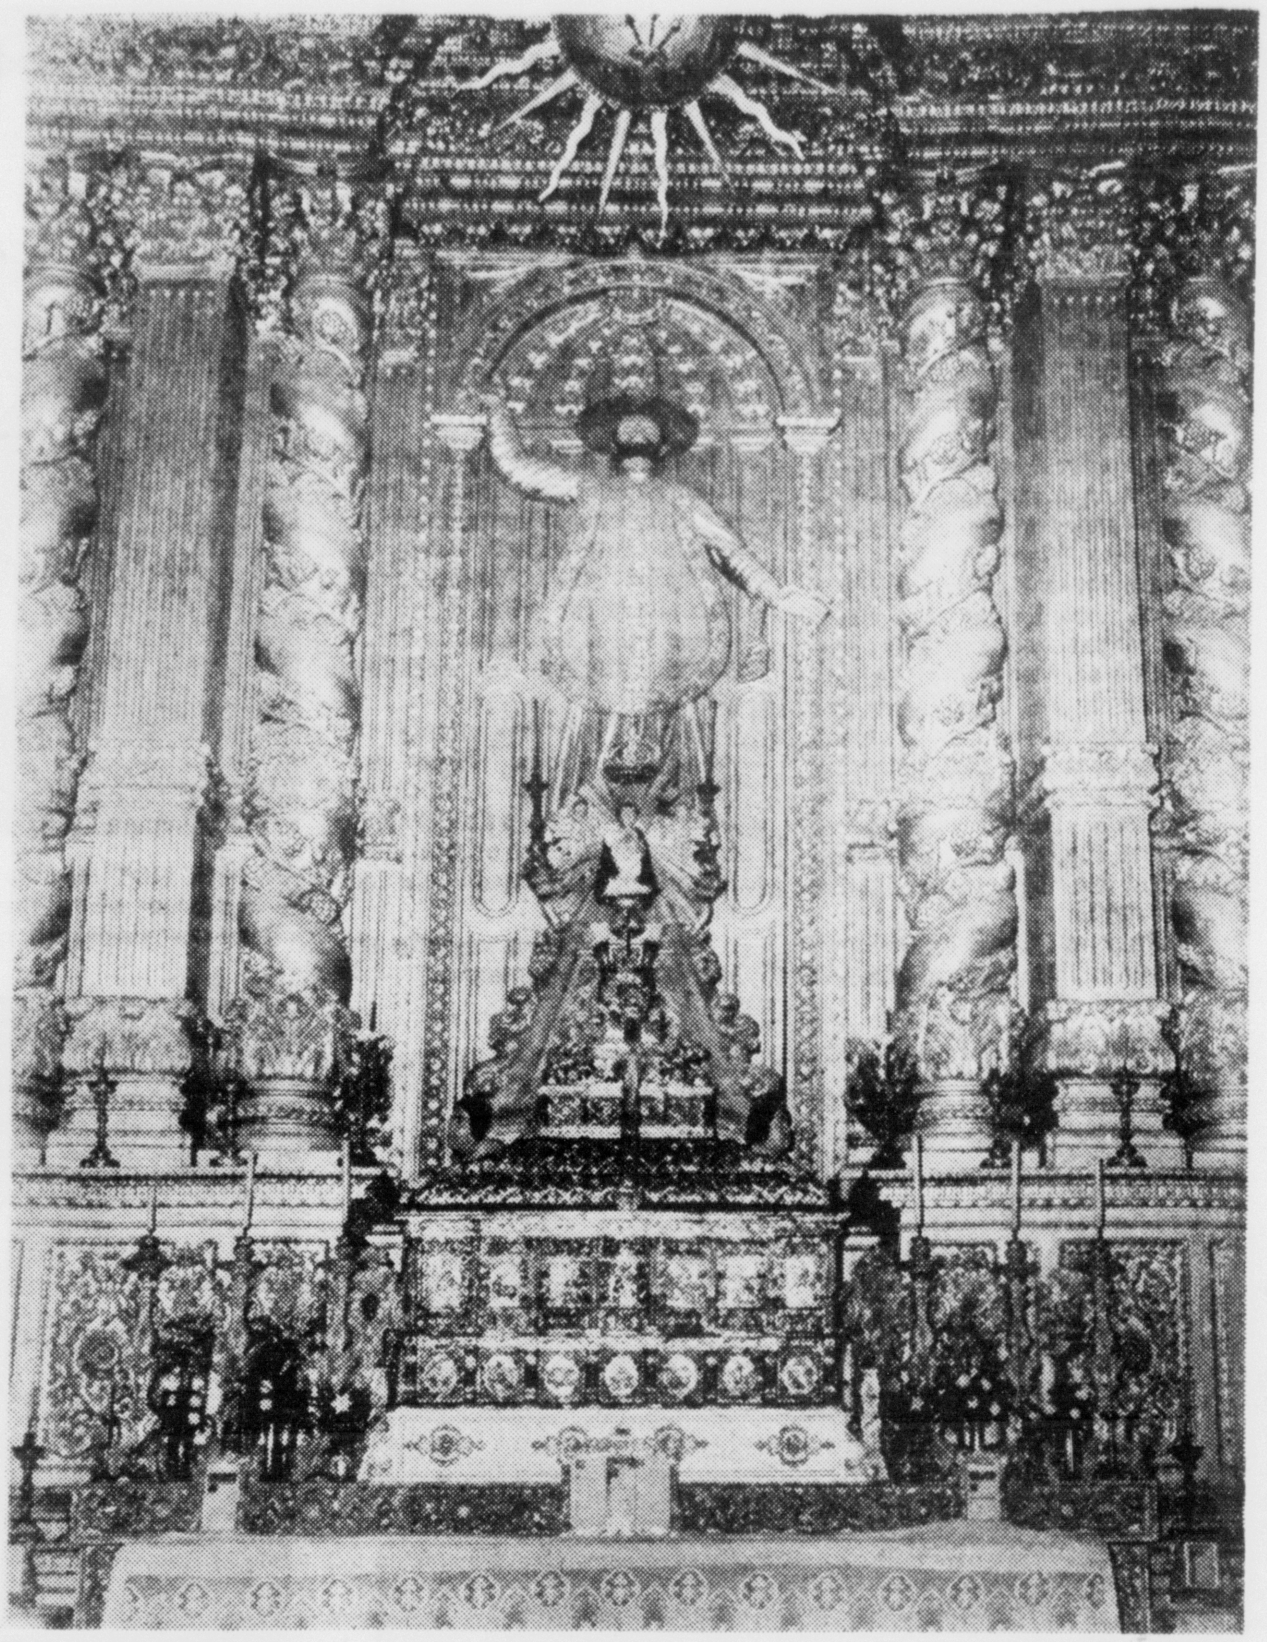
Se Cathedral is huge, white, with barrel vaulted ceilings and such trappings as Corinthian columns, richly carved scenes of the life of Christ and the Virgin, and captivating altar pieces. In a corner is a cross upon which a vision of Christ was supposed to have appeared in 1919.

AFTER YOUR cathedral viewing, you can walk up the hill of Monte Santo to see further remnants of the days of the Portuguese. Chief among these is the convent of the Church of Santa Monica which once held more than 100 nuns, but slowly diminished until the last nun died in 1885. A cross believed to be miraculous, can be seen in the pristine convent church.

As to other Goa points of interest, inland, near the town of Ponga, is the tastefully designed Mangesh Temple, a Hindu place of worship with a cool white marble interior.

With his sightseeing duties fulfilled, the smart tourist makes a beeline for one of Goa's idyllic beaches. There are many along the coastline, but two of the most popular are at Colva and Calangute beaches where there are long stretches of sand and cool coconut groves for shade.

But even these beaches are not Coney Island popular. Goa has not been "discovered," as yet. But it should be — by you.



THIS MAGNIFICENTLY ornate shrine to St. Francis Xavier is to be seen in India's state of Goa on the Arabian Sea. The saint's body is entombed in the richly adorned casket in Bom Jesus Basilica in Old Goa.

The Arizona Town That Refused To Lie Down And Die

What happens to a town threatened with oblivion by the march of progress; a town founded in the best traditions of the Old West by miners and pioneers, and instrumental in the history of a frontier state?

A town, like a family, is only as strong as the people who comprise it, and Wickenburg, Ariz., has kept the determination of its forefathers intact. While many cities fight for survival against freeways bulldozing through the center of town, Wickenburg's nemesis is just the reverse.

Located in central Arizona on the major east-west highways to California, the town is shortly to be bypassed by a new route 40 miles to the south — an eventuality that could liquidate several businesses immediately and eventually rob the town of its livlihood — tourism.

FACED WITH this, other communities have given up after a brief fight, leaving the town to those who moved in to take advantage of the depressed real estate and those few who chose to remain. Wickenburg, however, is unique in that almost every resident is thereby choice rather than necessity. Its businesses were established by people who came as visitors, liked the town for its climate, geography and atmosphere, and stayed on. Then they looked around to see what "their" town needed to keep it growing, and proceeded to fill that need.

Now these same citizens have taken a longer look and decided that the community deserves to survive.

Now that tourists will no longer be delivered to the door in such great numbers, how will the town go out and bring them in — and make them want to stay? How does it convince residents that the community is worth saving and revitalizing in the face of possible disaster?

FIRST IT rallies and reorganizes its chamber of commerce: throws out the "nothing-can-be-done" attitude; silences the "it's-been tried" contingent; refuses to accept the "can't-afford-it" view; and comes up with a group and spirit that say, "Let's go!". And Wickenburg has taken off with the bit in its teeth, but with the firm hand of the Roundup Club (the chamber of commerce) on the reins to guide it.

Spurred by local interest and the exhilaration of its possibilities, the Maricopa County Historical Society chose Wickenburg as the spot for the Maricopa County Museum — a fitting tribute to its past and a show of confidence in its future.

The Desert Caballeros, a riding group of men from 27 states, contributed its fine collection of western artifacts, and local talent and devotion had made the museum a point of town pride.

THE TOWN council was encouraged to build a municipal park with a shooting range, and a new arena for the thrills and spills of rodeo and gymkhana entertainment befitting the Old West tradition.

Local business men joined with a winter resident in the same field to establish a radio station. Listed as the smallest in the world, it tells the Wickenburg story to some 40,000 persons each day on the highways and in neighboring towns.

The community has organized an industrial development group, with money in the bank waiting to go to a business that would fit into the life of Wickenburg without heavy industry and its resultant air pollution and problems, but with the promise of employment for the town's young people. Moreover, for immediate growth, this same group has gotten an industrial air park off the drawing boards and fast abuilding on the outskirts, with the first commercial fly-in slated for May, 1969.

CONSTRUCTION is also about to begin on an $85,000 public library, financed by residents and designed by one of Arizona's leading architects.

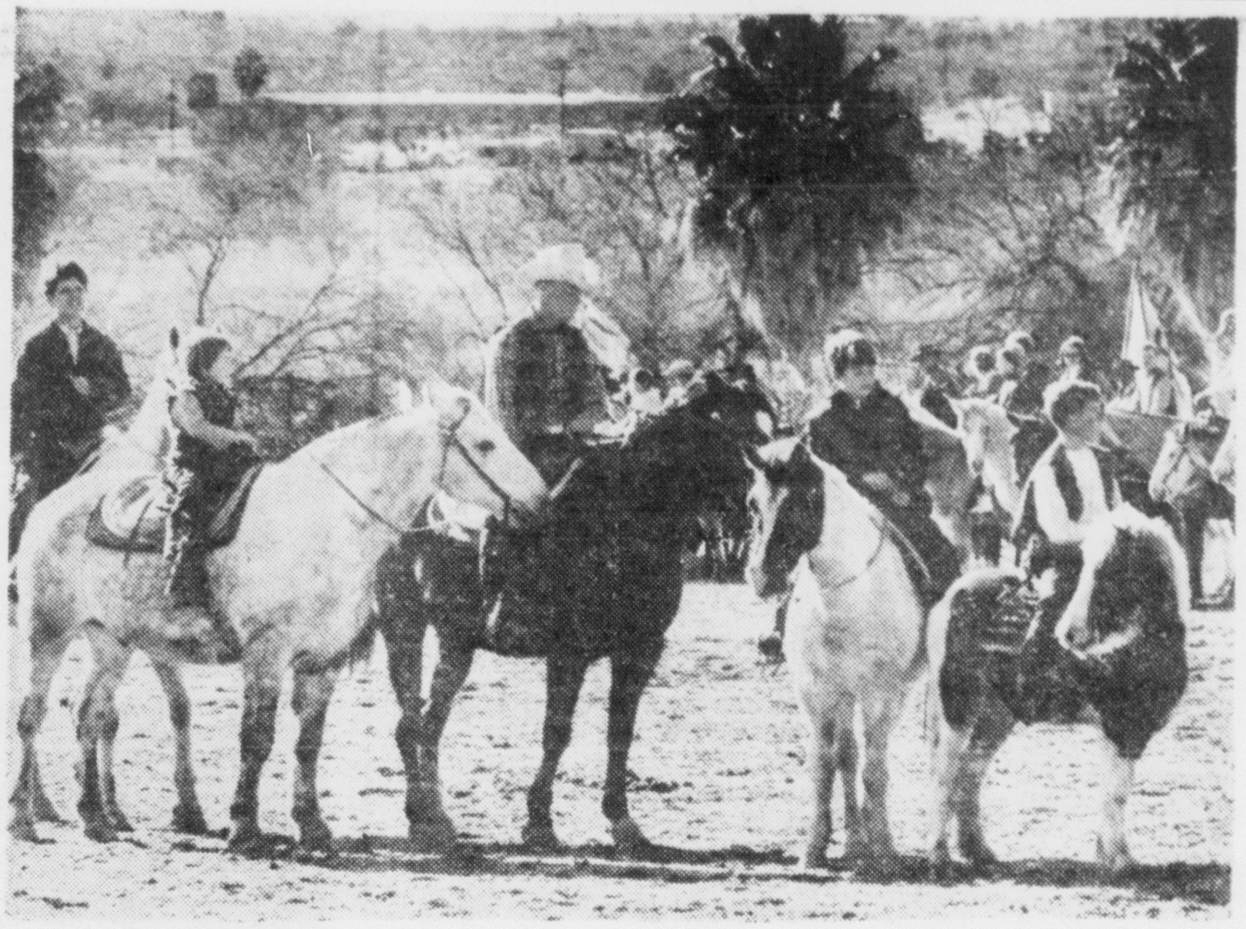
The town is also pushing the development of a dam and recreation area on a nearby river, provided that there are controls to insure its use by responsible vacationers who will appreciate its facilities and help to maintain its desirability as a recreation spot. In the near future, too, Wickenburg plans to build a convention center/community building for the use and enjoyment of both visitors and local organizations.

Granted, a working dream as big as Wickenburg's for its near-3,000 population is more expensive than simply hoping and planning, so a new 1 per cent sales tax, the first in the history of the town, was proposed and passed and put into effect on Jan. 1, 1969. And so confident is the town in its own future that private concerns are building three major subdivisions of exclusive size and in keeping with the high caliber of homes ready established in Wickenburg.

TRAILER PARKS abound, but here again, don't be fooled. You'd better call them mobile home parks, pardner, or practice your fast draw! Sometimes it's hard to see the trailer for the landscaping around it.

Not to be forgotten, the guest ranch/resorts that gave Wickenburg its reputation as "dude ranch capital of the world" so many years ago are still hale and hearty, contemplating future growth and expanded success. They've all encountered growing pains before, probably will again, but as an integral part of the proud community, they keep moving ahead with the town.

It takes a lot of hard work and a lifetime of practical dreams, but that's what got Wickenburg started in 1863, and what will keep it growing long after 1969!



KIDS THRIVE in the healthy outdoor atmosphere of Wickenburg, Ariz., with its refreshingly clean air, good weather, community spirit and unlimited choice of vigorous activities and outlets.

The Mardi Gras Is Under Way

Mardi Gras in New Orleans is much more than just a day of merriment for the city's populace and visitors; it is an entire social season with activities equivalent to the most elaborate affairs in any of the world's largest, most cosmopolitan cities.

Carnival began with the annual Harlequins Ball right after Christmas, and the season officially got under way on Twelfth Night, Jan 6. From that time through Mardi Gras night, which in 1969 will be Feb. 18, more than 75 tableau balls and three dozen parades were scheduled in the Crescent City.

During the 28 to 63 days of the carnival season (the date of Mardi Gras varies according to Easter), New Orleans is annually a city that forgets care. Carnival is a time of rededication for Orleanians to the beauty and romance traditions of their city.

AMONG FAMOUS guests who have enjoyed Mardi Gras in New Orleans are the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, for whom the Rex parade was organized in 1872, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who delighted onlookers by bowing to the mock royalty; Mrs. Harry Truman and her daughter, Margaret, and Lynda Bird Johnson.

In no other American city are the past and the present so nearly one as in New Orleans, the Creole city of French noblemen and Spanish grandees, of Andrew Jackson and Jean Lafitte, of the Bals de Roi and the Quadroon balls, and the dueling that reached its peak there.

Before the 1969 course is fully run the glorious meeting of Rex and Comus occurs on Mardi Gras night, a floodtide of balls and street parades will have engrossed the city. The clubs which organize the parades and balls are called "krewes," and most of them are made up of only men. However, women have recently formed their own krewes.

THE OLDEST krewes are still the most highly esteemed, and membership in them is so exclusive that the sons of members have not always been assured of admittance.

The krewes are characterized by secrecy, and the only king whose name is ever known to the public is that of Rex, king of carnival.

The kings are figureheads, and the real power of the krewes is invested in captains, who bear total responsibility for the success of the parades or balls. Their word is law, their names known only to the inner circles of krewe members.

THE CAPTAIN of Comus, oldest and most prestigious of all the krewes, is one of the most powerful men in New Orleans. His suggestions for king, queen and court, for invited guests and for call-outs to the dance are strictly followed.

The Mistick Krewe of Comus was originated in 1857 to bring some order to the chaotic festivities. Comus was well established by the 1870s when the other older krewes were born.

The imaginative parades during the last week or so of Mardi Gras are for the entertainment of all New Orleans. But the tableau balls are for only the haut monde-krewe members and guests.

GUEST INVITATIONS are not for dancing, only for watching. The dancing is ruled by a stricter tradition. The only men who may dance (the reverse is true for feminine krewes) are members who are costumed and masked. A few unmasked members and invited male guests, both in evening clothes so members may keep the secrecy of their membership, act as floor committeemen to summon the call-outs.

THE BELLES of the balls are the queens who preside and the maids who make up their courts. Most of the krewes choose from the debutantes of the carnival run concurrently.

Because of the number of balls and queen's suppers, all in the space of about six weeks, a girl would rather be presented in New Orleans than anywhere else in the world.

During the season, the girls wear extravagant gowns, are showered with gifts, are feted luxuriously, are courted arduously, and forever remember the magic of the wonderful year when they were introduced to New Orleans society.

No girl becomes a queen or maid on her personal charm. The krewe captains select girls whose fathers have long and actively participated in their organizations.

UNQUESTIONABLY, the two most desirable crowns are those of Comus and Rex.

The queen of Rex is queen of carnival, but she must share her throne with a public king, while the queen of Comus rules beside an anonymous king. Rex's subjects are more numerous, but Comus' realm is more exclusive.

King's Cakes are the traditional refreshment items for social events during carnival season, and bakeries turn out tens of thousands of the cakes, oval, bread-like circlets decorated with the official carnival colors (purple for sincerity, gold for loyalty and green for love), and containing a bean for selection of a queen.

Long before the general public was participating in Mardi Gras activities, teen-age queens and kings were reigning only at neighborhood "King's Cake parties."

CHILDREN IN socially prominent families are groomed for carnival almost from birth.

This year's debutantes were first presented in December, and from then on, the pace has increased, and the ballrooms of the Municipal Auditorium, hotels and the new Rivergate Convention Center have been filled with dancers, maskers, spectators and the sounds of merriment, madness and music.

Spokesman From An Ancient Order

WISDOM OF THE MYSTIC MASTERS by Joseph J. Weed; Parker, 208 pages, $5.95.

FACES PEOPLE WEAR by Charles di Salvo with Claire Cox Hawthorn, 222 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Book-sellers report a surge of interest among their customers in books on metaphysics, mysticism, the supernatural, exotic religions and philosophies, etc.

It is, apparently, all part of the current revulsion to the excessive materialism of our society.

The young people have found their own ways of expressing that revolt. But many of the older generations are crying "enough" too, and are seeking new alternatives. The great enthusiasm for eastern religions, or for mystics such as the late Edgar Cayce, are facets of this.

But one movement that is far from new, yet still claiming its adherents, is the Rosicrucian Order or AMORC (Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucia) which written records trace back to the 12th Century and which claims to go much further into ancient Egypt and its mystery schools.

Joseph J. Weed, capitalist and member of the order since 1932, currently its grand councilor for the North Atlantic states, has become one of the leading Rosicrucian spokesmen through his lectures and his books.

His newest book is "Wisdom of the Mystic Masters."

Weed expounds the basic Rosicrucian teachings including the fundamental tenet that all manifestations come from energy. He applies Rosicrucian principles to such subjects as healing, thought control, telepathy, psychic projection, and he discusses such precepts as karma, reincarnation, the law of cycles, prayer.

Not all Rosicrucians would accept everything that Weed enunciates, but he explains that it is a vital part of the movement's program that each member appraise and evaluate such teachings for himself.

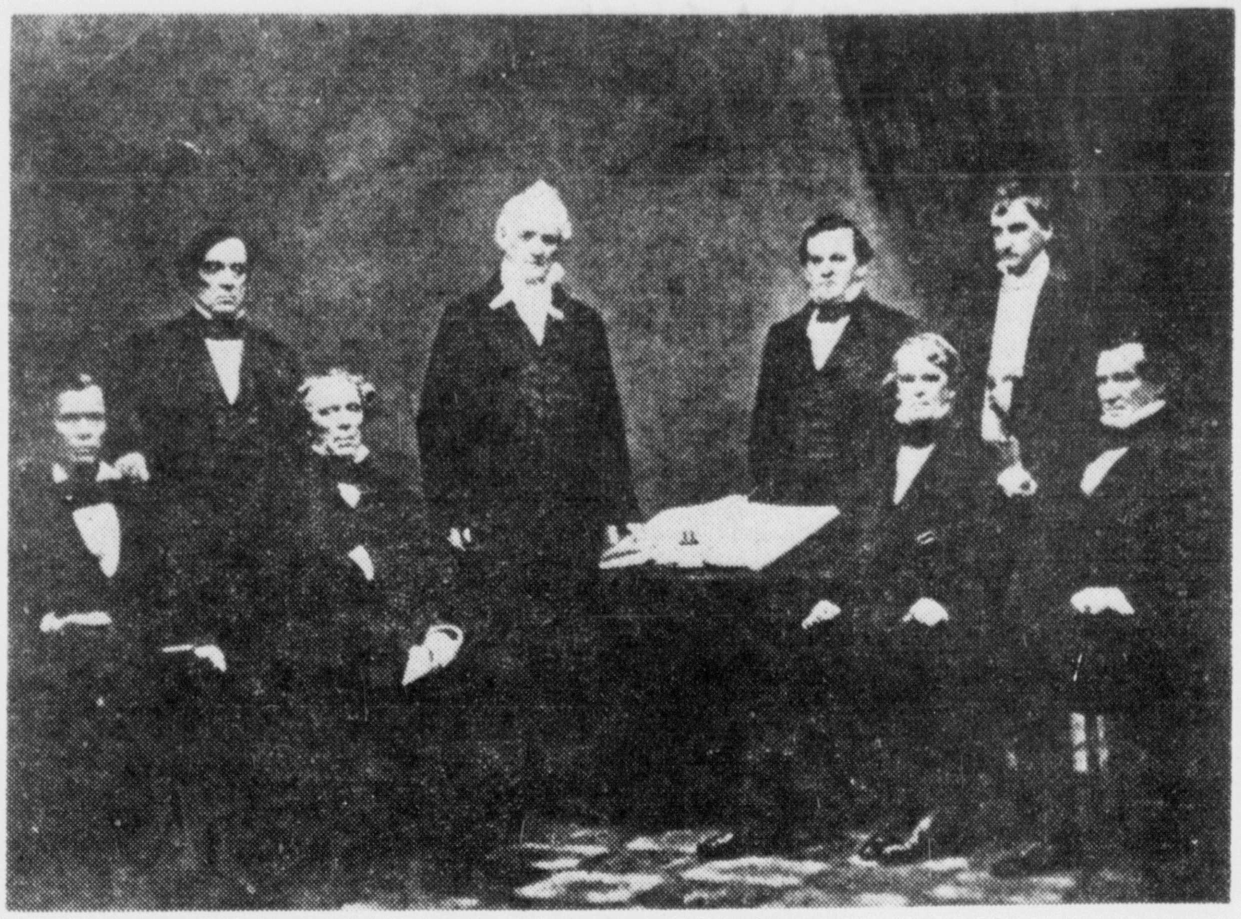
The important thing, he says, is that AMORC and the body of beliefs that it has built up through the centuries can be used to score a breakthrough against the wall of self-deception and illusion that materialistic man has built around himself.

As with so many of these books, the jacket makes some extravagant and rather nonsensical claims as to the "awesome secrets" to be found inside the book. Weed, too, sometimes gets carried away.

But for those searching for another dimension in their lives, "Wisdom of the Mystic Masters," while it is unlikely to fulfill all its promises, may point out a direction. Once interested, the reader can go on to other Rosicrucian writing less popularized and less sensationalized. Like most things that have survived for ages, the Rosicrucian movement must have accumulated some real and great values and insights from the many famous and wise men who have been associated with it through the centuries.

"FACES PEOPLE Wear" by Charles di Salvo with help from Claire Cox is standard psychotherapy stuff, this time by an author who is also a minister and pastoral counselor.

The social unrest of today, Di Salvo argues, is an accumulation of a highly personalized problem within so many of us, an uncertainty as to our true identity and proper role in society.



THE FIRST GROUP photograph of a United States President's cabinet was taken in 1857 by Matthew Brady, and showed President James Buchanan's advisers. The historic photo is reproduced in "The Glorious Burden," a pictorial history of presidential elections by Stefan Lorant, published by Harper & Row.

He applies his theory to such specific problems as alcoholism, the generation gap, the aged, widowhood, delinquency, immaturity, homosexuality.

A pause to take stock of ourselves is often the first step toward the remedy or alleviation of any of these conditions, the minister-psychotherapist advises.

And he concludes his book: "Now may be the time for you to ask yourself seriously, 'Who am I? Am I aware of the real me behind the reflection I see in the mirror every morning? How much attention do I give to the inner person? In what ways do I express my identity? Do I cope with it or allow it to create problems and crises for me and those around me?"

Professional help may be needed to provide the answers, he says, but once reached, the solutions should point you toward a greater understanding and tolerance of yourself and others, and toward a more constructive life.

Di Salvo's book seems to lose some of its impact because it strays from his central point and wanders over the entire psychotherapy field generally.

MENLO PARK'S Lane Magazine and Book Co. has published new expanded editions of two of its softcover books popular with vacationers — "Sunset Western Campsite Directory" and "California National Parks" ($1.95 each).

The former, which has sold 306,000 copies in eight earlier versions, has been updated to include the latest information on 5,000 public and private campgrounds in the western U.S. and Canada.

The latter now contains data on the new Redwood National Park, as well as revised information on the established national parks, monuments and Point Reyes National Seashore.

Both books are profusely illustrated

THE ERUDITE Lord Acton, when he died in 1902, left behind a vast amount of writing in periodicals, but no single assemblage of his thinking. His executors hastened to correct that situation by collecting his scattered papers into four sizable volumes. And still they had by no means exhausted his writing.

Thus a fifth volume, "Essays on Church and State."

In paperback format ($2.95) from Apollo Editions, these are pieces written more than a century ago by Acton as a young Catholic scholar, stung by the slights of Protestant England and eager to prove the worth of the intellectualism of his church. The papers have been reprinted exactly as written, except for correction of typographical errors, and find the great mind that did, indeed, succeed eventually in overcoming the resistance to his religious background commenting upon a wide range of theological-secular relationships of his time. Most interesting to present-day American readers will be his piece on "The Political Causes of the American Revolution" and another on "The Political System of the Popes."

"RENOIR" IS the newest addition to McGraw-Hill's imaginative "Color Slide Program of the Great Masters" series. Inside the cover, along with 20 color slides of the greatest works of Pierre Auguste Renoir, the purchaser also gets a brief biography of the French master, further reproductions of his work, and an illuminating and stimulating discussion of his work by Middlebury College's art historian, Robert F. Reiff. It's a tremendous treat for the art buff and particularly the Renoir fan.

THE LITERARY Guild has chosen "Providence Island," romantic adventure novel by Calder Willingham, as its March selection.

The Men Who Published In Defiance Of Gestapo

THE BATTLE OF SILENCE by Vercors; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 286 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

To a Frenchman, "The Silence of the Sea" stands as a symbol of the historic Resistance movement of World War II. Since its publication in the early 1940s, more than a million copies of it have been sold. Its author was known only then as Vercors (Jean Bruller, the pre-war artist and engraver), who is now something of a literary giant.

Now 25 years later Vercors has set down for history details of the famed clandestine publishing house, "Editions de Minuit" (the Midnight Press), and of its first book, "The Silence of the Sea."

The small print of the book will probably scare away the meek. However, it is a profound account of France's courage during the bleak days of World War II.

Until the birth of the Midnight Press, the French spiritual Resistance had only one weapon — silence. From its inception, the underground publishing firm was a tool of defiance. Its founders, if ever identified, faced Nazi imprisonment, torture and execution. Vercors details how the press was able to print and distribute forbidden books —at the rate of one or more volumes a month — right under the nose of the Gestapo. And what is more amazing, a member of the group was never discovered.

From pre-war France to the struggles of the war and finally to the liberation of Paris, Vercors' account is spellbinding.

But more important, the account is the story of the continuing struggle for expression of freedom of thought and expression.

Sleuths & Suspense

TAKE A PAIR OF PRIVATE EYES by J. T. McIntosh; Doubleday, 191 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Novels mixing crime and humor can be awful duds. But when the funny stuff comes off well, as it does here, then you have yourself an evening of delicious entertainment.

J. T. McIntosh introduces you to Ambrose and Dominique Frayne, a swinging young mod couple in London who specialize in the recovery of stolen property, and therefore find themselves frequently involved in contests of wit with the city's underworld.

McIntosh keeps his story, based on a television play by Peter O'Donnell, moving at a rapid pace, as he provides a continuous stream of ribtickling dilemmas from which the quickwitted Ambrose and his French-born bride must extricate themselves.

One finishes the book hopeful that Ambrose and Dominique will become regulars on Doubleday's Crime Club label.

Banking With Romance

WELLS FARGO by Noel M. Loomis; Clarkson N. Potter, 326 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The history of a company can often be a dull affair — but not when it is such a company as Wells Fargo, certainly the most romanticized banking house in the United States.

Noel M. Loomis, assistant professor of English at San Diego State College, tells the story in some detail of both Wells Fargo's stagecoach operations and its banking, following them through the intricate splits, mergers and associations that have produced a host of arguments over just what Wells Fargo operated and what it didn't.

He has drawn heavily on Wells Fargo's own history room for information. Three hundred illustrations —ranging from drawings of Indian attacks to portraits of the bank's present executives — adorn the pages.

The book is attractive. It is well researched. But better writers than Noel M. Loomis have told the story of Wells Fargo long before this.

Although this volume bears no visible evidence of being a "house job," Loomis virtually fawns over everything done by Henry Wells and David G. Fargo and the men who succeeded them. With such a good story to tell, this isn't necessary.

The White Man's Closed Shop

THE LAND OF AFTERNOON by Lewis Sowden; McGraw-Hill, 256 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

"South Africa . . . where humanism is weakness, justice is adjusted . . . and civilization is a white man's closed shop." This is South African journalist Lewis Sowden's appraisal of his homeland.

British-born Sowden describes the tightening of the black man's suppression, apartheid, from the comparatively easy-going paternalism of 50 years ago to the ruthless racism of today.

Most of the blame for apartheid is pinned on the Boers, the Dutch-descended farmers who settled in South Africa more than a century ago.

"Apartheid is the Boer's wild desire to unscramble the egg," Sowden writes.

The Boers hope to lead their nation back to the halcyon days of the "Land of Afternoon" by getting blacks and coloureds out of their sight. Any means will do. This "apart-hood" has largely succeeded because the million British people there have been mostly apathetic.

Sowden maintains that "the dominant aspect of South African politics is British acquiescence to Boer intransigence."

The book traces the rise of apartheid from the time of the political demise of gifted statesman Jan Smuts, a reasonable Boer, in 1947.

Daniel Malan and Afrikaners of the Nationalist Party feared an eventual takeover by blacks, immigrants and non-Boers in general. Beginning in the late 1940s they began to legislate the following repressive laws that comprise apartheid:

The Population Register required coloureds to carry identity cards attesting to their status in limbo;

The Group Areas Act "cleansed" white towns of all non-white enclaves. Today in South Africa it is the blacks who are the suburban dwellers and commuters;

The Separate Amenities Act of 1953 (note the sugar-coated labels) excluded non-whites from public premises and transportation;

The Bantu Education Act placed the education (or lack of it) in the hands of the federal government to thwart local white sympathizers; and

The industrial Conciliation Act of 1956 reserved skilled jobs for whites only.

These repressive measures resulted in non-violent opposition by some blacks and a few liberal whites. Mass arrests were made in 1956 by the government on grounds of treason.

Soon violence erupted. Five thousand blacks demonstrating against the harsh Pass Laws that severely restricted their movements became unruly. A handful of frightened untrained policemen opened fire with Sten guns and slew 68 blacks, wounding 178 more. This was the Sharpeville Massacre.

Nothing as overtly brutal takes place again, but Sowden writes of the Union of South Africa now as really five nations: Boer, British, Black, Coloured and Indian. Each group is separated by social, legal, and physical barriers.

The author's sympathies for the blacks and coloureds led to government repression of his play "Kimberly Train," then the withholding of his passport for five years. Sowden left South Africa several years ago to reside in Jerusalem.

"Land of Afternoon" gives an interesting account of the author's childhood days and ways of life before the rise of apartheid. But he never really has control of his material; there is much that is discursive and too little about the 1950s, the time of apartheid.

Sowden, the journalist, did not get enough help from Sowden, the editor.

Man — What Can He Eat, And Why Is He So Limited?

FOOD, FACTS, FOIBLES AND FABLES by Dr. A. T. W. Simeons; Funk and Wagnalls, 150 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Dr. Simeons, a physician, traces the evolution of our feeding habits in this small book subtitled "The Origins of Human Nutrition," beginning with our far distant herbivorous ancestors through the carnivorous eaters that followed to the omnivorous feeders of today.

Man, he says, has developed the ability to digest anything.

Along the way, the doctor has some interesting observations on specific topics such as the obesity problem:

"It has rightly been pointed out that obesity would be a less serious problem if a man would revert to eating frequent snacks instead of a few heavy meals . . ."

And: "There are two other factors responsible in some measure for the source of obesity. . . . The first is the rapid increase in the consumption of cooked — particularly boiled — food as against raw food. The human intestine digests and assimilates cooked and refined food . . . far more rapidly than their raw and natural equivalents. The result is that shortly after a meal our system is quickly flooded with more nutriment than it can make use of at the time. The surplus goes into abnormal fat deposits. . . .

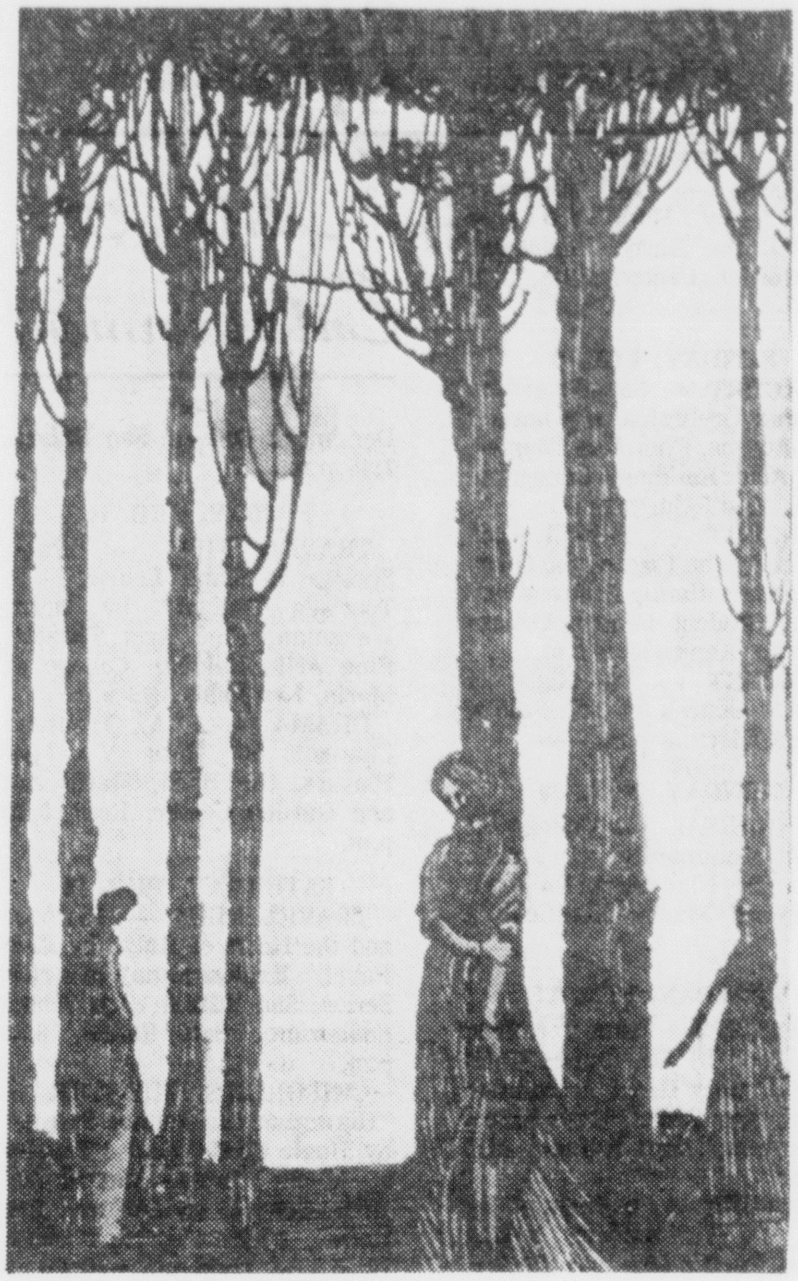
"The second factor . . . is a generic one. From Neolithic times to our day there has been a sexual selection favoring an inherited tendency toward overweight. In the marriage market a plump girl has almost universally had a better chance than a skinny one. . . ."

Dr. Simeons also has some pointed remarks on other subjects. For instance on digestion: the stomach, he says, operates in a fashion similar to the automatic washing machine.

"In most cases, saying that it can digest some things and not others is like contending that an automatic laundry machine will wash perfectly bedsheets, tablecloths and shirts, but not socks. The nature of the food eaten cannot influence the process of digestion to anything like the extent to which the brain's fears, fads and fancies can. Banal indigestion is rarely caused by what is eaten, but rather by the eater's emotional attitude to what he has eaten or the emotional tension under which he ate."

Wrong thinking is more often the cause of our complaints than wrong feeding, he contends.

The doctor's observations are often opinionated and challenging, making for an interesting book that is off the beaten track in the field of nutrition. It is good history of how man became the feeder that he is today. Whether it is sound commentary upon those habits will be a point of controversy, with even the nutritionists split.



TEN PAINTINGS by Bill Greer, reproduced in color, are included as illustrations for "Judge Tenderly of Me," a collection of Emily Dickenson poems selected by the late Winfield Townley Scott and published by Hallmark Editions.

Setting The Record Straight About A Figure Of Folklore

DEAR OLD KIT by Harvey Lewis Carter; University of Oklahoma Press, 238 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Kit Carson is in somewhat the same position as Davy Crockett and Dan'l Boone: He is as much a figure of folklore as of history, and it is hard to separate fact from fiction.

Harvey Lewis Carter, professor of American history at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, assays to do the job. He does it quite thoroughly in "Dear Old Kit."

The book consists of three parts: Carter's foreword, which points out the fallacies that have crept into historical accounts dealing with Carson; Carson's own memoirs, with copious marginal notes, and a "reappraisal" of the famed frontiersman by Carter.

The result is a substantial contribution to western history. Christopher Carson emerges as a more human, less romanticized figure, but all in all a larger one.

However, in setting the record straight on Carson, the writer inadvertently clouds it a bit himself by leaving out known episodes of Kit's life. For instance, there is no mention of Kit's first wife, Owl Woman. When he wrote his memoirs, Kit had long since re-married, and did not refer to the squaw who was his first wife. But it is unfortunate that so scholarly a work as Carter's omits her entirely.

Superior Soaper

WHIPPLE'S CASTLE by Thomas Williams; Random House, 536 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

"Whipple's Castle" might be described as another Peyton Place-type novel, but produced by a vastly superior writer.

Williams concentrates upon a single community — the New Hampshire town of Leah, about which he has written before. There is a certain soap operish tinge to the involvements and the travails of his leading characters, the Whipples, who reside there in their mansion. And the story is, of course, well supplied with sex scenes.

Yet Williams overcomes the reader's aversion with his writing skill and with the intensity of his feeling for his characters. Obviously, his relationship to the Whipples and their problems was no superficial one. And since they have such deep meaning for their creator, they come to be of real concern to the reader as well.

The novel is set in the 1940s, a time remembered well by most of us. And yet Williams succeeds in reminding us of a great deal about the period that has been forgotten, accidentally or intentionally.

THE FARALLONES – MEMORIES

Close to Point Reyes,
Haven for birds,
Flying day and night,
Petrel and Auklet;
Visited by Blackbirds,
Meadow Larks,
And most all birds
That seek the land;
Haven of California,
And the giant Stellar Seal,
Hunted by Killer Whales,
Occasionally challenging,
Days on into nights;
Still resounds the echo
And the memory;
Of Pacific Storms, fog,
    and winds;
Lights of distant San Francisco;
Red beacons on the bridge;
And amongst the rocks and crags,
In sea caves,
Echo of wind and Murre,
The human baby sounds
    of such birds.
The Duck Hawk;
Upon a high precipice
Challenging all that flies;
The Farallon Cormorant
    Leaving toward the dawn,
And break of day.
    Returning with the setting sun,
Make use of all the light of day,
    Life set in motion,
Never ceasing,
    Of bird and mammal
Wind and wave.

"THE BEATLES" — Apple SWBO 101:

The new double-disc package of the Beatles has a completely white exterior with no artwork. Inside are loose individual color photos of the Beatles and a large collage of snapshots backed by the complete lyrics of the tunes.

This album has no over-all theme — just a rich stream of wonderful tracks that capture the ear in rapid succession as the stylus tracks through the unbanded sides of the discs. The general tenor seems to be a return to less psychedelic days; even to the 1920s or 30s in "Savoy Truffle."

While some tunes try to coat strong feelings of protest with satire — "The Continuing Story of Bungalow Bill," "Piggies" — most are good-natured and designed just for enjoyment again and again. My votes for cream-of-the-cream go to "Julia," "Blackbird," and a toe-tapping tale of gunplay in the Black Hills, "Rocky Raccoon." The humor of "Sexy Sadie" and "Back in the USSR" is great, especially the take-off on the Beach Boys in the latter.

While this album may not quite equal the superb "Sgt. Pepper," it undoubtedly will have a high position in the compleat opera Beatle — and I can't imagine even a part-time Beatles fan being without it.

"MUSIC FROM BIG PINK" — Capitol SKAO 2955:

This rock LP also is high on the charts.

The group was sort of discovered by Bob Dylan. They have a peculiar sort of country flavor, along Appalachian folk music lines. The big hit from this disc is "The Weight," and it proves an almost unforgettable tune. Three Dylan tunes are included, with "I Shall Be Released" a real beauty, on this compelling rock release.

"CHILDREN OF THE FUTURE" — The Steve Miller Band — Capitol SKAO 2920:

The first album by this dynamic young San Francisco group has much to offer. The production values, sometimes making interesting use of sound effects from the Bay such as gulls, are an important part of the album's impact on the listener.

"You've Got the Power" is a strong-hitting blues. "Baby's Calling Me Home" is a fairly "pop-sounding" tune with catchy harpsichord riff, and "Steppin' Stone" a raucous electronic rock number.

The group seems stronger in the instrumental department than the vocal.

This album is a good example of the superior San Francisco sound in rock right now.

"ALBUM 1700" — Peter, Paul and Mary — Warner Bros. WS 1700:

This is the first PP & M album I have reviewed. Not that I didn't think their work was always of the highest professional level — it just didn't really affect me until hearing two tracks in this one: "I Dig Rock and Roll Music" and "The Great Mandella." The latter is a deeply moving experience if you really listen to the lyrics.

A stronger rock beat than in former albums is present here. The three voices blend beautifully, and the arrangements are a model of good taste.

The other 10 tunes are very listenable also.

"THE MASON WILLIAMS PHONOGRAPH RECORD" — Warner Bros. WS 1729:

As anyone who saw the "toad-sucking" recitation by Mason Williams on the Smothers Brothers TV show knows, this man is a nut. A very versatile nut, too.

He sings, plays the guitar beautifully, whistles, composes music ranging from his hit "Classical Gas," to Texas blues-guitarish "Long Time Blues," and writes books, lyrics, and gags for television.

Both six and 12-string guitars are heard on some tunes, and the large studio orchestra provides a colorful setting for Williams' creations while avoiding over-arrangement.

The Dada-esque "Prince's Panties" and the haunting theme "Sunflower" are other highlights in the LP.

Williams' second record, now being released, should find many repeat purchasers.

It's Camellia Time At Nurseries

To choose the camellia that meets your standards of beauty perfectly, you have to visit the nursery while these shrubs are in bloom.

Now is that time.

In the showyards of Marin nurseries, the Japonica camellias in particular are in full flower. But you will also find a number of the Sasanquas also still in bloom.

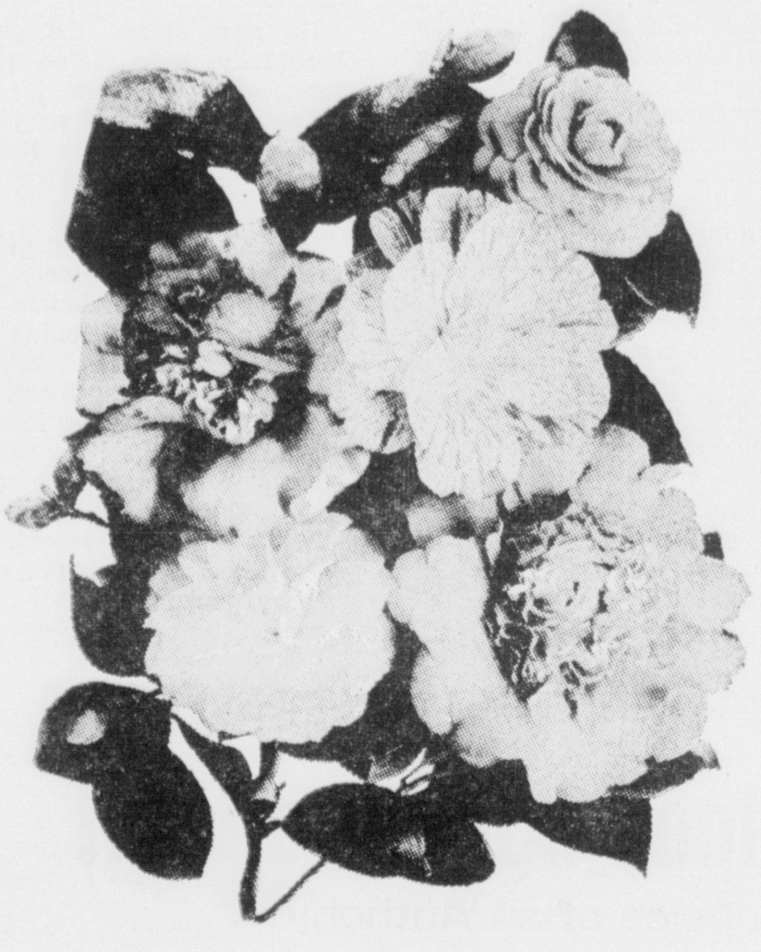
The third principal classification, the Reticulatas, will not bloom until a bit later.

BUT SO VARIED are the Japonicas and the Sasanquas that you should have little difficulty finding your ideal camellia.

For instance, among the Japonicas you will come upon such stunning specimens as the Covina, orange-red rose form blooms; the Daikagura, peony-shaped flowers of a bright rose-pink splotched with white, and the Kumasaka, semi-double blooms in a showy rose-pink.

Growing habits of the shrubs themselves are just as varied.

THE DAIKAGURA, an early bloomer, for instance, has a slow, pendulous growth habit that makes it especially suited to tub culture or use as a foundation plant. Covina, a mid-season flowerer, is a compact grower that is highly regarded for hedges and for borders.



Garden Page

The later-blooming Kumasaka grows more vigorously and taller, with foliage that is ideal for background planting.

Like the more popular Japonicas, the Sasanquas, too, are a versatile lot.

THERE ARE TWO prime requisites in selection a location for your new camellias — shade, and good drainage. A wet winter such as this one drives home the point that the camellia should not be placed where water stands.

Otherwise, the cultural requirements of the camellia are miniscule.

Research At The Nurseries

Industries of all kinds have found it pays to carry out the continuing research programs necessary for the development of new products for their consumers.

The nursery business is no exception.

It conducts research and experimentations unceasingly, aimed at producing new, more beautiful, sturdier plants for the enjoyment of the gardener.

Take the development of new varieties of roses, for example.

A modern nursery's research department may make as many as 10,000 crosses in a single year to develop new seedlings. From these crosses possibly 2,000 seedlings will develop. From these, perhaps only one-tenth of 1 per cent, or two new varieties, might show sufficient merit for commercial production.

Rose hybridizing is highly scientific today: Geneticists have to know chromosone counts and dominant genes.

The work of cross-pollination is all done by hand.

Parent plants are selected because of their special merits shown. A variety having unusual fragrance, for example, may be crossed with a variety having exceptional color — in the hope that a seedling might be produced that would have the advantages of both parents.

Occasionally a "sport" occurs in the fields that has merit, but this occurs so seldom that the nursery industry cannot depend upon it. Instead it must continue an ever increasing program of research.

The same careful attention to selection of parent plants and the cross-pollinizing to produce new seedlings goes on in a constant search for new varieties of fruits as well as shrubs and flowers.

The new variety is very carefully isolated to prevent natural cross-pollination. Budwood for the production of additional plants is taken from the original plant, and used to bud the new variety into the rootstock specifically grown for that purpose. From the original parent plant only a limited amount of budwood can be taken, so in the second year of production a new variety relatively few additional plants are available.

Again there is the taking of budwood from the second year's production to bud still more plants and by another year another small increase in the number of plants has occurred.

Before the new variety is made available for commercial purposes, it must be tested in all sections of the country. A variety that proves satisfactory in one section may be a complete failure in other areas.

This can mean several years of additional research work before a variety is ready for introduction to the gardening public.

Bulbs For A Summer Spectacular Of Bloom

Spring-blooming bulbs outnumber summer-blooming bulbs by far.

But when it comes to a contest in color, the bulbs that flower in the summer are an easy winner over their spring-blooming cousins.

The summer list includes such spectacular performers as the gladiolus, the cannas, tuberous begonias, dahlias, hybrid lilies and the fragrant tuberoses.

In Marin, right now is the time to plant a number of these bulbs for summer bloom.

EXCEPTIONS ARE the dahlias which shouldn't be set out before mid-March, and begonia tubers. The latter can be sprouted now and planted after the danger of frost has passed.

And while the agapanthas or Blue Lily of the Nile, can be grown from the bulbs, most gardeners prefer to start with the young plants that are just as cheap. Nurserymen offer them in containers.

The gladiolus and the dahlias are the most publicized of the summer-blooming bulb flowers, and as a result such showy plants as the cannas are sometines overlooked. But these can be the standouts of a summer border, if given a chance.

TROPICAL IN appearance, the cannas grow taller than most flowers. Growers can choose from a multiple of shades including pinks, white, yellow, reds, bronze and orange.

Another often overlooked summer-blooming bulb flower is the tigridia or Mexican Shell Flower, which produces tri-corner blooms, spreckled and solid, in a wide range of brilliant colors. Those blooms last only a day. But each bulb produces such a succession of blossoms through the summer that the daily dying-back is never noticed.

The tigridia, one of the bulbs that can be planted this month, should be massed closely for best effect.

WAIT UNTIL SPRING TO REPAIR FROST DAMAGE

The California Association of Nurserymen has repeated its warning to gardeners not to rush into pruning the injured parts of frost-damaged trees, shrubs and plants.

Such pruning should wait until spring after new growth has started.

If cutting back is done now on the frost-bitten plantings, the nurserymen advise, then unseasonably warm winter temperatures could cause even more extensive damage to the tender new growth.

For California as a whole, the association says, it has been a bad winter for cold weather damage.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Set out rhododendrons now for a big show later on. If you want color in the spring, seek plants already showing buds.

✓ If you want an accent tree for the garden, consider the olive with its handsome gray foliage.

✓ Flowering quinces are in bloom now in the nurseries, so that you can pick one with the color that best suits your taste.

✓ Plant grapes now while they are dormant. Also: currants, boysenberries, youngberries, raspberries and blackberries. Not all varieties are suited to our climate, so consult your nurseryman on this matter.

✓ Divide established clumps of Shasta daisy and perennial phlox.

✓ Plant new perennials from the nursery.

✓ The bareroot planting season for roses and many shrubs and trees is still with us, but won't be much longer.

✓ Dormant spraying time is also running out. Don't delay much longer.

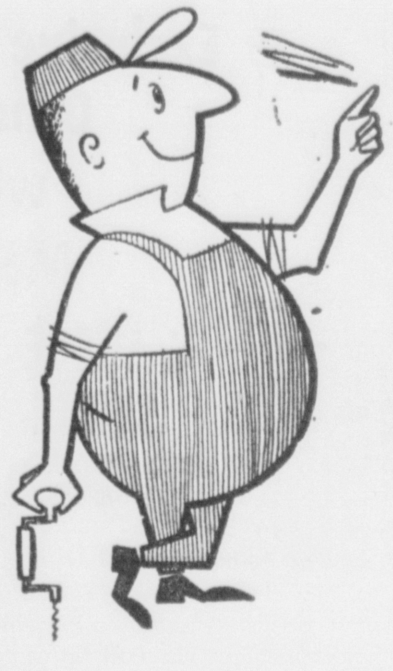
Closing The Pores That Are In The Wood

The term "wood filler" is often misinterpreted.

Many persons associate it with such terms as plastic wood, water putty and similar materials intended to plug cracks, holes or other gaps in finished or unfinished pieces of wood.

When, however, you are told to use a wood filler as the first step in finishing wood, the words recover their true meaning — a product designed to close the pores of certain kinds of wood.

NATURALLY, THESE woods are those which have large open pores, such as oak, mahogany, walnut, chestnut, elm, butternut, hickory, ash, rosewood and satinwood. They require a wood filler because most persons prefer them to have smooth surfaces, although some see them as more beautiful when the pores are left as they are.



Most wood fillers come in semi-paste form. It is important to read the label on the container to determine the type of thinner to be used.

The filler is brushed on the wood, first with the grain, then against the grain. It quickly takes on a dull appearance, which is the signal to begin rubbing the covered area, a process known professionally as "flattening."

THE RUBBING should be done with a piece of clean burlap in a modified circular motion. The movement with the grain forces the filler into the pores of the wood.

When the rubbing is completed, the excess should be wiped off very lightly with a clean, lintless cloth in the direction of the grain. If this wipe-off is neglected, the surface of the wood will become tacky. On the other hand, if it is done with too much pressure, some of the filler may be lifted from the pores.

Although there are various views on how long the filler should be permitted to set before going ahead with the finishing operation, we have found that it is best to wait two or three days.

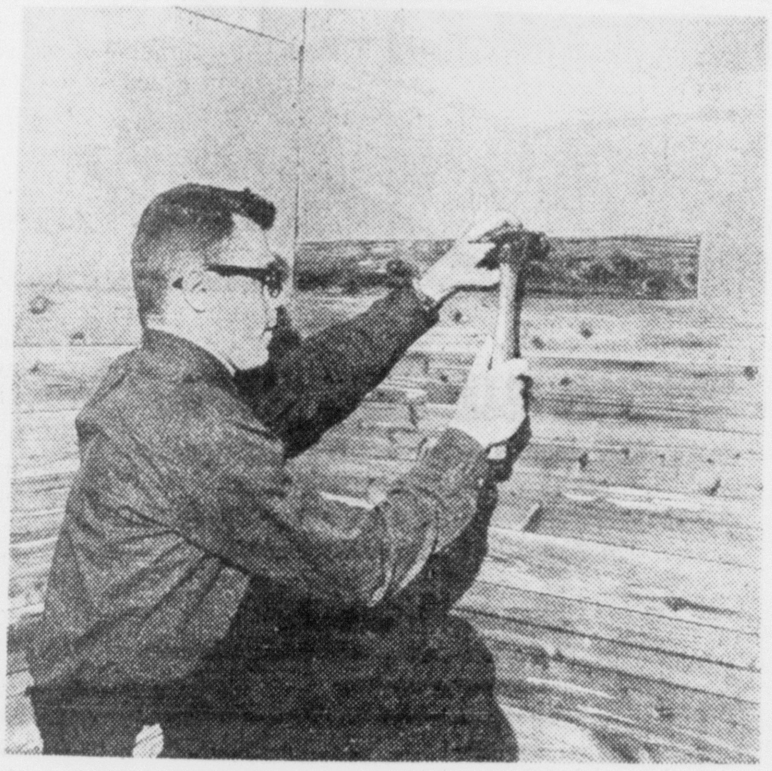
THE SURFACE should then be sanded very lightly, wiping off all sanding dust. A coat of sealer is then applied. It can be a light coat of shellac or almost any other sealer, with one exception; if the final coat is to be lacquer, use only a sealer formulated for use under lacquer.

A beginner in the use of wood filler will often make the mistake of covering too large an area at one time. The filler may then begin to harden on one part of the work before the rubbing is started, preventing the worker from obtaining the desired smooth surface.

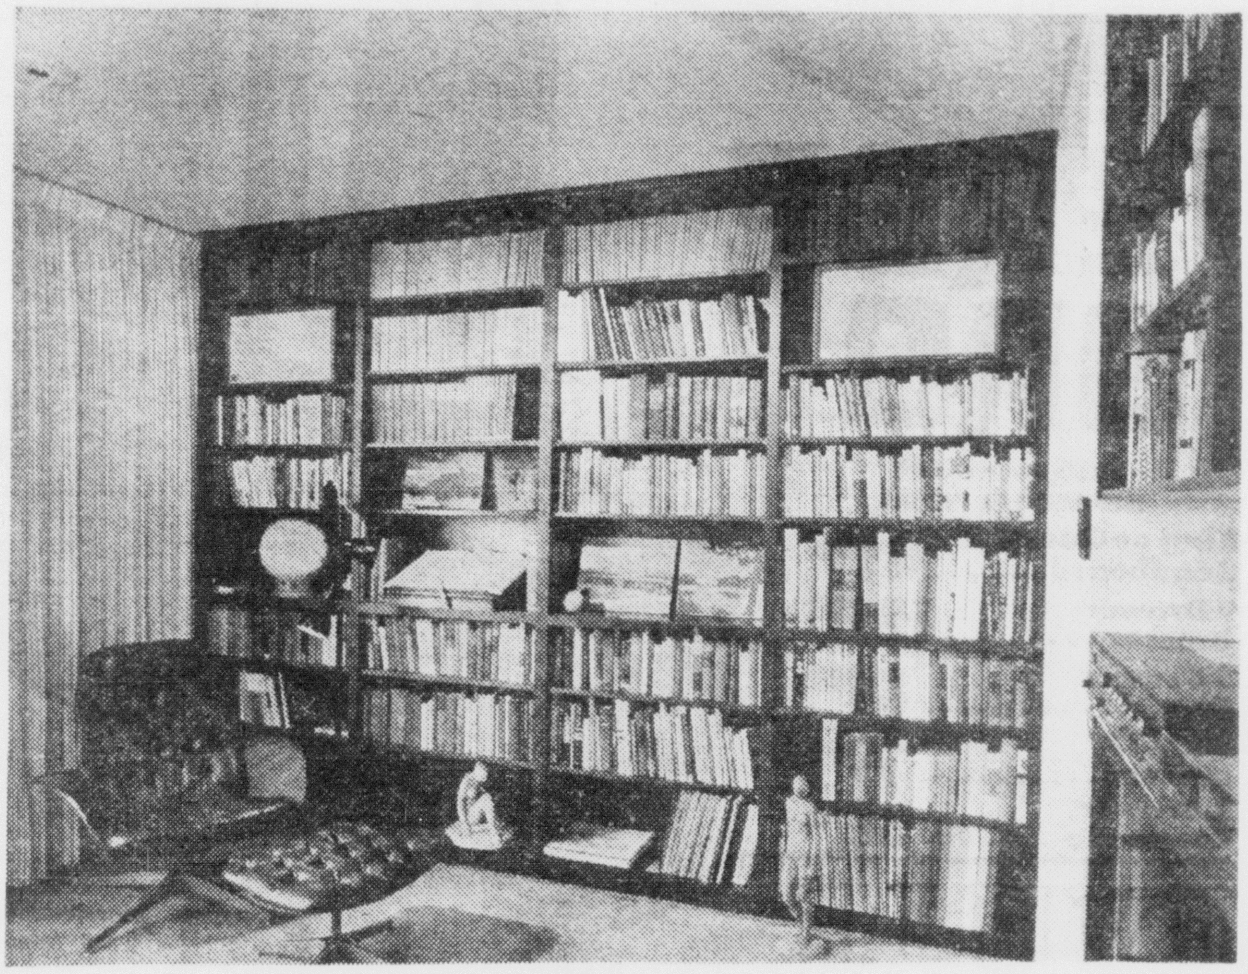
There is no reason for panic should this occur. The filler can be quickly resoftened by wiping it with a cloth soaked in the recommended thinner.

One other point the novice should know before tackling the job of wood filling: If, after applying the filler and completing the rubbing, he discovers, on close examination, that some of the pores do not appear to be filled, he should repeat the entire operation before putting on the sealer.

AN INDOOR PROJECT FOR THE WEEKEND



CONSIDERING the kind of weather we have experienced this winter, it would not be surprising if you have just about run out of weekend projects for inside the home. Consider, however, if you have not already done so, the possibility of lining an existing closet or some unused space such as an attic corner with aromatic red cedar to provide a moth-proof storage area for out-of-season clothing. It is not a difficult job, for cedar boards can be nailed directly over open framework. The lining comes in easy-to-handle pieces, each tongue-and-grooved along the edges and ends to simplify fitting. To line a closet, nail the pieces horizontally and beginning at the bottom and in a corner. Joints need not coincide with studs. But the lining should be nailed to the studs, so it is advisable that all studs be marked before starting. Remember to remove all hardware from the wall, ceiling and inside of the door before starting to apply the cedar. The first piece is placed with the grooved edge down and the grooved end in the corner. This leaves the tongue end and edge on the outside. Use 4d finishing nails and drive them through the face of each piece into the studs. Nails should be approximately three-quarters of an inch down from the top edge of the strip, with a second nail driven into each stud about three quarters of an inch from the floor. The second and all additional rows of lining are installed in the same manner except that only one nail is needed at each 16-inch interval. Be sure to tap each piece lightly down on top of the piece below so that the tongue and groove edges fit perfectly. When cutting end pieces, it is not necessary to be precise if quarter-round molding is to be used. Line the ceiling, floor and inside of the door as well as the wall to be assured of protection against moths. No finish of any kind should be applied, since this only seals in the aroma and minimizes the effectiveness of the wood. The only maintenance required is an occasional dusting.



DOUGLAS FIR one-by-12-inch boards have been used at one end of a large living room to convert two wasted walls into a useful and attractive library corner. Base cabinets at far right house music equipment and store tapes and stereo albums. Built-ins are painted black to accent a scheme of subtle neutrals.

A Library In The Living Room

Nothing decorates or warms a room as quickly as a few shelves of books — and that's one reason why many inveterate readers prefer locating their library in the living room.

Of course, readers don't consider books a part of the decor; they're simply a part of living, and a necessary ingredient to the livability of any area.

Starting from scratch in a new home, the business of designing and building the living room bookcases involves considerable market research, discussion, measuring and head-scratching. Should shelving team with the fireplace to form a single focal point, or stand elsewhere?

A GOOD IDEA that works even in a smallish space is to wrap the bookcases around one end of the room. With the addition of lounge chairs and reading lamps, the library corner then creates a room within a room.

This is cozy space that works by itself, but it also warms the formal area of the living room. Carefully chosen fabrics and colors for the lounge chairs will make even man-size models entirely compatible with the rest of the living room's furnishings.

For the bookcases themselves, few guidelines are needed. Always the best use of space is to build them wall-to-wall and floor-to-ceiling. If a heat outlet or cold air return is present, simply enclose it in the toe base.

ALL SHELVING, of course, should be adjustable. Generally the shelves themselves need be only the standard one-by-12 inch boards; they will handle everything from big art books to the unabridged dictionary. Actual dimensions of a one-by-12 are three-quarters by 11½ inches.

Good lumber species to use include Douglas fir, western hemlock, ponderosa pine and western larch. Clear, vertical grain boards offer greatest strength and best appearance.

Simplicity is the key to design. When solid lumber is used, no additional shelf edging is needed. However, the structural uprights separating sections of shelving can be edged with a flat one-by-two for accent.

Finishing is purely a matter of taste. In a room furnished with subtle, no-color neutrals, the accent of black paint can be both appropriate and dramatic. Otherwise, a touch of stain topped with several coats of tough, stain-finish plastic varnish is apt to be the most practical and pleasing.

TWO DIANA RIGGS

From Emma Peel To Bard's Helena

Diana Rigg has no "best side" as far as facial features are concerned, but she has two very different personality profiles — one, classical; the other, modern, provocative, lively and, in mod British, "very gear," as exemplified by her recent television portrayal of Emma Peel in "The Avengers."

The classical actress, of a stature that makes it difficult to believe that she could be the same judo-expert detective who romped through the Emma Peel portrayal, has had wide experience with the famed Royal Shakespeare Company. It is this Diana Rigg who plays Helena in the company's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to be telecast Sunday at 9 p.m. in color on Channels 5 and 10.

MISS RIGG joined the Royal Shakespeare Company (then the Shakespeare Memorial Theater Company) at Stratford-On-Avon in 1959. One of her greatest triumphs was in her present role of Helena in the 1962 production of the Shakespearean comedy.

As a member of the company, she was seen in the New York stage production of "King Lear." American television viewers also saw her in "The Comedy of Errors," produced in England by the BBC.

Miss Rigg is neither an op-art symbol nor a grande dame of the classical theater. Her clothes tastes run to simplicity, and she has the directness of her Yorkshire upbringing, the majesty and independence of Britannia and the Statue of Liberty rolled into one, and witty sense of humor.

DIANA RIGG is Diana Rigg. The fact that she has resolutely stuck to this most untheatrical of names is an indication of her independence.

The chestnut-haired actress was born in Doncaster, Yorkshire, England, but spent part of her early life in India where her father was with the Indian government service. She and her parents then returned to Yorkshire to settle in Leeds where her father became works manager of an engineering firm.

The odds were against her becoming an actress. She thanks a school teacher, Sylvia Greenwood, for launching her on her thespian career. Miss Rigg went to a Quaker school where the headmaster strongly disapproved of anything theatrical. Mrs. Greenwood, a teacher at the school, disagreed with him, however, and her persistence eventually led to her forming a drama department — though the headmaster never did recognize it officially.

"MRS. GREENWOOD was a brilliant dramatic coach with a great capacity for engendering enthusiasm for the stage among her pupils," recalls Miss Rigg. "I owe everything to her."

Following study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, Miss Rigg succeeded in getting work in repertory, but not without difficulty. For example her height, five feet eight inches, was against her at first. Eventually it became an asset by enhancing her four-month career as a fashion model which, in turn, helped her to acquire her flair for wearing clothes.

IAN RICHARDSON as Oberon, left, works his magic on Michael Jayston as Demetrius and Diana Rigg as Helena, in this scene from the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of the comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Shakespearean play will be telecast Sunday at 9 p.m. as a two-and-a-quarter-hour special on Channels 5 and 10.

After repertory work at Chesterfield and York, Miss Rigg went on to the Shakespeare Memorial Theater Company as a walk-on player. Her biggest break came when at two-days notice she took over the lead in "The Devils" with such success that she was signed to a five-year contract. For the next five years, she worked almost exclusively in the classics — in Shakespeare and in such productions as "Ondine," "Becket" and "The Physicists."

HER GREATEST acclaim came for her protrayal of Cordelia opposite Paul Scofield's "King Lear." She cast aside the traditional heroine portrayal to turn Cordelia into a resolute young Amazon.

Miss Rigg toured Europe and America and played before the British royal family in a special command performance of "The Comedy of Errors" at Windsor Castle. She showed every indication of devoting herself to the classical theater until she decided to seek wider fame in television and films. Nevertheless, she has returned to the Royal Shakespeare Company for further productions.

When talking about her apparently contradictory career, the actress points out that the term "classical actress" is often misconstrued. It doesn't necessarily mean heavy drama. Some of Shakespeare's greatest plays were comedies. These provide scope for the talents of a comedienne, and much of Miss Rigg's Shakespearean work has been in comedy.

Helena is one of the Bard's most enchanting heroines.

The all-Sheakespearean cast of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was directed by Peter Hall. Michael Birkett was producer of the special.

IMPROVE
HEARING AID
NOW—for most Hearing Aid makes and models!

NEW LOW-COST
ZENITH®
ACOUSTIC MODIFIER*
with exclusive sound channel,
SHARPENS YOUR WORD-UNDERSTANDING

*PATENT NO. 3,126,977

If you can hear conversation, but miss many of the words, the trouble may be with the ear-mold you're using. Replace it with Zenith's new, inexpensive Acoustic Modifier. The sound-channel makes the big difference. You have to hear it to believe it! Words are clearer, more distinct, so you understand more of every conversation you hear. Zenith's Acoustic Modifier is custom made, comfortably fitted to your ear.

Replace your old ear-mold at
